

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

COLLEGE SERIES OF LATIN AUTHORS

A

857,578

CICERO

LETTERS

ABBOTT

1817

PROPERTY OF
University of Michigan Libraries

1817

ARTES SCIENTIA VERITAS

100 pages
w. Ann Arbor
USA
Sept. 27 '50

Wich's Room

878
C7B
A13

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

COLLEGE SERIES OF LATIN AUTHORS

EDITED BY

CLEMENT LAWRENCE SMITH AND TRACY PECK

SELECTED LETTERS OF CICERO

F. F. ABBOTT

COLLEGE SERIES OF LATIN AUTHORS

SELECTED LETTERS OF CICERO

EDITED WITH INTRODUCTION AND NOTES

BY

FRANK FROST ABBOTT

KENNEDY PROFESSOR OF THE LATIN LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE IN PRINCETON UNIVERSITY

GINN AND COMPANY

BOSTON · NEW YORK · CHICAGO · LONDON
ATLANTA · DALLAS · COLUMBUS · SAN FRANCISCO

378
073
A13.

ENTERED AT STATIONERS' HALL

—————
COPYRIGHT, 1897, BY CLEMENT L. SMITH AND TRACY PECK

—————
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

PRINTED IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

346.10

The Athenæum Press
GINN AND COMPANY · PRO-PRIETORS · BOSTON · U.S.A.

Unpublished
Letters
6-28-00
1907

P R E F A C E .

CICERO'S letters are of such wide range and varied interest that it is an exceptionally difficult task to edit a limited number which shall be fairly representative of the whole, and it is hoped that those readers who fail to find some of their favorite letters in this volume will bear this difficulty in mind. The editor has chosen in particular the letters which Cicero wrote to the members of his own family and to his intimate friends upon personal subjects, in the hope of throwing as much light as possible upon Cicero's private character, his tastes, his daily life, and his relations with his personal and literary friends. At the same time it is hoped that letters bearing upon political matters have been included in sufficient number to present a good outline of Cicero's public life and of his times. The letters are arranged chronologically.

The text of the Epistulae ad familiares is that of Mendelssohn, with slight changes in a few passages generally recognized as corrupt and not readable. C. F. W. Müller's edition is the basis for the text of the Epistulae ad Quintum fratrem, and Wesenberg's for that of the Epistulae ad Atticum, Bks. I.-XI. and XIV.-XVI., but in very many cases the reading of the Medicean MS., which Wesenberg rejects, has been restored, and in certain other cases the more probable conjectures of Lehmann and others have been substituted for the emendations accepted by Wesenberg. The text of Bks. XII. and XIII. of the Epistulae ad Atticum is that of O. E. Schmidt. For further particulars the reader may consult the Introduction and the statement in the Critical Appendix.

The orthography has been, in general, conformed to the standards established by Brambach and by Georges in his Lexikon der lateinischen Wortformen.

In the Introduction and the Commentary attention has been directed in particular to the characteristics of epistolary and colloquial Latin. A full discussion of these peculiarities would have far transcended the limits of this book. The editor has therefore contented himself with a statement in the Introduction of the most important divergencies which the Letters show in lexicography, syntax, and style from the standard in those matters in formal Latin, and has supplemented this general statement by more detailed notes at the proper points in the Commentary.

The works which the editor has found of most service in the preparation of the Introduction and Commentary are mentioned in the list given on a subsequent page, and although his indebtedness is usually noted specifically in the Commentary, he feels under special obligation to the editions of Tyrrell, Watson, Süpfle-Böckel, and Hofmann-Andresen, and to the writings of O. E. Schmidt and Landgraf.

But, above all, the editor would gratefully acknowledge the deep obligation which he is under to Professors C. L. Smith and Tracy Peck, the editors-in-chief of this Series, for the careful criticism which they have given to this work while it has been passing through the press.

F. F. A.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS,
August 2, 1897.

CONTENTS.

ABBREVIATIONS	ix
ARRANGEMENT OF THE LETTERS	xi
1. Chronological	xi
2. According to the traditional books	xii
INTRODUCTION	xv
Cicero's public life and contemporary politics	xv
The private life of Cicero	xlii
Cicero's family and friends	xlviii
Letter writing	lii
Cicero's correspondence and its first publication	lvii
The language and style of Cicero's correspondence	lx
TEXT AND COMMENTARY	I
CRITICAL APPENDIX	291
GLOSSARY OF GREEK WORDS AND PHRASES	306
INDEX OF PROPER NAMES	309
INDEX TO THE NOTES	314

Omnes autem Ciceronis epistulas legendas censeo, mea sententia vel magis quam omnes eius orationes. Epistulis Ciceronis nihil est perfectius.

FRONTO ad Antoninum, II. 5.

ABBREVIATIONS USED MOST FREQUENTLY IN THE INTRODUCTION AND COMMENTARY.

- Att. = Epistulae ad Atticum.
Fam. = Epistulae ad familiares.
Caelius, Fam. = Letter of Caelius in the collection ad fam. (Letters by other writers indicated similarly.) Intr. = General introduction.
Arch. f. lat. Lex. = Archiv für lateinische Lexikographie.
Becher = F. Becher, Ueber d. Sprachgebrauch d. Caelius, Nordhausen, 1888.
Böckel = Süpfle-Böckel (Epistulae Selectae, 9th ed., Karlsruhe, 1885).
C. I. L. = Corpus inscriptionum Latinarum.
Gurlitt = L. Gurlitt, De M. Tulli Ciceronis epistulis earumque pristina collectione, Göttingen, 1879.
Herzog = E. Herzog, Geschichte u. System d. röm. Staatsverfassung, vols. I.-II., Leipzig, 1884-91.
Hofmann (or Andresen) = Ausgewählte Briefe, Berlin, 1884-85. Vol I.⁵ by Hofmann, vol. II.² by Andresen.
Hofmann krit. Apparat = F. Hofmann, Der kritische Apparat zu Ciceros Briefen an Atticus, Berlin, 1862.
Landgraf = G. Landgraf, Bemerkungen zum sermo cotidianus in den Briefen Ciceros u. an Cicero, in Blätter f. d. bayerische Gymnasialwesen, 1880, pp. 274-280 and 317-331.
Madvig = J. N. Madvig, Die Verfassung u. Verwaltung d. röm. Staates, Leipzig, 1882.
Manutius = Paulli Manutii Commentarius, Leipzig, 1779-80.
Mendelssohn = L. Mendelssohn, M. Tulli Ciceronis Epistularum libri sedecim, Leipzig, 1893.
Meyer = P. Meyer, De Ciceronis in epistolis ad Atticum sermone, Bayreuth, 1887.
Rauschen = G. Rauschen, Ephemerides Tullianae, Bonn, 1886.
Rebling = O. Rebling, Versuch einer Charakteristik d. röm. Umgangssprache, Kiel, 1883.

- Ruete = E. Ruete, Die Correspondenz Ciceros in den Jahren 44 u. 43, Marburg, 1883.
- Schmalz, Z. f. G. w. = J. H. Schmalz in Zeitschrift f. d. Gymnasialwesen.
- Schmidt, Briefw. = O. E. Schmidt, Der Briefwechsel d. M. Tullius Cicero, Leipzig, 1893.
- Schmidt, Handschr. = O. E. Schmidt, Die handschriftliche Ueberlieferung d. Briefe Ciceros an Atticus, Q. Cicero, M. Brutus in Italien, Leipzig, 1887.
- Schmidt, Kämpfe = O. E. Schmidt, Die letzten Kämpfe d. röm. Republik, Leipzig, 1884.
- Sternkopf = W. Sternkopf, Quaestiones chronologicae, Marburg, 1884, and Zur Chronologie u. Erklärung d. Briefe Ciceros aus. d. Jahren 48 u. 47, Dortmund, 1891.
- Stinner = A. Stinner, De eo quo Cicero in epistolis usus est sermone, Oppeln, 1879.
- Tyrrell = R. Y. Tyrrell, The Correspondence of M. Tullius Cicero, vols. I.–VII., Dublin, 1884–1900.
- Watson = A. Watson, Cicero, Select Letters, 3d ed., Oxford, 1881.
- Willems = P. Willems, Le Sénat de la République Romaine, vols. I.–III., Louvain, 1883.

THE ORDER OF THE LETTERS.

THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT.	THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT.	THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT
I	Att. 1. 1	XXX	Att. 5. 1	LIX	Fam. 14. 20
II	" 1. 2	XXXI	Fam. 8. 1	LX	" 9. 1
III	Fam. 5. 7	XXXII	" 13. 1	LXI	" 9. 16
IV	" 7. 23	XXXIII	" 2. 8	LXII	" 9. 18
V	Att. 1. 16	XXXIV	" 15. 4	LXIII	" 9. 20
VI	" 1. 17	XXXV	Att. 6. 1	LXIV	" 9. 17
VII	" 2. 19	XXXVI	Fam. 2. 11	LXV	" 6. 6
VIII	" 2. 22	XXXVII	" 15. 5	LXVI	" 6. 14
IX	" 2. 23	XXXVIII	" 15. 6	LXVII	" 9. 15
X	" 3. 4	XXXIX	" 16. 4	LXVIII	Att. 12. 11
XI	Fam. 14. 4	XL	" 16. 6	LXIX	Att. 12. 1
XII	Att. 3. 12	XLI	" 16. 9	LXX	Fam. 15. 17
XIII	Fam. 14. 2	XLII	" 16. 11	LXXI	" 13. 72
XIV	Att. 3. 22	XLIII	" 14. 14	LXXII	Att. 12. 16
XV	" 4. 1	XLIV	Att. 8. 12D	LXXIII	Fam. 9. 11
XVI	Q.fr. 2. 3	XLV	" 8. 3	LXXIV	Att. 12. 32
XVII	Att. 4. 4B	XLVI	" 8. 13	LXXV	Fam. 4. 5
XVIII	Fam. 5. 12	XLVII	" 9. 6A	LXXVI	" 4. 6
XIX	" 7. 1	XLVIII	Fam. 8. 15	LXXVII	" 5. 14
XX	Q.fr. 2. 9 (11)	XLIX	Att. 9. 11A	LXXVIII	" 4. 12
XXI	Fam. 7. 5	L	Fam. 8. 16	LXXIX	" 5. 15
XXII	Q.fr. 2. 15 (16)	LI	" 2. 16	LXXX	" 9. 8
XXIII	" 3. 5, 6	LII	" 9. 9	LXXXI	" 7. 24
XXIV	Fam. 7. 16	LIII	" 14. 12	LXXXII	" 7. 25
XXV	" 7. 10	LIV	" 14. 19	LXXXIII	Att. 13. 52
XXVI	" 7. 18	LV	" 14. 17	LXXXIV	Fam. 13. 50
XXVII	" 16. 16	LVI	" 14. 8	LXXXV	" 6. 15
XXVIII	" 7. 15	LVII	" 14. 11	LXXXVI	" 11. 1
XXIX	" 3. 2	LVIII	" 14. 15	LXXXVII	" 9. 14

THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT.	THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT.	THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT.
LXXXVIII	Att. 15. 11	XCIII	Fam. 16. 26	XCVII	Fam. 11. 9
LXXXIX	Fam. 7. 22	XCIV	" 9. 24	XCVIII	" 10. 15
XC	" 16. 21	XCV	" 12. 5	XCIX	" 11. 12
XCI	" 11. 27	XCVI	" 10. 12	C	" 10. 24
XCII	" 11. 28

EPISTVLAE AD FAMILIARES.

ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT.	THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT.	THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT.	THIS EDITION.
Fam. 2. 8	XXXIII	Fam. 8. 1	XXXI	Fam. 13. 50	LXXXIV
" 2. 11	XXXVI	" 8. 15	XLVIII	" 13. 72	LXXI
" 2. 16	LI	" 8. 16	L	" 14. 2	XIII
" 3. 2	XXIX	" 9. 1	LX	" 14. 4	XI
" 4. 5	LXXV	" 9. 8	LXXX	" 14. 8	LVI
" 4. 6	LXXVI	" 9. 9	LII	" 14. 11	LVII
" 4. 12	LXXVIII	" 9. 11	LXXXIII	" 14. 12	LIII
" 5. 7	III	" 9. 14	LXXXVII	" 14. 14	XLIII
" 5. 12	XVIII	" 9. 15	LXVII	" 14. 15	LVIII
" 5. 14	LXXVII	" 9. 16	LXI	" 14. 17	LV
" 5. 15	LXXIX	" 9. 17	LXIV	" 14. 19	LIV
" 6. 6	LXV	" 9. 18	LXII	" 14. 20	LIX
" 6. 14	LXVI	" 9. 20	LXIII	" 15. 4	XXXIV
" 6. 15	LXXXV	" 9. 24	XCIV	" 15. 5	XXXVII
" 7. 1	XIX	" 10. 12	XCVI	" 15. 6	XXXVIII
" 7. 5	XXI	" 10. 15	XCVIII	" 15. 17	LXX
" 7. 10	XXV	" 10. 24	C	" 16. 4	XXXIX
" 7. 15	XXVIII	" 11. 1	LXXXVI	" 16. 6	XL
" 7. 16	XXIV	" 11. 9	XCVII	" 16. 9	XLI
" 7. 18	XXVI	" 11. 12	XCIX	" 16. 11	XLII
" 7. 22	LXXXIX	" 11. 27	XCI	" 16. 16	XXVII
" 7. 23	IV	" 11. 28	XCII	" 16. 21	XC
" 7. 24	LXXXI	" 12. 5	XCV	" 16. 26	XCIII
" 7. 25	LXXXII	" 13. 1	XXXII

EPISTVLAE AD ATTICVM.

ORDINARY ARRANGE- MENT.	THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGE- MENT.	THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGE- MENT.	THIS EDITION
Att. 1. 1	I	Att. 3. 22	XIV	Att. 9. 6A	XLVII
" 1. 2	II	" 4. 1	XV	" 9. 11A	XLIX
" 1. 16	V	" 4. 4B	XVII	" 12. 1	LXIX
" 1. 17	VI	" 5. 1	XXX	" 12. 11	LXVIII
" 2. 19	VII	" 6. 1	XXXV	" 12. 16	LXXII
" 2. 22	VIII	" 8. 3	XLV	" 12. 32	LXXXIV
" 2. 23	IX	" 8. 12D	XLIV	" 13. 52	LXXXIII
" 3. 4	X	" 8. 13	XLVI	" 15. 11	LXXXVIII
" 3. 12	XII

EPISTVLAE AD QVINTVM FRATREM.

ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT.	THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT.	THIS EDITION.	ORDINARY ARRANGEMENT.	THIS EDITION.
Q. fr. 2. 3	XVI	Q. fr. 2. 15 (16)	XXII	Q. fr. 3. 5, 6	XXIII
" 2. 9 (11)	XX

INTRODUCTION.

CICERO'S PUBLIC LIFE AND CONTEMPORARY POLITICS

I. CICERO'S EARLY LIFE AND THE CURSUS HONORUM.

(Act. 1-44. B.C. 106-63. Epist. 1.-11.)

1. M. Tullius Cicero was born at Arpinum, Jan. 3, 106 B.C.¹ His father's family removed to Rome while Cicero was still a boy,² and here, like other boys of the period, Cicero pursued the study of Greek and Latin literature, rhetoric, and, somewhat later, philosophy and jurisprudence. His studies were interrupted in 89 B.C. by a year's service in the Social War,³ but at its close they were taken up again with his old vigor. His chosen profession was that of the law, and in 81 B.C. he made his first appearance at the bar in defending P. Quinctius. A far more important event was his defense of Sex. Roscius of Ameria in the following year. Some political significance attaches to the trial, as Cicero's real antagonist, Chrysogonus,⁴ was a favorite of the dictator Sulla.

2. Possibly to escape the consequent displeasure of Sulla, but more probably for the sake of his health, Cicero left Rome and spent nearly two years at Athens, Rhodes, and in Asia Minor,⁵ being mainly engaged in the study of

¹ Brutus, 161; Att. 7. 5. 3.

² Cicero, when a boy, met Archias at Rome; pro Arch. 1.

³ Philipp 12. 27.

⁴ pro Sex. Rosc. 6.

⁵ Brutus, 314-6.

philosophy and oratory. Cicero's study of philosophy during this period determined his subsequent philosophical attitude, while his work under Molon of Rhodes enabled him to cultivate a less florid style of oratory than that which characterized his earlier orations. At Athens he also made the acquaintance of T. Pomponius Atticus.¹

3. Cicero's marriage to Terentia, a woman of some property and of good family, must have taken place soon after his return to Rome, or just before his departure from the city.² Two years after his return, in 76 B.C., he was quaestor, and had charge of Western Sicily, with Lilybaeum as his headquarters. His achievements in Sicily made little impression at Rome,³ but the intimate acquaintance which he gained with the island and its people served him in good stead when he made his first real appearance in politics six years later as the prosecutor of Verres.

Verres, who had been governor of Sicily from 73 to 71 B.C., was charged by the Sicilians with extortion and cruelty. Cicero, who conducted the prosecution, presented the facts in such a masterly way that Hortensius, the advocate of Verres, withdrew from the case, and Verres himself went into exile.⁴

4. His prosecution of Verres as well as his defense of Roscius Amerinus (80 B.C.) and of Cornelius Sulla (in 62 B.C.) have caused much discussion of Cicero's political tendencies during this early period. All three of these cases had a pronounced political character, and in all three Cicero was the advocate of democratic interests. He defended Roscius against the attacks of Sulla's favorite, during the lifetime of that champion of the aristocratic cause. He prosecuted Verres without mercy, although Verres was

¹ de Fin. 5. 1.

³ pro Plancio, 64, 65.

² Tullia was betrothed in 66 B.C.

⁴ Plutarch, Cic. 7, 8; in Verr. 2.

Cf. Att. 1. 3. 3.

2. 192.

backed by the entire senatorial party, which felt that its prestige and its privileges were at stake in the trial. He defended Cornelius Sulla against the charge of having taken part in the Catilinarian conspiracy, although it is probable that Sulla at least sympathized with the purposes of the democratic leader.¹ It may be said, and perhaps with truth, that in all three cases Cicero appeared as a lawyer and not in any sense as a politician. We cannot help feeling, however, that in Cicero's day, as would be the case in our own time, in a legal contest involving political interests, the advocates on either side of the question must have belonged in most instances to the political party whose interests would be promoted by the success of that side. What could be more natural than that Cicero, belonging to the equestrian class, whose rights and privileges had been so seriously curtailed in the aristocratic reaction of Sulla, should oppose the aristocracy at some points? The aid which his action gave to the democratic cause does not, however, stamp him as a democrat.

5. As a candidate for the aedileship for 69 B.C., and for the praetorship for 66 B.C., Cicero led all of his rivals at the polls.² Both offices he filled with distinction, and although as praetor he showed, as in earlier years, slight democratic tendencies,³ his personal integrity and his intimate knowledge of the law made his administration of the office wise and honorable. Throughout this period, even during his incumbency of the two offices just mentioned, Cicero followed unremittingly his profession of the law, appearing in defense, among others, of Fonteius, Caecina, and Cluentius.

6. The personal admiration which Cicero felt for Pompey, his political sympathy with that leader, and perhaps his

¹ pro Sulla, 7. 22; de Off. 2.
29; Fam. 15. 17. 2.

² in Pison. 2; de leg. Manil. 2.

³ Herzog, I. p. 538.

desire to link his own fortunes with those of Pompey, led Cicero to approve of the Gabinian law,¹ and to lend his active support to the Manilian law in 66 B.C. In supporting the latter measure Cicero delivered his first political speech, and notwithstanding the united opposition of the Optimates, who appreciated the danger which threatened the oligarchical principles and policy from placing such autocratic power in the hands of a single man, the bill became a law.

7. At the conclusion of his praetorship Cicero declined a province,² and devoted all his energy to his candidacy for the consulship. Cicero's political attitude underwent a slight change in the two or three years preceding his consulship. He had never been an out and out democrat, but had opposed the abuses of the aristocratic system rather than that system in its entirety. The subsidence of that spirit of opposition which often characterizes youth, his political ambitions, and the growth of a radical faction in the democratic party with anarchical tendencies, all conspired to draw him nearer to the Optimates. Both Marcus and his brother Quintus felt that the support of the senatorial party was essential, and that all suspicion of a democratic leaning on the part of Marcus must be removed, as is indicated by a significant passage in a political pamphlet which Quintus addressed to his brother at this time: *Hi rogandi omnes sunt diligenter et ad eos adlegendum est persuadendumque iis nos semper cum optimatibus de re publica sensisse, minime popularis fuisse; si quid locuti populariter videamur, id nos eo consilio fecisse, ut nobis Cn. Pompeium adiungeremus,*³ etc. The Optimates at first saw in Cicero only the novus homo, the prosecutor of Verres, and the advocate of the Manilian law⁴; but the revolutionary pur-

¹ de leg. Manil. 52

² pro Mur. 42.

³ de Pet. Cons. 5.

⁴ Cf. note on nobiles homines, Epist. II.

poses of Catiline and his party drove the aristocracy to the support of Cicero, and he was elected by a good majority with C. Antonius as his colleague.

8. Throughout his consulship Cicero's policy was that of a moderate member of the senatorial party. He opposed the proposition made by the tribune, Rullus, to divide the ager publicus in Campania; he opposed a measure to relieve the children of those proscribed by Sulla; he defended the law of Otho which reserved certain seats in the theatre to the knights; he defended C. Rabirius on the charge of murder brought against him by the democrats,¹ and he suppressed the Catilinarian conspiracy; but it was significant of the future that, when Cicero retired at the end of this year of office, the tribune Q. Metellus Nepos forbade him to make a parting speech² on the ground that in punishing the Catilinarian conspirators he had put Roman citizens to death without a trial.

II. CICERO, CLODIUS, AND THE TRIUMVIRS.

(Aet. 45-48. B.C. 62-59. Epist. III.-IX.)

9. The year 62 B.C. opened with a series of bitter attacks upon the senate by Pompey's tool, the tribune Metellus Nepos, supported by the praetor C. Julius Caesar. Against Cicero, his consulship, and the execution of the conspirators, Metellus made his fiercest onslaughts,³ but the Optimates were too strong for their opponents. Metellus fled to Pompey⁴ for protection and Caesar was forbidden for a time to administer the duties of his office.⁵ It was during this period of political uproar that Cicero delivered one of the most charming of his orations, in defending the claim to citizenship of his old friend and teacher, Archias.

¹ Att. 2. 1. 3.

² Fam. 5. 2. 7.

³ Fam. 5. 2. 8; Dio Cassius, 37. 42.

⁴ Plut. Cat. Min. 29.

⁵ Suet. Iul. 16.

10. In December of this year, while Caesar was absent in Spain, a festival was held at his house in honor of the goddess Bona Dea, which it was unlawful for men to attend ; but during the meeting, P. Clodius, a patrician, was found to be present in disguise (cf. Epist. V.). A judicial investigation of the matter was made, but Clodius secured an acquittal through the kind offices of Crassus, who bribed a majority of the jurors. Cicero does not seem to have taken an active part in the discussion of the Clodian matter in the senate,¹ but when, in the trial, Clodius attempted to establish an alibi by offering evidence to prove that he was at Interamna, ninety miles from Rome, at the time of the sacrilege, Cicero went on the witness stand and testified that he had seen Clodius in Rome within three hours of the time he claimed to have been at Interamna.²

The anger of Clodius was aroused still more by the humiliation which he suffered in debate at Cicero's hands,³ so that henceforth he thought of little else than avenging himself upon Cicero. The clash between Clodius and the senate, and the desire which Clodius felt to injure Cicero, threw Clodius into the arms of the democratic party, so that the affair, which at the outset was a purely personal one, developed into a political antagonism.⁴

11. In Jan., 61 B.C., before the trial of Clodius took place, Pompey returned from the East. Both the senatorial party and the democratic party were anxious to secure his support ; but, with that fatuity which characterized his conduct so often, he satisfied neither faction. The senate, however, found an opportunity to punish him for his coldness toward them by declining either to ratify his arrangements in the

¹ Att. 1. 16 (Epist. V.).

³ Att. 1. 16. 10 (Epist. V.).

² Att. 2. 1. 5 ; Schol. Bob. p. 330,
15 ff. ed. Or.

⁴ For another view, cf. Beesly, Catiline, Clodius, and Tiberius.

East or to give the accustomed gratuities to his veterans ; but his hopes for the next year were raised by the election of his adherent, L. Afranius, to the consulship for 60 B.C. Clodius had been absent for a year as quaestor in Sicily, and Cicero, although not foreseeing definitely the danger which threatened him, looked forward with some anxiety to the return of Clodius.

12. A variety of causes conspired in 60 B.C. to weaken the conservative party. The knights, who farmed a large part of Rome's provincial revenues, finding that they had made their bids too high, wished to cancel their contracts.¹ The senate would not give its consent. It also passed a measure to investigate the bribery of the jury in the Clodian trial, and as many of the suspected jurors were equites, that class regarded the measure as a political attack upon themselves.¹ The senatorial party was also weakened by the death of one of its most judicious leaders, Q. Catulus, in the spring of 60 B.C.,² by the indifference of others, like Lucullus, and by the ascendancy of extremists like Cato and Favonius.³

13. It was under these circumstances that Caesar returned, fresh from his victories in Spain, to sue for the consulship. Pompey had won from the senate nothing but a triumph, and willingly made common cause with Caesar. The coalition was strengthened by the addition of Crassus, and thus, in the summer of 60 B.C., the so-called First Triumvirate was secretly formed.⁴

The triumvirs carried out the first item in their programme by the election of Caesar to the consulship for 59 B.C., but with Bibulus,⁵ an extreme aristocrat, as his colleague ; and notwithstanding the violent opposition of Bibu-

¹ Att. 1. 17. 8-10 (Epist. VI.).

³ Att. 2. 1. 8.

² Att. 1. 20. 3.

⁴ Vell. Paterc. 2. 44.

⁵ Suet. Iul. 19.

lus and the Optimates, Caesar secured the passage of an agrarian law¹ and bills ratifying Pompey's arrangements in the East,² while the people, under the leadership of the tribune P. Vatinius, approved a bill assigning to Caesar, from Mar. 1, 59 B.C., the provinces of Cisalpine Gaul and Illyricum, with an army of three legions for five years, to which the senate, apparently of its own motion, added Transalpine Gaul and a fourth legion.³

14. After the return of Caesar, Cicero took little part in politics. He did not sympathize with the uncompromising attitude of the senate, he was hurt by the coldness of Pompey towards himself, and disappointed by that leader's selfish aims. While appreciating the irresistible power of the Triumvirate, he saw a ray of hope in the apparent unpopularity of the triumvirs,⁴ whose rule, he believed, could not last long. Clodius continued straight on toward his cherished purpose of avenging himself upon Cicero. With that end in view he caused himself to be adopted by a plebeian, Fonteius, and secured an election as tribune for the year 58.

Cicero would seem to have been blind to his own danger. He knew of the enmity of Clodius, but did not fear him, so that he made no opposition to his adoption or his election, and as late as Nov., 59 B.C., writes in a confident way of the future.⁵ The conduct of Caesar, who appreciated Cicero's danger, was most generous. He offered Cicero the position of legatus in Gaul.⁶ This offer, however, Cicero declined, as well as that of a legatio libera,⁶ and a position on the commission to divide the public land in Campania.⁷

¹ Att. 2. 16. 1 f.; 2. 18. 2; Vell. Paterc. 2. 44.

² Dio Cass. 38. 7.

³ Dio Cass. 38. 8; Suet. Iul. 22.

⁴ Att. 2. 19. 3 (Epist. VII.).

⁵ Q. fr. 1. 2. 16 and concluding note to Epist. IX.

⁶ Att. 2. 18. 3.

⁷ Att. 2. 19. 4 (Epist. VII.).

III. CICERO'S BANISHMENT AND RECALL.

(Aet. 49-50. B.C. 58-57. Epist. X.-XIV.)

15. Clodius skilfully prepared the way for an attack upon Cicero by securing the passage of certain popular measures, and, having gained the support of the consuls A. Gabinius and L. Piso, between Mar. 20 and 25, 58 B.C.,¹ he secured the adoption of a bill enacting : *qui civem Romanum indemnatum interemisset, ei aqua et igni interdiceretur.*² The principle of this bill was not new, and no one was mentioned in it by name, but Cicero knew that it was directed against himself. There can be little doubt that, in view of the Porcian and Sempronian laws, the execution of Lentulus and his fellow-conspirators, who were not allowed to make an appeal to the people, was unconstitutional. Cicero's plea, that the passage of the senatus consultum ultimum suspended this privilege, and that Lentulus and the others, by conspiring with the Allobroges, had lost their right as citizens, is not a sufficient answer. At all events, Cicero's cause was a hopeless one. The senators and knights were powerless, the consuls would give no help, and the triumvirs were not loath to have Cicero and Cato, who was at this time sent to Cyprus on a difficult mission, removed from the city before Caesar's departure.

16. This state of things had induced Cicero to withdraw from the city before the law of Clodius was passed, and soon after his departure the latter promulgated another proposition in the following form : *velitis iubeatis ut M. Tullio aqua et igni interdictum sit.*³ This bill, with the subsequent modification that the interdiction should hold good within a limit of 400 miles,⁴ was adopted about Apr. 20.⁵ Cicero's

¹ Upon sections 15, 16, cf. Cicero's Journey into Exile, by C. L. Smith in Harvard Studies, vol. VII, pp. 65-84.

² Vell. Patern. 2. 45.

³ De Dom. 47.

⁴ Cf. Att. 3. 4, notes (Epist. X.)

⁵ Cf. Rauschen, p. 7; Smith, p. 79

house upon the Palatine was torn down, and a portion of the site was consecrated to Liberty. His property elsewhere was despoiled, and Terentia was forced to seek protection with her half-sister Fabia.

17. After lingering for a time in Italy, Cicero went to Thessalonica, where he remained for several months as the guest of his friend, the quaestor Cn. Plancius. He was in a very despondent condition,¹ as all the efforts which his friends made to secure his recall were thwarted by Clodius. The year 57 B.C. opened under better auspices. The consuls P. Lentulus Spinther and Metellus Nepos were friendly, and the tribunes were in the main Cicero's supporters; but all this might have accomplished little, had it not been for the fact that Pompey, who had taken offense at Clodius, actively supported the cause of Cicero. At last, Aug. 4, a law was passed in the comitia centuriata authorizing Cicero's return.² Cicero had already come to Dyrrachium in Nov., 58 B.C., in order that he might receive news more quickly, and Aug. 4, 57 B.C., he sailed for Brundisium. He was received most enthusiastically in the towns through which he passed on his way to Rome, and in Rome itself, which he reached Sept. 4,³ after an absence of a year and a half.

IV. UNDER THE TRIUMVIRATE.

(Aet. 51-55. B.C. 56-52. Epist. XV.-XXVIII.)

18. Circumstances at this time conspired to raise the political hopes of Cicero and the Optimates. The people in Rome and throughout Italy had shown great delight on the occasion of Cicero's return. His recall was not only a personal victory for him, but also a political victory for the Optimates. Through the favorable action of the pontifices, Cicero had recovered his building site on the Palatine and damages for the loss of his house and villas. The unanimous acquittal, in Mar., 56 B.C., of P. Sestius, Cicero's foremost champion in 57 B.C., who was prosecuted on a charge de ambitu et de vi, was a decided triumph for Cicero and the Boni.¹ Furthermore, there was a lack of harmony in the party of the triumvirs. Emboldened by this state of things, the senate, on Apr. 5, 56 B.C., adopted Cicero's motion ut de agro Campano . . . Idibus Maiis referretur.² The law at which this motion to reconsider was directed was Caesar's agrarian law of 59 B.C., assigning lands in Campania to Pompey's veterans. Success in repealing this law would also undoubtedly lead to an attack upon all the legislation of the year 59 B.C.

¹ Cf. Intr. to Att. 3.4 (Epist. X.), and, in general, Att. Bk. 3 and Fam. Bk. 14.

² Att. 4. 1. 4.

³ Att. 4. 1. 5.

19. The sequel of his motion in the senate is best told by Cicero himself (Fam. 1. 9. 9): Quem (i.e. Quintum) cum in Sardinia Pompeius, paucis post diebus quam Luca (the place of conference with Caesar) discesserat, convenisset, 'te,' inquit, 'ipsum cupio; nihil opportunius potuit accidere: nisi cum Marco fratre diligenter egeris, dependendum tibi est, quod mihi pro illo spondidisti.' Quid multa? questus est graviter; sua merita commemoravit; quid egisset saepissime de actis Caesaris cum ipso meo fratre quidque sibi is de me recepisset, in memoriam redegit seque, quae de mea salute egisset, voluntate Caesaris egisse ipsum meum fratrem testatus est: cuius causam dignitatemque mihi ut commendaret, rogavit, ut eam ne oppugnanem, si nollem aut non possem tueri. This important passage furnishes the explanation of that remarkable change which Cicero's political attitude underwent in 56 B.C. Quintus had promised Pompey that his brother, if recalled, would not oppose the triumvirs. As a man of honor,

¹ Q. fr. 2. 4. 1.

² Fam. 1. 9. 8.

Marcus could not but recognize the binding force of this promise made in his behalf—made, though it was, in a moment of weakness and despair. To this consideration must also be added Cicero's positive gratitude for Pompey's services in securing his recall, and his recognition of the power of the triumvirs to punish him severely if he persisted in his independent course. Cicero withdrew his motion,¹ and, for the next five years, gave up all opposition to the plans of the triumvirs. Other circumstances conspired to make this the only feasible course for Cicero to pursue. The policy of the Optimates was hopelessly selfish and headstrong, while they themselves showed that petty jealousy of Cicero which had characterized their conduct on many previous occasions²; and finally, when Quintus Cicero took service with Caesar in 54 B.C.,³ political opposition to Caesar might have proved the ruin of Quintus.

These circumstances may justify Cicero's failure to oppose the triumvirs, but they cannot fully excuse the subservient attitude which he assumed toward them from the summer of ✓ 56 to the close of 52 B.C., notably, in defending Vatinius at Caesar's request⁴ and Gabinius at Pompey's,⁵ in 54 B.C., and in heaping praises upon Caesar in his oration de Prov. Cons., in 56 B.C. Cicero's own statement in Fam. 1. 9, of his attitude during this period should be read in this connection.

20. The compact between Caesar, Pompey, and Crassus was renewed at Luca in Apr., 56 B.C.,⁶ and, in accordance with its terms, Pompey and Crassus were elected to the consulship for the following year, and, during their term of office, secured the passage of laws assigning Spain to

¹ Q. fr. 2. 6. 2.

⁴ Fam. 1. 9. 19.

² Att. 4. 2. 5.

⁵ Q. fr. 3. 1. 15; Pro. Rab. Post

³ Q. fr. 2. 10 (12). 4.

32.

⁶ Q. fr. 2. 5. 3; Suet. Jul. 24.

Pompey¹ and Syria to Crassus² for five years, and prolonging Caesar's proconsulship for the same period.

Cicero took little part in politics during the years 55 and 54 B.C., and his letters exhibit his discouragement in regard to them.³ They indicate, however, the growth of a cordial feeling between him and Caesar.⁴ Much of Cicero's attention was given to literature. To this period belong the De Oratore, the De Re Publica,⁵ and several speeches; among them, one in defense of Cn. Plancius, who received Cicero so generously at Thessalonica during the latter's exile.

21. The violence and disorder, with their accompaniment of bribery and political intrigue,⁶ which had prevailed almost uninterruptedly from midsummer of the year 54 B.C., reached its climax in Jan., 52 B.C., in a riotous contest between the followers of Clodius and Milo, which resulted in the death of the former,⁷ and, as a last resort, Pompey was elected sole consul on the 24th of the intercalary month of this year.⁸ This sudden elevation to extraordinary power completed the separation of Pompey from Caesar.

Several circumstances which occurred during the previous two years had paved the way for this result. First of all the death of Julia, Caesar's daughter and Pompey's wife, in 54 B.C.,⁹ and the subsequent refusal of Pompey to enter into another family alliance with Caesar, severed a link which had bound the two men together; but a still more important factor was the defeat and death of Crassus in the East in 53 B.C.¹⁰ The indefinite continuance of a triumvirate was possible, but the existence of a duumvirate was impossible,

¹ Plut. Cat. Min. 43; Pomp. 52.

² Plut. Cat. Min. 43; Liv. Epit. 105.

³ E.g. Q. fr. 3. 9. 1 f.

⁴ Q. fr. 2. 13 (15a). 1; 3. 5 (and 6). 3.

⁵ Att. 4. 13. 2; Q. fr. 3. 5. 1.

⁶ Q. fr. 3. 3. 2.

⁷ Ascon. in Milon. p. 32; Dio Cass. 40. 48-50.

⁸ Ascon. in Milon. p. 37; Liv. Epit. 107.

⁹ Liv. Epit. 106; Dio Cass. 39. 64.

¹⁰ Liv. Epit. 106.

and the time seemed to Pompey ripe for strengthening himself and humbling his rival. He was practically dictator in Rome, and still retained his governorship of Spain, while his rival, Caesar, was far away in Gaul, engaged with Vercingetorix, his bravest and ablest enemy, in a life and death struggle,¹ which might end with him as the Parthian campaign had ended with Crassus.

After assuming office Pompey secured the passage of laws imposing heavier penalties for bribery and violence,² prolonging his proconsulship of Spain for five years,³ and a law de iure magistratum,⁴ providing that candidates for office must appear in person a certain number of days before the election, and that those who had held office in Rome must wait five years before assuming the government of a province. Caesar was, however, exempted from the operation of the first clause of this law by a special measure,⁵ and also by a provision unconstitutionally appended to the law itself as an afterthought by Pompey.⁶ The second provision in the law was, however, intended to bring Caesar low. Even if he should succeed in securing an election to the consulship, it would be easy, after his term of office had expired, to prosecute him and to convict him of using violence in his candidacy for the consulship in 60 B.C., under the new law de vi, which was retroactive.

V. THE PROCONSULSHIP.

(Aet. 56-57. B.C. 51-50. Epist. XXIX-XLI.)

22. The law de iure magistratum, which made it incumbent upon those who had held office at Rome to wait five years before assuming the government of a province, forced

¹ Caes. B. G. 7. 63-89.

² Ascon. in Milon. p. 37.

³ Plut. Pomp. 55.

⁴ Dio Cass. 40. 56.

⁵ Att. 8. 3. 3.

⁶ Suet. Iul. 28.

the senate to assign provinces to ex-officials who had not yet held governorships abroad. Cicero was one of the number, and to him the province of Cilicia was assigned in Mar., 51 B.C., much against his will.¹ He left Rome in the early part of May,² and, traveling by the way of Brundisium, Athens, and Ephesus, reached Laodicea, the first city of his province, July 31.³

23. He found affairs in his province, which included Cilicia, Pamphylia, Pisidia, Isauria, Lycaonia, and Cyprus, in a most unpromising condition. From without, a descent of the Parthians was threatened,⁴ which he must resist with a most inadequate force of only two legions, which were scattered throughout the province and demoralized by mutiny and the inefficiency of their officers.⁵ The condition of the provincials was still more disheartening. Appius Claudius, Cicero's predecessor, had practically turned over the provinces to Roman publicani and usurers,⁶ among the latter of whom M. Brutus figured conspicuously. From the outset Cicero set himself to work to remedy this state of things.⁷ He fixed the normal rate of interest at 12%, although Brutus had required in one instance 48%⁸; he prevented all extortion, he removed the money lenders' agents from official positions, and administered the law with justice and regularity.

24. In military matters he showed almost as much wisdom and efficiency. The mutinous troops were brought under discipline,⁹ while the justice of his government enabled him to augment his own troops with those of his allies. With this combined force he took the field in September. The victory

¹ Fam. 3. 2. 1.

² Att. 5. 1.

³ Att. 5. 16. 2.

⁴ Fam. 15. 4. 7 (Epist. XXXIV.).

⁵ Fam. 15. 4. 2 (Epist. XXXIV.).

⁶ Att. 5. 16. 2; 6. 2. 7-9.

⁷ Att. 5. 16. 3.

⁸ Att. 6. 2. 7.

⁹ Fam. 15. 4. 2 (Epist. XXXIV.).

which Cassius won over the Parthians near Antioch averted the threatened invasion of Cilicia, and Cicero directed his forces against the independent people near Mt. Amanus,¹ where, after a complete victory, he had the satisfaction of hearing himself saluted 'imperator' by his troops.²

25. Toward the end of Dec., 51 B.C., Cicero was in Tarsus and sent thence official letters to the consuls asking for a supplicatio,³ accompanied by a letter of similar purport to Cato, the senatorial leader.⁴ The senate voted the supplicatio,⁵ and, turning over his province to the quaestor Caelius Caldus, on July 30, Cicero set out on his homeward journey in high hopes of a triumph. There is no more honorable period in Cicero's life than that of his proconsulship in Cilicia ; and with the difficulties which he had to face, and the poor means at his disposal, his success as an administrator was highly creditable. The fact that he did not reorganize his province on a permanent basis, as Caesar reorganized Gaul, is to be attributed to the shortness of his tenure of office and the wretchedness of the aristocratic system of government, and not to Cicero's own inability or unwillingness. Cicero traveled slowly homeward by the way of Rhodes⁶ and Athens, accompanied by his brother, his son, his nephew, and his freedman Tiro, who was obliged to remain at Patrae on account of illness.⁷ On Nov. 24, 50 B.C., he reached Brundisium, where he was met by his wife Terentia.⁸ After a delay of several weeks at his villas near Naples, Cicero at last reached Rome, Jan. 4, 49 B.C.,⁹ after an absence from the city of a year and eight months.

¹ Fam. 15. 4. 8 (Epist. XXXIV.).

² Att. 5. 20. 3.

³ Fam. 15. 10 and 13.

⁴ Fam. 15. 4 (Epist. XXXIV.).

⁵ Fam. 8. 11. 2.

⁶ Fam. 2. 17. 1 ; 14. 5. 1.

⁷ Fam. 16. 1. 2.

⁸ Fam. 16. 9. 2.

⁹ Fam. 16. 11. 2.

VI. CAESAR OR POMPEY? ¹

(Aet. 58-59. B.C. 49-48. Epist. XLII.-LIII.)

26. Cicero, upon his arrival, found political affairs in a turmoil. The lex Vatinia of 59 B.C. (§ 13) had assigned Gallia Cisalpina and Illyricum to Caesar for a period of five years, dating from Mar. 1, 59 B.C.² By the lex Pompeia Licinia, passed in 55 B.C. (§ 20), Caesar's term of office was extended for a period of five years, — probably, therefore, to Mar. 1, 49 B.C.³ Special legislation of the year 52 B.C. had allowed Caesar to sue, in 49 B.C., for the consulship, without personally attending the canvass (§ 21). His successor in the provinces would not naturally begin his term of office until Jan. 1, 48 B.C., and in accordance with the regular practice in such cases, Caesar might count upon holding his provinces until that time, when he would pass from the provincial government to the consulship at Rome, and thus avoid the snares which his enemies at Rome would otherwise have set for him. But to frustrate this plan, M. Marcellus, the consul, a bitter opponent of Caesar, attempted on Dec. 10, 50 B.C. to induce the senate to pass the senatus consultum ultimum. Failing in this, he proceeded to Naples, and on his own motion requested Pompey to take charge of the legions near Luceria⁴ and defend the state. Pompey accepted the command of the legions.

27. This overt act hastened the course of events. On Dec. 21 Curio, Caesar's agent, left Rome to go to Caesar,⁵ and returned in time to present a formal ultimatum (cf.

¹ For a good statement of the events of this period, cf. Der Ausbruch des Bürgerkriegs, 49 v. Chr., by H. Nissen, in von Sybel's Historische Zeitschrift for 1881, pp. 48-105 and 409-445.

² Herzog, I. p. 552. n. 2.

⁴ Orosius, 6. 15; Cic. Att. 7.

³ Watson, pp. 287-290.

5. 4.

⁵ Schmidt, Briefw. p. 99.

Epist. XLII., intr.) to the senate Jan. 1, 49 B.C., when the consuls L. Lentulus Crus and C. Claudius Marcellus assumed office. Caesar's proposals were not accepted, and a resolution was passed declaring that he would be acting adversus rem publicam if he did not give up his army by July 1, 49 B.C.¹; and on Jan. 7 the *senatus consultum ultimum*² was passed, upon which the tribunes Antonius and Cassius,³ as well as Curio and Caelius, set out for Caesar's camp.

28. Cicero's position made him an eminently fit person to effect a compromise.⁴ He proposed that Pompey should go to Spain, and that Caesar should not be compelled to attend his canvass in person⁵; but his efforts were fruitless. On Jan. 10 Caesar crossed the Rubicon⁶ with five cohorts and marched toward Rome, taking Pisaurum, Fanum, and Ancona on his way. On Jan. 14 the senate passed the decretum tumultus,⁷ but the news of Caesar's rapid advance forced Pompey, the consuls, and senators to leave Rome,⁸ Jan. 17, and hurry southward.

29. Cicero left the city the same day. The senate had assigned the Campanian district to him, but he saw that little could be done,⁹ because the inhabitants of Campania had many of them received their lands through Caesar's law (§ 13). Furthermore he hoped for peace, and thought that neutrality on his part would best fit him to act as mediator between the opposing forces; and to maintain his neutral position, he gave up his appointment in Campania just before leaving the city, and took charge, in a civil capacity, of the Roman Campagna and the coast of Latium.¹⁰

¹ Cf. Caes. B. C. 1. 2. 6; 1. 9. 2.

² Caes. B. C. 1. 5.

³ Cf. nulla vi expulsi, Epist. XLII. 2 n.

⁴ Epist. XLII. intr.

⁵ Fam. 6. 6. 5, 6.

⁶ Schmidt, Briefw. p. 104. n. 2.

⁷ Schmidt, Briefw. p. 113.

⁸ Att. 9. 10. 4; Fam. 16. 12. 2.

⁹ Att. 8. 3. 4.

¹⁰ Att. 7. 11. 5; 8. 11d. 5; Schmidt, Briefw. pp. 116-120.

The Pompeians, after planning a rendezvous at Luceria,¹ hurried toward Brundisium, whither Pompey peremptorily summoned Cicero.² Nevertheless he remained in Formiae, hoping still to effect a reconciliation between Caesar and Pompey,³ and, with this hope in mind, he had an interview with Caesar at Formiae,⁴ Mar. 28. In this interview Caesar requested him to go to Rome and use his best efforts to secure peace, but when Cicero mentioned the terms which he should propose, Caesar refused to accept them.

30. This meeting put an end to his hesitation. He felt sure that all hope of a reconciliation was gone, as neither party would submit terms which the other could accept. Cicero has been often accused of indecision during this period, but unjustly so. In his opinion there was right and wrong with each party, and civil war was an evil to be avoided at all hazards. He used every possible means, therefore, to avert the catastrophe, but without success. Recognizing the inevitable, he cast in his lot with the man to whom he personally owed most ; for the choice lay, not between Caesar and the Republic, but between Caesar and Pompey ; nec mehercule hoc facio rei publicae causa, quam funditus deletam puto, sed ne quis me putet ingratum in eum qui me levavit iis incommodis (i.e. of exile) quibus idem adfecerat (Att. 9. 19. 2).

31. On June 7, 49 B.C., Cicero, accompanied by his brother, his son, and his nephew, sailed from Formiae to join Pompey near Dyrrachium,⁵ which place he reached, after stopping for several months on the estate of Atticus in Epirus, toward the close of the year 49 B.C., some eight

¹ Att. 8. 1. 1.

Att. 9. 11a (Epist. XLIX.), are of special interest in this connection.

² Att. 8. 11c.

³ Att. 9. 6a (Epist. XLVII.), and ⁴ Att. 9. 18. 1.

⁵ Fam. 14. 7. 2.

or nine months after the arrival of the Pompeian forces.¹ In the meantime Caesar, displaying extraordinary energy,² tact, and consideration,³ had made himself master of Italy, where he found the people kindly disposed toward him³, had restored order at Rome, had defeated the Pompeian lieutenants, Afranius, Petreius, and Varro, in Spain; and in Jan., 48 B.C., he crossed the Adriatic and began the offensive operations against Pompey which ended in the victory near Pharsalus, Aug. 9, 48 B.C. Pompey fled, but was murdered about three weeks later, while landing at Pelusium in Egypt.⁴

Cicero had been coldly received by the Pompeians at Dyrrachium,⁵ and had little to do with the preparation for the struggle.⁶ A serious indisposition also kept him at Dyrrachium, so that he was not present at the battle of Pharsalus.⁷

VII. UNDER CAESAR'S GOVERNMENT.

(Aet. 60-62. B.C. 47-45. Epist. LIV.-LXXXIV.)

32. After the battle of Pharsalus Cicero remained for a time at Corcyra⁸ and Patrae,⁹ and then decided to return to Italy. He reached Brundisium¹⁰ in Oct., 48 B.C., and stayed there until Sept., 47 B.C., passing one of the most miserable years of his life. He was distressed by both political and domestic anxieties. He had returned contrary to the express orders of Caesar, who had forbidden the Pompeians to enter Italy.¹¹ He was therefore a political fugitive in a city filled

¹ Schmidt, Briefw. pp. 183-4.

² Att. 8. 9. 4.

³ Att. 8. 13.

⁴ Caes. B. C. 3. 104.

⁵ Att. 11. 6. 6.

⁶ Att. 11. 4. 1.

⁷ Att. 11. 4. 2; Fam. 9. 18. 2; Plut. Cic. 39.

⁸ Att. 11. 5. 4.

⁹ Fam. 13. 17. 1.

¹⁰ Fam. 14. 12.

¹¹ Att. 11. 7. 2.

with hostile soldiers. At the same time Caesar's critical position in Egypt¹ made it quite possible that the Pompeian cause might succeed after all, in which case Cicero's standing would be still more precarious. His family affairs were equally distressing: Tullia, his daughter, was most unhappy with her husband Dolabella; Terentia's management of his property² during his absence had caused him a deal of vexation; an unfortunate misunderstanding had sprung up with his brother Quintus.³

33. Cicero's anxiety in regard to his own position was somewhat relieved in Sept., 47 B.C., by the arrival of Caesar, who generously gave him permission to remain in Italy.⁴ He went almost directly to Rome, and his letters in the main, up to the close of 46 B.C., were written either in that city or at his villas at Tusculum and Cumae. The battle of Thapsus was fought Apr. 6, 46 B.C., and by it Caesar's supremacy in Africa was established; but the tidings of this important battle and even of the violent deaths⁵ of the Pompeian leaders, Scipio, Petreius, Afranius, and Juba,⁶ do not seem to have stirred Rome so deeply as the news that Cato had taken his own life at Utica,⁷ feeling that the cause of the Republic was beyond hope. The little memoir which Cicero wrote of his personal and political friend⁸ called forth opposition pamphlets from the Caesarians, Hirtius⁹ and Brutus,¹⁰ and even Caesar found time on the eve of the battle of Munda to write an 'Anticato.'¹¹

34. Cicero gave much of his time to literature during this period. The Orator was written and the Brutus finished in

¹ Bell. Alex. 21, 22.

² Att. 11. 24. 3, etc.

³ Att. 11. 9. 3.

⁴ Plut. Cic. 39; Dio Cass. 46. 22.

⁵ Cf. Epist. LXII. 2 n.

⁶ Bell. Afr. 94-6.

⁷ Bell. Afr. 88.

⁸ Att. 12. 4. 2; 12. 5. 2

⁹ Att. 12. 40. 1.

¹⁰ Att. 12. 21. 1.

¹¹ Suet. Iul. 56.

46 B.C.¹ Although he attended the meetings of the senate, he took little active part in politics, save in working to secure the recall of some Pompeians who were still in exile. At one time Cicero hoped that Caesar would follow a conservative course and would at least restore the senate to its old position and influence, and it was with this hope in his mind that he spoke so warmly of him in his oration pro Marcello; but he soon saw clearly that it was Caesar's purpose to retain the supreme power in his own hands, especially when, at the close of the year 46, Caesar, on departing for Spain, left the city in charge of eight praefecti, who were directly responsible to his personal representatives, Cornelius Balbus and C. Oppius.²

35. Caesar defeated the last of the Pompeians, who had rallied under the leadership of Labienus and the two sons of Pompey, at Munda,³ Mar. 17, 45 B.C., and returned to Rome in September to continue the reforms which he had already begun, and to make preparations for his great campaign against the Parthians in the following year. In the meantime a conspiracy was forming against him, led by a few disappointed office-seekers and fanatics, and fostered by the traditional Roman prejudice against the title of rex and the regal insignia. The indiscreet act of Antony and of some other personal friend (or enemy?), in offering a diadem to Caesar,⁴ and in crowning his statue with a laurel wreath,⁵ strengthened the conspiracy, while Caesar's own course in openly assuming supreme power, a course far removed from the more diplomatic policy of his successor Augustus, must have offended the more conservative element. The meeting of the senate on Mar. 15, 44 B.C., furnished a suitable occasion, the presentation of a petition by L. Tillius

¹ Att. 12. 6. 3.

³ Bell. Hisp. 31.

² Suet. Jul. 76; Dio Cass. 43. 28;

⁴ Philipp. 2. 85.

Cic. Fam. 6. 8. 1; Tac. Ann. 12. 60.

⁵ Plut. Caes. 61.

Cimber a convenient opportunity, and the conspirators accomplished their purpose of assassinating Caesar.¹

VIII. CICERO AND THE LIBERATORES.

(Aet. 63-64. B.C. 44-43. Epist. LXXXV.-C.)

36. Soon after the murder of Caesar, the assassins, or the liberatores, as they were termed by Cicero, distrusting the temper of the people, withdrew to the Capitol,² which was guarded by the gladiators of D. Brutus. Here they were visited in the evening by a number of prominent men, among them being Cicero. He himself had had no part in the formation of the plot which led to Caesar's assassination or in its execution,³ but his satisfaction at the removal of Caesar is plainly shown in a jubilant letter⁴ written to L. Basilus, one of the conspirators, probably on the day of the assassination.

37. M. Antonius, who was Caesar's colleague in the consulship, gained possession of all his private treasure and political papers,⁵ but thought it wise to leave the adjustment of affairs to the senate.⁶ The senate met Mar. 17, and adopted Cicero's proposal to ratify Caesar's acts and to grant amnesty to the conspirators.⁷ At the same time arrangements were made for the burial of Caesar at the public expense and for the publication of his will. The funeral took place between Mar. 20 and 23,⁸ and the people, whose sympathy for Caesar was increased on hearing his generous bequests to them, were inflamed to such a degree

¹ Suet. Iul. 81, 82.

² Appian, B. C. 2. 120.

³ Fam. 12. 2. 1; Philipp. 2. 25.

⁴ Fam. 6. 15.

⁵ Appian, B. C. 2. 125.

⁶ Philipp. 1. 1, 2.

⁷ Appian, B. C. 2. 135; Cic. Philipp. 1. 16 ff.; Fam. 12. 1; cf.

also Schmidt, Kämpfe, pp. 687-700.

⁸ Ruete, Die Correspondenz Ciceros in den Jahren 44 und 43 p. 16.

by the funeral oration of Antony¹ that the conspirators were obliged to withdraw from the city.

38. With the help of Caesar's confidential secretary Faberius, Antony proceeded to strengthen himself by altering Caesar's papers and even by forging new documents.² To all this the senate could offer no resistance, but the further development of Antony's plans was interrupted by the arrival in April of C. Octavius,³ Caesar's adopted son and heir. The position of this young man, as Caesar's adopted son, and his manly spirit won him a hearty welcome from the Gallic veterans, and by his generous and tactful treatment of them he succeeded in drawing large numbers from Antony's support to his own side. At the same time his deference to Cicero,⁴ and his apparently unselfish desire to serve the state, excited for a time the liveliest hopes in the breasts of the republicans.

39. Cicero took little part in politics for some time after the important meeting of the senate, Mar. 17. He feared that by the death of Caesar Rome had merely exchanged one tyrant for another,⁵ and as early as May he writes prophetically to Atticus, *mihi autem non est dubium quin res spectet ad castra.*⁶ His discouragement was almost converted into despair when, on meeting M. Brutus and C. Cassius at Antium, June 8, he found that they were absolutely without purpose or plan. Prorsus dissolutum offendi navigium (i.e. the ship of state) *vel potius dissipatum; nihil consilio, nihil ratione, nihil ordine.*⁷ He decided to leave Italy for a time and was actually at Leucopetra on his way to Greece when he heard that a reconciliation between Antony and the liberatores was probable.⁸ On hearing this news, he returned

¹ Philipp. 2. 91; Att. 14. 10. 1;
Suet. Iul. 84, 85.

² Philipp. 3. 30, 31; 5. 10-12.

³ Att. 14. 10. 3.

⁴ Att. 14. 11. 2.

⁵ Att. 14. 12. 1.

⁶ Att. 14. 21. 3.

⁷ Att. 15. 11. 3; cf. also 14. 6. 2.

⁸ Philipp. 1. 7, 8; Att. 16. 7. 1.

to Rome to take part in the meeting of the senate which was called for Sept. 1.

40. He found matters however in a far less favorable condition than he had hoped to find them, and absented himself from the meeting of the senate, Sept. 1, on the plea of illness. Antony was angry at Cicero's absence and threatened to tear his house down.¹ On the following day Cicero appeared in the senate and delivered his first Philippic.² It was an outspoken criticism of Antony's action, but was free from personality. On Sept. 19 Antony made a violent reply to Cicero's criticism.³

The province of Macedonia had at first been assigned to Antony for the year 43,⁴ but in June, in spite of the opposition of the senate, he secured the passage of a bill in the comitia assigning to him Gallia Cisalpina, with Gallia Transalpina perhaps, in place of Macedonia.⁵ He doubtless preferred Gallia Cisalpina, as it would enable him to remain nearer Rome and because it was the key to Italy.⁶ He left the city Nov. 28, hastening toward the north with three legions and his body-guard to dispossess D. Brutus,⁷ to whom Gallia Cisalpina had fallen under the arrangements of Caesar.

41. At this point Cicero's active participation in the struggle with Antony begins. He saw the weak and the strong points of the senatorial cause. His judgment was unerring and his courage unfaltering. He saw that Octavius must be attached to the senatorial party, and Octavius was invested with the imperium and authorized, in coöperation with the consuls of 43 B.C., to conduct the war against Antony.⁸ He appreciated that at all hazards

¹ Philipp. 5. 19.

⁵ Appian, B. C. 3. 30; Schmidt,

² Philipp. 1. 16; ad Brut. 2. 3. 4. Kämpfe, p. 714.

³ Fam. 12. 2. 1.

⁶ Schmidt, Kämpfe, p. 713.

⁴ Schmidt, Kämpfe, pp. 701-6.

⁷ Appian, B. C. 3. 45.

⁸ Mon. Ancyran. 1; Appian, B. C. 3. 51.

D. Brutus must make a determined stand in Gallia Cisalpina, and that the governors of the neighboring provinces must be induced to rally to his support. He wrote therefore urgent letters to D. Brutus, to Plancus in northern Gaul, to Lepidus in southern Gaul, and to Pollio in Spain.¹ Brutus and Cassius in the East were apprised of the course of events in Italy,² and the senate was urged to take bold action.

42. His efforts were at the outset crowned with success, for on Dec. 20, 44 B.C.,³ the senate repealed the law which assigned Gallia Cisalpina and Transalpina to Antony, lengthened the terms of office of D. Brutus and Plancus, and directed the other provincial governors to remain at their posts until the senate should send out their successors. Octavius and Hirtius, one of the consuls, left Rome in the early part of 43 B.C. to relieve D. Brutus,⁴ who was besieged by Antony in Mutina, and Pansa, the other consul, followed in March with four more legions of recruits.⁵ After some preliminary skirmishing in which Antony gained the advantage,⁶ a decisive battle was fought near Mutina, Apr. 21,⁷ in which his army was completely defeated. But the victory was dearly bought. Hirtius fell upon the field of battle, and Pansa was mortally wounded⁸ and died two days later. The command of the forces acting against Antony was assigned to D. Brutus. Octavius, who had good reason to feel aggrieved at this slight,⁹ withdrew from further participation in the struggle, and marched to Rome at the head of eight legions, demanding the consulship.⁹ There was no means at hand to withstand him, and Aug. 19 he was elected consul, although but nineteen years of age.⁹

¹ Cf. Fam. Bk. 10.

² Cf. Fam. Bk. 12, and Epist. ad Brut.

³ Cf. Philipp. 3; Fam. 12. 22. 3.

⁴ Fam. 12. 5. 2.

⁵ Fam. 10. 30. 1.

⁶ Fam. 10. 30.

⁷ Cf. Mendelssohn, p. 458, n. 3.

⁸ Liv. Epit. 119.

⁹ Liv. Epit. 119; Appian, B. C. 3. 80-94; Suet. Aug. 26.

Meanwhile, in the north, Antony was strengthened by the accession of Lepidus,¹ Plancus, and Pollio.² D. Brutus was deserted by his troops, and while seeking to escape was murdered at Aquileia.³

43. In the East the cause of the liberatores had been more successful. In the early part of 43 B.C. M. Brutus reached the province of Macedonia, which had been assigned to him by Caesar, and was recognized as the legal governor by his predecessor Q. Hortensius.⁴ Cassius also took possession of his province, Syria. Both of them succeeded in levying large bodies of troops and in defeating C. Antonius,⁵ the brother of Marcus, and Dolabella,⁶ who had come out to take possession of Macedonia and Syria respectively, by virtue of measures whose passage Antony had secured. The senatorial party was in the meantime urging Brutus and Cassius to return and protect Italy from the troops of Antony.⁷ Cicero also wrote to both leaders, asking them to adopt this course,⁸ but their entreaties were without effect.

44. In Italy matters were rapidly advancing to a crisis. Octavius, soon after his elevation to the consulship, marched northward, met Antony near Bononia in Oct., 43 B.C., and with M. Lepidus formed a compact for the adjustment of affairs in Italy and for the prosecution of the war in the East against the *liberatores*⁹; and in November, by a vote of the comitia, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavius were appointed commissioners 'for the reorganization of the state' for a period of five years.¹⁰

¹ Fam. 10. 23. 2.

² Vell. Paterc. 2. 63.

³ Appian, B. C. 3. 97, 98.

⁴ Philipp. 10. 13.

⁵ Plut. Brut. 26 and 28.

⁶ Vell. Paterc. 2. 69.

⁷ Appian, B. C. 3. 85.

⁸ ad Brut. 1. 14. 2; 1. 18. 1; Fam. 12. 10. 3.

⁹ Dio Cass. 46. 55, 56; Appian, B. C. 3. 97; Liv. Epit. 120.

¹⁰ Mon. Ancyran. 1; Liv. Epit. 120; Dio Cass. 46. 56.

The first step of the triumvirs was to remove their enemies at Rome, and Cicero's name was included in the list of the proscribed, notwithstanding the protest of Octavius. Cicero at first thought of seeking refuge in the East, and actually set sail from Astura for that purpose, but the unfavorable weather and his own unwillingness to leave his native land held him back, and the emissaries of Antony found him still in his Formian villa when they reached that place, Dec. 7. His faithful slaves attempted to save him even at the last moment by hurrying him on board a ship which lay in the harbor, but he was overtaken by his pursuers, and, forbidding his followers to make resistance, gave himself up to death at the hands of his assassins.¹

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF CICERO.

45. Cicero's father was in moderate circumstances, and from him Cicero inherited the family estate at Arpinum and a house in the Carinae. The dower of his wife Terentia amounted to 480,000 sesterces,² but the larger part of his income was derived from legacies left to him by admirers or by men to whom he had rendered professional service. In 44 B.C. Cicero boasted³ that he had received more than 20,000,000 sesterces from this source. And one of his legacies, from the philosopher Diodotus,⁴ is said to have amounted to 10,000,000 sesterces. Possibly Cicero received also a share of the profits which C. Antonius, his colleague in the consulship, made in his province.⁵

¹ Plut. Cic. 47-9.

² Plut. Cic. 8.

³ Philipp. 2. 40.

⁴ Att. 2. 20. 6. The correctness of the text is, however, questioned by Tyrrell, vol. I². p. 35.

⁵ Att. 1. 12. 2; 1. 13. 6; 1. 14. 7;

Fam. 5. 5.

Cicero did not apparently increase his property to any great extent by productive investments. A large part of it in fact was invested in houses and villas in Rome and in the country districts of Italy. Besides his town house upon the Palatine, which he bought of M. Crassus in 62 B.C. for 3,500,000 sesterces,¹ Cicero owned villas at Arpinum, Tusculum, Antium, Astura, Formiae, Cumae, Puteoli, and Pompeii, and lodges along some of the more frequented Italian roads. Large sums of money were spent in decorating and furnishing these different residences² and upon their proper maintenance. When, in addition to these heavy expenses, we bear in mind his great fondness for works of art and literature,³ his generous mode of living, his openhandedness to friends and clients, and his social ambition for his son and daughter,⁴ it is evident that even the enormous sums stated would be scarcely sufficient to meet his needs.

46. In fact Cicero was frequently in great financial difficulty, and was relieved only by loans made to him by his friend Atticus, or by P. Sulla,⁵ or still worse by his political enemy Caesar⁶ or by the money-lenders at Rome. With skilful management probably his fortune would have been sufficient to meet the demands made upon it, but he was so much engrossed in politics, literature, and the practice of his profession that he had little time or inclination for business affairs. Then, too, during his exile and during his absence at the outbreak of the civil war, his finances were wretchedly muddled by Terentia and her untrustworthy steward Philotimus.⁷

¹ Fam. 5. 6. 2.

⁴ Att. 12. 32. 2 ; 11. 25. 3 ; 11

² Att. 2. 1. 11 ; 4. 2. 7.

23. 3.

³ Fam. 7. 23 ; Att. 1. 9. 2 ; 1. 4. 3 ;

⁵ Gellius, 12. 12. 2.

1. 7 ; 1. 10. 4.

⁶ Att. 5. 10. 4 ; 7. 8. 5.

⁷ Fam. 4. 14. 3 ; Att. 11. 2. 2, etc.

47. In his financial dealings Cicero was honorable and high-minded. He declined to make money, as even his friends Atticus and M. Brutus did, by loaning money at usurious rates. His upright management of Cilicia was in marked contrast to the almost universal practices of his contemporaries. He paid his debts conscientiously, although not always with promptness, because of his frequent financial embarrassment. In some other points Cicero does not show as strict a sense of honor: he did not scruple to open certain letters from his brother Quintus to a third person, which fell into his hands, and which, as he suspected, contained slanderous statements in regard to himself¹; he dictated to the secretary of Atticus a letter in praise of Caelius and then read it to Caelius as an authentic epistle from Atticus²; in another letter he even speculates upon the feasibility of disavowing an oration which had offended Curio.³ The question of ethics involved in the defense of Catiline scarcely belongs here and has been discussed elsewhere.⁴ It should be remembered in partial extenuation of these facts that the code of honor in such matters was not so strict in Cicero's day as it is in our own, and that his lot was cast in times when life and fortune hung by a slender thread.

48. Cicero's enthusiastic study of Greek and Latin literature at Rome, and later at Athens and Rhodes, has already been noted (§§ 1, 2). These habits of study continued throughout his life, and gave him such a fund of general information as few of his contemporaries possessed. Still he was not a man of profound learning, even in his chosen profession. He was rather a man of cultivated tastes and broad sympathies. Of his knowledge of the literature, history, and antiquities of Greece and Rome, his letters,

¹ Att. 11. 9. 2.

² Att. 6. 6. 4.

³ Att. 3. 12. 2.

⁴ Cf. Epist. II. notes.

especially those to Atticus, offer constant illustration. He prided himself upon the fluency with which he could use Greek in speaking and writing. He was an insatiable book-buyer and a connoisseur in art (§ 45 n. 3). The circle of his friends included every one worth knowing at Rome,—politicians, whether of the aristocratic or democratic factions, literary men, business men, and men of leisure.

No better proof could be desired of Cicero's sympathetic nature and manysidedness than the fact that he drew to himself persons of all tastes, beliefs, and ages. He was a friend not only of the eminent jurist Servius Sulpicius Rufus, and the learned antiquary Varro, but also of Caesar's witty aide-de-camp Trebatius, of the clever young politician Caelius, and the accomplished Caerellia.

49. In his family relations Cicero was a true and courteous husband, a father indulgent to his children, but wisely thoughtful for their interests. In his relations with his wife Terentia he stands in honorable contrast to many prominent men of his time, and his divorce from her, which took place after a married life of thirty years, was the almost inevitable result of the lack of sympathy existing between two such opposite natures; and a knowledge of the great frequency of divorce in his day may properly modify the severity of our judgment upon him in this matter.

His second wife Publilia, who was much younger than himself, he probably married for her money,¹ and the union proved utterly disagreeable to him. All the wealth of his affection was bestowed upon his daughter Tullia. Her nature was impressionable like his own, so that she understood her father and sympathized with him in his periods of exaltation and depression, while the unhappiness which followed her through life only served to bring out her father's tenderness.

¹ Fam. 4. 14. 3.

No one could have been more unlike Cicero than his only son Marcus, and it would be humorous, if it were not pathetic, to see the orator hopefully instructing the would-be soldier in the mysteries of philosophy and law. But when the boy had taken up the profession of arms under Brutus, and thus brought to naught the father's hope that his son would succeed him at the bar and in the senate, Cicero gracefully accepted the inevitable. He followed his son's movements with the liveliest interest, and heard with paternal pride the reports of his prowess.

To his brother Quintus, Cicero was always loyal and devoted. Their friendly relations were broken but once,¹ and then only for a brief period. They were men of very different temperaments. Marcus acted in general with deliberation; sometimes, in fact, he hesitated too long. Quintus was nervous and impulsive.

One dwells, however, with most pleasure upon Cicero's treatment of his personal dependents. Not only his favorite freedman Tiro, but the very slaves of his household enjoyed his kindness and generosity.

50. This sympathetic sensitiveness in Cicero's nature gives to his character its special charm, and constitutes at the same time its principal weakness. Those moments of exaltation and of depression, those periods when he helplessly fluctuates between different courses of action,² find their explanation in this quality. His humor is determined by the circumstances of the moment. He lacks, therefore, the calm poise of the less impressionable nature. He fails to give things their proper proportions, and consequently his forecasts of the future are generally either too sanguine or too gloomy. It was this quality, of course, which made him an opportunist in politics.

¹ Att. II. 5. 4; II. 12. 1.

² E.g. in 58 and 49 B.C. Cf. introductory note to Epist. X.

A man so constituted could find real pleasure only in Rome. He was charmed for a time with the new sensations which country life gave him, but it soon became irksome. Of all his villas, the Tusculanum, perched upon one of the hills which overlook Rome, and within easy reach of all the political and social news of the city, was his favorite, and we are not surprised when he writes from Cilicia: *urbem, urbem, mi Rufe, cole et in ista luce vive: omnis peregrinatio — quod ego ab adulescentia iudicavi — obscura et sordidast.*¹

51. No sketch, however brief, of Cicero's private life would be complete without some reference to the connection between it and his philosophical work. In the early part of the year 46 B.C. he was divorced from Terentia,² in November his son Marcus left Rome to pursue his studies in Athens,³ and, hardest of all to bear, in Feb., 45 B.C., his beloved daughter Tullia died.⁴ Cicero was overwhelmed with grief, and at his lonely villa upon a little island in the river Astura, gave himself up to the perusal of such books as he thought would help him to bear his loss⁵; and as he gradually gained some control over his feelings, he began the composition of works in a similar vein. His purpose gradually widened until it included the development of a complete philosophical system, and for twelve months he wrote and published philosophical works with incredible rapidity; but the impulse to the work is to be found in the domestic misfortunes which befell him in the autumn and winter of 46-45 B.C., and the personal element is noticeable in all of his philosophical work, especially in the Tusculan Disputations. We find also in studying his domestic life the main factor which determined his philosophical attitude. He could not accept the doctrines of either of the two

¹ Fam. 2. 12. 2.

³ Att. 12. 8 (written Nov. 11,

² Plut. Cic. 41.

46 B.C.).

⁴ Schmidt, Briefw. p. 271.

⁵ Att. 12. 15.

most influential schools in his day, — the Epicurean and the Stoic, — because his tender recollections of Tullia made him recoil from the materialism of the one and the coldness of the other. He became, therefore, an eclectic.

CICERO'S FAMILY AND FRIENDS.

TERENTIA AND PUBLILIA.

52. A fair knowledge of the relations existing between Cicero and his wife Terentia may be gained from the letters of Bk. 14, ad Fam., all of which are addressed to her. In the early letters of this correspondence written in 58 B.C., after twenty years of married life, Cicero expresses himself in most affectionate terms. After this date, with the exception of one letter in 50 B.C., which is mainly upon business matters, there are no letters to Terentia up to 49 B.C., although this interval includes the period of his proconsulship, when he wrote so many letters to his personal and political friends. Even the letters of the year 49, when Cicero was in so much anxiety, are very infrequent. The rest of the letters of Bk. 14, belonging to the next two years, are brief and formal. It appears that an estrangement gradually grew up between them which culminated in their divorce in the early part of 46 B.C. In December of the same year he married his rich ward Publilia¹; but Publilia could not conceal her chagrin at finding herself second to Tullia in his affection, and when she evinced joy a few months later at Tullia's death, Cicero sent her to her mother and could not be induced to receive her back into his favor.²

¹ Plut. Cic. 41; Cic. Fam. 4. 14. 1 and 3. Cf. also Schmidt, Briefw. p. 268.

² Att. 12. 32. 1.

TULLIA.

53. Tullia, Cicero's only daughter, was probably born in 79 or 78 B.C. In 66 B.C. she was betrothed to C. Calpurnius Piso Frugi,¹ and married him sometime within the next three years. He died during the year of Cicero's exile.² In 56 B.C. Tullia married Furius Crassipes.³ The match was regarded as a good one, but for reasons unknown to us Crassipes and Tullia were soon divorced. Her next matrimonial venture was with P. Cornelius Dolabella,⁴ the Caesarian politician. Their married life proved to be a most unhappy one, and they were probably divorced towards the close of the year 46 B.C.⁵ Tullia herself died in Feb., 45 B.C.,⁶ and her father was plunged in the deepest grief, in which his friends Caesar, Lucceius, Sulpicius, and others sought to comfort him by letters of condolence.⁷

MARCUS TULLIUS CICERO FILIUS.

54. Cicero's only son Marcus was born in 65 B.C. The father gave his personal attention for some time to the young man's education, and sent him later to Athens to pursue his studies, in the hope that he would take up the legal profession; but the young man's tastes were averse to study, and the appearance of Brutus at Athens, in 44 B.C., was enough to cause his enlistment in the army of the liberatores, in which he served with distinction.⁸ He espoused the cause of Octavius against Antony, was made consul by the former in 30 B.C.,⁹ and is last heard of as proconsul of Asia.

¹ Att. 1. 3. 3.

² pro Sest. 68.

³ Q. fr. 2. 4. 2.

⁴ Att. 6. 6. 1; Fam. 8. 6. 1.

⁵ Fam. 6. 18. 5.

⁶ Schmidt, Briefw. p. 271.

⁷ Att. 13. 20. 1; Fam. 4. 5; 5. 13; 5. 14; Att. 12. 13. 1.

⁸ ad Brut. 2. 3.

⁹ Plut. Cic. 49.

QUINTUS TULLIUS CICERO.

55. Quintus Cicero was a man of considerable ability; and, although he never reached the consulship, he was aedile in 65 and praetor in 62 B.C. At first he was inclined to attach himself to Pompey, and in 57 B.C. served as the latter's legatus in Sardinia,¹ but three years later he joined Caesar in Gaul and took part in the invasion of Britain. In the civil war, after some hesitation, he espoused the cause of Pompey, but after the battle of Pharsalus he sought and obtained pardon from Caesar. In 43 B.C. he was proscribed with Marcus and put to death. Four of his letters are extant,² as well as a long document addressed to Marcus when the latter was a candidate for the consulship.

PUBLIUS CORNELIUS DOLABELLA.

56. Cicero was somewhat disturbed³ upon hearing, while in Cilicia, that his daughter Tullia was betrothed to Dolabella, for the young man's career was notorious, and Cicero himself had twice defended him against serious charges. These fears were well grounded, for Dolabella neglected Tullia, and in 46 B.C. they were divorced. Probably in the hope that Caesar's programme included cancellation of debts,⁴ Dolabella joined his party in the civil war and was designated as Caesar's successor in the consulship for 44 B.C., during the projected Parthian war. In this office he at first showed some sympathy for the party of Brutus and Cassius, but later the promise of the province of Syria induced him to side with Antony. He met his death⁵ while attempting to take this province from one of the conspirators (§ 43).

¹ Q. fr. 2. 2. 1.

² Fam. 16. 8; 16; 26; 27.

³ Fam. 2. 15. 2; Att. 6. 6. 1.

⁴ Fam. 2. 16. 5.

⁵ Vell. Paterc. 2. 69.

MARCUS TULLIUS TIRO.

57. Tiro, the slave and freedman, deserves a place among the members of Cicero's family because of the intimate terms upon which he lived with all the members of it. He was his master's secretary and accompanied him wherever he went. Cicero's affection for him is evident from the letters of Bk. 16, ad Fam., most of which are letters written to Tiro by Cicero. He was a man of cultivation, and his criticism was of great service to Cicero, who writes to him: *tu, qui καὶ ὄντ' esse meorum scriptorum soles.*¹ He did some independent literary work in writing a life of his patron,² in making a collection of his witticisms,³ and in editing a collection of stenographical abbreviations. He apparently wrote some tragedies also.⁴

TITUS POMPONIUS ATTICUS.

58. Atticus was born in 109 B.C.,⁵ and spent his early life at Rome; but the dreadful events which attended the war between Marius and Sulla led him to withdraw from Rome in 86 B.C. and take up his residence at Athens,⁶ where Cicero made his acquaintance about 79 B.C. His father left him 2,000,000 sesterces, and his uncle Q. Caecilius 10,000,000⁷ more. This property he found means of increasing by judicious investments, as he managed the business affairs of Cato, Hortensius, Cicero, and others,⁸ made loans to individuals and towns,⁹ carried on the business of a publisher,¹⁰ and even kept trained bands of

¹ Fam. 16. 17. 1.

² Plut. Cic. 49.

³ Quint. 6. 3. 5.

⁴ Fam. 16. 18. 3.

⁵ Nep. Att. 21, 22.

⁶ Nep. Att. 2.

⁷ Nep. Att. 5.

⁸ Nep. Att. 15.

⁹ Nep. Att. 8; Cic. Att. 1. 13. 1;

16. 16 a. 4, 5.

¹⁰ Att. 2. 1. 2; 12. 40. 1; 12. 45. 3.

gladiators.¹ He abstained carefully from all participation in politics, and yet was on intimate terms with members of all political parties. His philosophical views were in harmony with his political attitude, as he was an Epicurean. His sister Pomponia married Q. Cicero.

The intimate friendship which existed between Atticus and Cicero had a practical as well as a sentimental basis. Atticus found it profitable to act as Cicero's financial agent, and he found the letters of recommendation, which his friend wrote for him to the governors of provinces, of great service, while Cicero derived great profit from the advice and help which Atticus rendered him in domestic, political, literary, and financial matters. Atticus died in 32 B.C.²

LETTER WRITING.

59. In Cicero's time letters were commonly written either upon waxen tablets or papyrus. Reference is made in Cic. in Cat. 3. 5 to a letter upon waxen tablets, and they were not infrequently used as late as the fifth century A.D.³; but the introduction into Italy of papyrus, which is mentioned as early as the time of Ennius,⁴ gradually restricted the use of waxen tablets, so that, in so far as letters were concerned, they were in general used only in writing to a correspondent near at hand, especially when one hoped for an immediate answer upon the tablets sent. Thus Cicero writes to Lepta : *simul atque accepi a Seleuco tuo litteras, statim quaesivi e Balbo per codicillos quid esset in lege.*⁵ Such occasional notes were called codicilli;⁶ as indicated in the extract, or sometimes

¹ Att. 4. 4 b. 2; 4. 8 a. 2.

² Nep. Att. 22.

³ Thompson, Greek and Latin Palaeography, p. 22.

⁴ Marquardt, Handbuch, vol. VII. p. 808, n. 1.

⁵ Fam. 6. 18. 1.

⁶ Cf. also Seneca, Ep. 55. 11.

pugillares. For letters, however, sent to a distance, as most of Cicero's were, papyrus was a much more convenient substance, and probably the great majority of his letters were written upon it.¹ Parchment had not yet come into use for letter writing.²

60. The papyrus plant was grown principally in Egypt. It grows in water two or three feet deep, and the plant reaches a height of five or six feet. The method of manufacturing writing material from it is described by Pliny.³ The stem of the plant was cut into thin strips, and these strips were laid parallel to one another upon a smooth surface; another set of strips was laid upon these at right angles, and the two layers were glued together by the gum which exuded from the strips when they were moistened with water. The layers were then hammered together into a single sheet, called a plagula, which was exposed to the sun to dry. The sheets were from 5 to 10 inches long, and probably one sufficed for an ordinary letter. If more space was needed, several sheets were pasted together. The center of the papyrus industry was Alexandria.

61. Ink (atramentum, or atramentum librarium) was ordinarily made from the liquid of the cuttle fish,⁴ or from a composition of soot and gum.⁵ The inkstand (atramentarium) was commonly cylindrical and often had two compartments, one for black and one for red ink. Pens (calami) were made of reeds grown chiefly in Egypt,⁶ and were kept in a case (calamarium or theca calamaria) made usually of leather. The other articles which completed a writing outfit were a piece of lead (plumbum) and a ruler (regula) for

¹ Cf., however, exaravi, Epist. LXIX. 1 n.

² Birt, Das antike Buchwesen, p. 61.

³ N. H. 13. 74-83; cf. also Birt, pp. 227-247.

⁴ Persius, 3. 13.

⁵ Plin. N. H. 35. 6. 25.

⁶ Martial, 14. 38.

ruling lines, a pen-knife (scalprum librarium) for sharpening the pens, and a sponge for erasing ink.

62. The letter regularly opened and closed with certain formulae which varied according to the relations in which the writer and recipient stood. Thus, in writing to an intimate friend like Paetus, Cicero might open his letter thus: Cicero Paeto,¹ or *Cicero Paeto S.*² (i.e. salutem), or *Cicero Paeto S. D.*³ (i.e. salutem dicit); or in a little more formal letter the praenomen or cognomen of one or of both might be added, e.g. *M. Cicero S. D. A. Caecinae*⁴ or Cicero S. D. M. Fadio Gallo.⁵ In formal letters, if either the writer or the recipient held an office, his title was added, e.g. *M. Cicero Imp. S. D. L. Paulo Cos.*⁶; still more formally, *M. Tullius M. F. Cicero Procos. S. D. Cos. Pr. Tr. Pl. Senatui*⁷ (i.e. M. Tullius Marci filius Cicero pro consule salutem dicit consulibus praetoribus tribunis plebis senatui).

In addressing the members of one's own family it was customary to add Suo (or Suae), e.g. *Tullius Terentiae Suae S. P.*⁸ (i.e. salutem plurimam). After this address there often appeared some formula like si vales, bene est, either written out in full or in the abbreviation s. v. b. e. or s. v. b. (i.e. benest).⁹ Cicero himself rarely used this formula.¹⁰

In writing to the members of one's own household, apparently some closing formula was ordinarily used. Such formulae are found at the end of all the letters to Terentia and to Tiro. Among those used are the following: vale, etiam atque etiam vale, vale salve, fac valeas meque diligas, cura ut valeas, ama nos et vale.¹¹ In writing to others than

¹ Fam. 9. 20.

² Fam. 9. 21.

³ Fam. 9. 24.

⁴ Fam. 6. 5.

⁵ Fam. 7. 23.

⁶ Fam. 15. 13.

⁷ Fam. 15. 2.

⁸ Fam. 14. 7; cf. sect. 69.

⁹ Fam. 11. 3; cf. also Epist. LII. 1 n. See Sen. Ep. 15. 1; Pliny, Ep. 1. 11.

¹⁰ Cf. Epist. LVI. n.

¹¹ Cf. nos diliges, Epist. XVIII. (end) n.

the members of one's household, closing formulae were less frequently used. For instance, all of the seventeen letters from Caelius¹ close abruptly. The date and place of writing, if indicated at all, are usually given at the end of the letter, the name of the place being in the ablative (sometimes with a preposition) or the locative, e.g. d. (i.e. data, datae or datum) a. d. III. Non. Oct. Thessalonica, XVII. K. Apr. Corduba, K. Oct. de Venusino, ex Arpinati VI. Non., data XVI. Kal. Sextiles Thessalonicae.

63. When a letter was ready to be sent, it was rolled up; a thread was wound about the middle of it and sometimes passed through the papyrus itself, and a seal was attached to the ends of the string.² The seal was the guarantee of genuineness; so, for instance, upon one occasion, when Cicero had opened some letters from Quintus to certain friends, on the suspicion that they contained slanderous remarks about himself, he was not afraid of the consequences, because Pomponia, the wife of Quintus, who was not on good terms with her husband, had her husband's seal and would not object to sealing the letters again.³ The seal often had for its design the likeness of the owner⁴ or of one of his ancestors.⁵ Wax was commonly used to receive the impression, but sometimes Asiatic chalk.⁶ Upon the outside of the roll the name of the person addressed was written in the dative, sometimes with his title and the place where he could be found, e.g. *M. Lucretio flamini Martis decurioni Pompeiis.*⁷

¹ Fam. Bk. 8.

² Fronto ad M. Caesar. i. 8, p. 24 Naber: Versus, quos mihi miserat, remisisti tibi per Victorinum nostrum, atque ita remisisti; chartam diligenter lino transui et ita lino obsignavi, ne musculus iste aliquid aliqua rimari possit.

³ Att. 11. 9. 2.

⁴ Plaut. Pseud. 56 and 988.

⁵ in Cat. 3. 10.

⁶ pro Flacco, 37.

⁷ From a Pompeian wall-painting preserved in the Museum at Naples.

64. Letters were often written by secretaries from dictation, but most of Cicero's letters to Atticus and Quintus at least were written with his own hand; for in 59 B.C. he writes to Atticus: *numquam ante arbitror te epistulam meam legisse, nisi mea manu scriptam*¹; and in 49 B.C.: *lippitudinis meae signum tibi sit librari manus*²; and in 54 B.C. to Quintus: scribis enim te meas litteras superiores vix legere potuisse, in quo nihil eorum, mi frater, fuit quae putas; neque enim occupatus eram neque perturbatus nec iratus alicui, sed hoc facio semper ut, quicumque calamus in manus meas venerit, eo sic utar tamquam bono.³ During the latter part of his life, however, especially during the years 44 and 43 B.C., even the letters to Atticus were written by a secretary.⁴ Cicero's principal secretary was Tiro. Mention is also made of another, Spintharus by name.⁵

As there was no postal system at that time, letters had to be sent by one's own messengers (tabellarii) or the messengers of one's friends. This made the composition of a letter a more serious matter in Cicero's day than it is in ours. But his letters were not always studied productions: some of them were written while he was traveling; others between the courses at dinner⁶; and he writes to Cassius⁷: praeposteros habes tabellarios . . . cum a me discedunt, flagitant litteras . . . atque id ipsum facerent commodius, si mihi aliquid spati ad scribendum darent, sed petasati veniunt, comites ad portam expectare dicunt.

Some idea of the speed with which letters were carried may be gathered from the following instances: letters arrived at Rome from Brundisium on the sixth day, from Sicily on

¹ Att. 2. 23. 1.

² Att. 8. 13. 1.

³ Q. fr. 2. 14 (15b). 1; cf. also 2. 15 (16). 1.

⁴ Att. 15. 20. 4; 12. 32. 1.

⁵ Att. 13. 25. 3.

⁶ Att. 14. 6. 2; 14. 12. 3; cf. dictavi ambulans, Epist. IX. 1 n.

⁷ Fam. 15. 17. 1.

the seventh day, from Britain on the thirty-third day, from Africa and also from Athens on the twenty-first day, from Syria on the fiftieth day.¹ A messenger in Cicero's time traveled from 40 to 50 (Roman) miles per day.²

CICERO'S CORRESPONDENCE AND ITS FIRST PUBLICATION.

65. The earliest letter (Att. i. 5) in the correspondence was written in 68 B.C.; the latest (Fam. 10. 24), a letter from Plancus to Cicero, bears the date of July 28, 43 B.C. Cicero's last extant letter (Fam. 10. 29) was written July 6, 43 B.C. The correspondence with Atticus closes with Att. 16. 15 in Dec. 44 B.C. The fact that the extant correspondence stops several months before his death is probably due to the circumstance that the attitude of Octavius changed in the summer of 43 B.C., and Cicero's letters after that date were not published because of the strictures they contained upon the conduct of Octavius. The following tables indicate the extant and lost collections of letters :

EXTANT COLLECTIONS.		Ad Caesarem . . .	3 bks.
Ad Familiares . . .	16 bks.	Ad Calvum . . .	2 "
Ad Atticum . . .	16 "	Ad filium . . .	2 "
Ad Quintum fratrem .	3 "	Ad Hirtium . . .	9 "
Ad M. Brutum . . .	2 "	Ad Nepotem . . .	2 "
	Total	Ad Octavium . . .	3 "
	37 bks.	Ad Pansam . . .	3 "
LOST COLLECTIONS.		Ad Pompeium . . .	4 "
Ad Axium . . .	2 bks.
Ad M. Brutum . . .	7 "
		Total	37 bks.

¹ C. Bardt, Quaestiones Tullianae.

² E. Ruete, Die Correspondenz Ciceros, p. 121.

The extant collections contain about 870 letters, of which 423 are included in the Bks. ad Fam., 394 in the Bks. ad Att., and the remainder is divided almost equally between the other two collections. The correspondence contains 98 letters from 31 other persons than Cicero. Seventy-three of these letters are found in the Bks. ad Fam.

66. The collection of letters ad Fam. seems to be made up of three parts¹: (i) Bk. 13, (ii) Bks. 1-9 and 14-16, (iii) Bks. 10-12. The letters of Bk. 13 are all letters of recommendation, and were probably collected and perhaps published in the summer of 44 B.C. Of the other books, 1-9 and 14-16 contain epistles, other than letters of recommendation, written before the summer of 44 B.C.; and Bks. 10-12 contain letters written later than that date. The date of publication of parts ii and iii is not known. In view of the criticisms made upon Antony in some of these letters, perhaps they were not published until after the battle of Actium, or still later.² The title Epistulae ad Familiares is modern.

Tiro, Cicero's secretary, was making a collection of Cicero's letters in 44 B.C.³ The collection of letters ad Fam. contains no letters from Tiro, but many addressed to him, even by other people than Cicero. He is therefore almost certainly the editor of this collection.

67. The collection ad Atticum contains no letter from Atticus. This state of things, together with the well-known fact that Atticus was a publisher, and that Cornelius Nepos says⁴ that such a collection of Cicero's letters, not yet published, was in the possession of Atticus, makes it almost certain that these letters were arranged for publication by him. It is probable that they were not published until

¹ Cf. in general L. Gurlitt, De M. Tulli Ciceronis epistulis earumque pristina collectione.

² Cf. Mendelssohn, M. Tulli

Ciceronis Epistularum Libri Sedecim, p. iii. n.

³ Att. 16. 5. 5.

⁴ Nep. Att. 16.

after his death (32 B.C.).¹ Some of the men of note upon whom Cicero had expressed unfavorable opinions were still living in 32 B.C., and the publication of these letters would therefore have been indiscreet. The books in the collection ad Att. stand in chronological order, and the letters within the books are arranged chronologically, but not with accuracy.

With the Epistulae ad Quintum fratrem may be mentioned the Commentariolum Petitionis,² a document which Quintus sent to his brother when the latter was a candidate for the consulship. The letters proper, as well as the Epistulae ad M. Brutum, were edited by Tiro.³ There were originally nine books of the letters to Brutus, but seven of them have been lost. Those which remain are probably Bks. 9 and 8 of the original collection. The authenticity of the Epist. ad M. Brut. has been seriously doubted, but, with the exception perhaps of 1. 16 and 17,⁴ they are now commonly regarded as authentic.

68. A few references to Cicero's letters during the Middle Ages are found,⁵ but they do not seem to have been as well known as his philosophical writings. In the year 1389, however, Coluccio Salutato, the Florentine chancellor, obtained from Vercelli a copy of a Ciceronian manuscript, which was found to contain the *Epist. ad Fam.*⁶ This manuscript and the copy secured by Coluccio are now in the Laurentian Library at Florence. The former belongs to the

¹ Bücheler (Rhein. Mus. 1879, p. 352) believes that they were published between 60 and 65 A.D., but his argument is not convincing.

² Upon the authenticity of the Commentariolum Petitionis, cf. Tyrrell, vol. I.² pp. 110-121; Hendrickson, Amer. Jour. of Philol. vol. XIII. no. 2.

³ Gurlitt, p. 17.

⁴ K. Schirmer, Ueber die Sprache des M. Brutus in den bei Cicero überlieferten Briefen, pp. 25-6.

⁵ Mendelssohn, pp. iv-x.

⁶ Mendelssohn, pp. xi-xii; Schmidt, Briefw. pp. 449-451.

ninth or tenth century and contains all of the Epist. ad Fam. This manuscript, in the opinion of most editors, is of paramount authority for the text. Bks. 1-8 of this collection are also found in two manuscripts of the twelfth century, one in the library of the British Museum and the other in the National Library at Paris. Another manuscript of the eleventh century in the British Museum and one of the fifteenth or sixteenth century at Rome contain Bks. 9-16.

In 1345 Petrarch discovered at Verona a manuscript containing the Epist. ad Att., ad Q. fr., and ad M. Brut., and, although the original and Petrarch's copy are both lost, another copy, made for Coluccio Salutato, survived and is preserved in the Laurentian Library at Florence. The only other independent sources for the text of these letters are a few leaves at Würzburg and Munich, and a manuscript known to us only through the marginal readings in one of the early editions, that of Cratander, published in Basel in 1528.

LANGUAGE AND STYLE.

69. For a complete and scientific study of the language and style of Cicero's correspondence an examination of the Latinity of the thirty-one writers from whom letters are preserved would be necessary. Some of these writers, e.g. Caelius (Bk. 8, ad Fam.), have left us sufficient material upon which to base a fair estimate of their individual characteristics; but such a discussion would be too extended for our purposes. An examination, however, of the letters reveals certain elements common to the correspondence as a whole which differentiate epistolary Latin from the language used in more formal writing. Epistolary Latin is one of the forms of the sermo cotidianus, the speech used in the familiar intercourse of everyday life, as opposed to the more formal diction adopted in literary compositions intended for a more general audience or body of readers.

70. Formal and informal Latin, if they may be so designated, are in their origin independent of one another. At the moment when Latin literature began, inasmuch as differences in culture did not exist, there was but one Latin spoken by patrician and plebeian alike. With the appearance of literature, Latin developed along two different lines. The poets, especially Ennius, in adapting Latin to literary purposes, adopted certain words and forms of expression and rejected others. On the other hand, the people, in their daily life, were more conservative, retaining much of that which literature rejected,¹ while at the same time they adopted many new forms of expression which formal literature either did not employ at all or accepted at a later date. In particular these literary pioneers, being steeped in Greek literature, unconsciously sought to develop literary Latin in accordance with the genius of the Greek language. This latter influence acted only indirectly upon colloquial speech.

71. The cleft thus resulting continued to widen, until, in course of time, certain distinct and interesting differences are noticeable between formal and informal Latin. Of course important differences are found only between the extremes of these two forms of speech. Cicero himself intimates that we may expect to find in his letters evidences of colloquialism, for he writes to his friend Paetus (Fam. 9. 21. 1): *Quid tibi ego videor in epistulis? nonne plebeio sermone agere tecum? . . . epistulas vero cotidianis verbis texere solemus.*²

72. A number of factors tend to vary the character of this sermo cotidianus as it is used in letter writing. Some of these are the character of the person addressed and his relations to the writer, the subject or subjects discussed, the occupation and culture of the writer, the time and place in which the letter is written, and the other circumstances attending the composition.

¹ Cf. note to mi, Epist. XCIII. 2.

² Cf. also note to levia nostratia, Epist. XXXVI. 1.

With local differences in familiar speech and with those which time effects, the student who confines his attention to Cicero's correspondence is not concerned, as the letters fall within a period of twenty-five years, and were written by men who spoke Latin as it was spoken in the city of Rome. The other factors are of interest. One cannot fail to notice the freedom and informality with which Cicero writes to his friend Atticus or his brother Quintus, as compared with the tone which he adopts to those less intimately related to him. It is in the letters addressed to these two persons that we find the greatest divergence from formal standards. The subject and purpose of a letter exert a potent influence upon its character. The 'open letter' to Lentulus (Fam. I. 9), for example, which was to serve as a political pamphlet, takes a tone entirely different from that of the gossipy letters to Trebatius and Paetus. Most of Cicero's correspondents were men of some culture, and there is consequently a uniformity of style and a nearer approximation to formal Latin than we should find in the letters of uncultivated men, but in Pompey and Curius, for instance, we find little suggestion of literary training, but rather the flavor of the camp and of mercantile life. The circumstances under which a letter is written influence perceptibly the character of its language and style. This is especially true of Cicero's own letters, because his nature was peculiarly sensitive to the circumstances surrounding him at the moment; and the letters which he wrote while in exile (e.g. Att. Bk. 3.), offer, in their laxity of style, striking illustrations of the way in which the intensity of his feeling was reflected, not merely in the thought expressed, but in the form in which it found expression. Cf., for instance, note to ante oculos, Epist. XIII. 3, and note to cuicumodi, Epist. XIV.

73. The student of Plautus, of Terence, of Horace in his Satires, and of Petronius, will find, as might be expected, many points of contact between the language of these writers and the language of the Letters, with such differences in general as result from the influences just noted. It is interesting also to observe that many stylistic peculiarities which we ordinarily recognize as the distinguishing characteristics of Silver Latin, first come to the surface in Cicero's correspondence. A full discussion of the Latinity of the correspondence is impossible here, but a few epistolary peculiarities of more or less frequency are noted in the following paragraphs. Further remarks upon these points and upon similar ones will be found in the commentary.

A. LEXICOGRAPHY AND ORTHOGRAPHY.

74. New Formations. In general a fairly large number of words are found in the Letters which do not occur elsewhere in Latin, but the majority of them were probably not new. Still, such formations as facteon, Sullaturit, tocullio, Lentulitas, susurrator, and subrostrani, which have a genuine Plautine ring, must have resulted from the inspiration of the moment. Cf. note to facteon, Epist. V. 13.

75. Verbal Substantives. Of especial frequency are verbal substantives in -tio, etc., such as denuntiatio (Plancus, Fam. 10. 8. 4), and praevaricator (Caelius, Fam. 8. 11. 1). These substantives condense an idea into a single word and thus secure the brevity at which a letter-writer often aims.

76. Diminutives. Perhaps the most characteristic form in the Letters is the diminutive. The diminutive ending is added to substantives, to adjectives, to adverbs, and even to the comparative form of the adjective and adverb, and suggests often some emotion on the part of the writer. Cf. note to pulchellus, Epist. V. 10.

77. Words compounded with per- and sub-. Equally common is the use with adjectives, adverbs, and verbs of the prefixes per- and sub-, which respectively strengthen and weaken the force of the words to which they are attached; e.g. perbenevolus (Fam. 14. 4. 6), subirascor, 'I am a trifle provoked' (Att. 9. 7. 7). The use of these prefixes is not by any means unknown in formal literature, but in epistolary Latin it gives rise to many new and strange compounds, e.g. pervesperi (Fam. 9. 2. 1), subinanis (Att. 2. 17. 2), and subturpiculus (Att. 4. 5. 1). It is in the freedom with which such compounds were formed, and the frequency with which they were used, that colloquial Latin was distinguished from formal Latin. These compounds had gone so far toward supplanting the simple words in familiar speech that in some cases they differed in no wise from them, as is shown in the phrase quae parcius frater perscripserat (Q. Cic., Fam. 16. 27. 1). Cf. also note to pertumultuose, Epist. XXXIV. 3.

78. Verbs compounded with ad-, con-, etc. In this connection mention may be made of verbs compounded with ad-, con-, de-, and dis-, which are used in the Letters not only with great frequency, but often when they do not apparently differ in meaning from the simple verbs. Compounds with dis- are especially noteworthy. Cf. note to discupio, Epist. XLVIII. 2.

79. Frequentatives. Frequentatives are used with such freedom, and so often in the double form (e.g. ventito, Matius, Fam. 11. 28. 7), or with the addition of such words as saepe or crebro, as, for instance, ostentare crebro solebat (Dolabella, Fam. 9. 9. 2), that one is at first inclined to think that the frequentative has lost its characteristic force in such cases; but it is more probable that in the double frequentative, and in the expressions just noted we have an illustration of the colloquial fondness for unduly emphasizing a fact.

80. Hybrids. A few hybrids are found in the Letters, but apparently only in the more familiar letters to Atticus, e.g. Pseudocato, Att. 1. 14. 6; tocullio, Att. 2. 1. 12; facteon, Att. 1. 16. 13.

81. Archaism. As was remarked above, colloquial Latin was conservative in retaining certain forms and expressions which became obsolete in formal Latin. Instances in point are dicier, an obsolete infinitive form (Vatin., Fam. 5. 9. 1), isto = istuc (Cael., Fam. 8. 15. 2 et passim), illi = illic (Cael., Fam. 8. 15. 2), qui (abl.) (Fam. 2. 16. 2), ast = at (Att. 1. 16. 17; 3. 15. 6), and absque = sine (Att. 1. 19. 1). These forms, as might be expected, are more frequent in the letters of the less cultivated or more colloquial of Cicero's correspondents. They are very rarely found in Cicero's own letters. Cf. note to isto, Epist. XLVIII. 2, and especially to mi, Epist. XCIII. 2.

82. Contracted Forms. Of most interest in this connection is the occurrence in the tenses of the perfect system of syncopated forms, which are used far more freely in epistolary than in formal Latin. In fact, the comparative frequency of such forms in a letter seems to depend upon its informality. In the seventeen letters from Caelius (Bk. 8, ad Fam.), which are very familiar in their tone, syncopation takes place in the perfect tenses fifty-five times, while full forms occur but four times. Typical examples from the Letters are con-suesti (Caecina, Fam. 6. 7. 6), pugnarunt (Cael., Fam. 8. 11. 2), peccasse (Q. Cic., Fam. 16. 26. 1), and deceram (Plancus, Fam. 10. 21. 2). About half of the 140 syncopated verb forms which occur in the letters addressed to Cicero belong to the first conjugation. Cf. also notes to decesse, Epist. XIX. 2, commorit, Epist. XLVIII. 1, and Ravennaest, Epist. XXXI. 4.

B. SYNTAX.

The Substantive.

83. (a) The accusative is used a little more freely in the Letters than in formal literature. It occurs after verbs of thought and the expression of thought, and after verbs signifying to strive, to laugh, to hope, etc.; e.g. hoc a te praesens contendissem (Cael., Fam. 8. 16. 4); Catulum mihi narras (Fam. 9. 15. 3); iurare Iovem Lapidem (Fam. 7. 12. 2); quam primum haec risum veni (Cael., Fam. 8. 14. 4). Two accusatives occur in a few instances after verbs signifying to seek, to warn, etc.; e.g. illud autem te peto (Dolabella, Fam. 9. 9. 2); quod et res publica me et nostra amicitia hortatur (Cato, Fam. 15. 5. 1); and an adverbial accusative made up of partem and the adjective magnam or maiorem or minimam is found several times; e.g. curare soles libenter, ut ego maiorem partem nihil curare (Cael., Fam. 8. 9. 3). Cf. note to quod me hortatur. Fpist. XXXVII. 1.

(b) With the exception of a few Grecisms, e.g. cogitatio dignissima tuae virtutis (Balbus, Att. 8. 15a. 1), the only thing noteworthy with respect to the genitive consists in the rather free use of the genitive of quality and the partitive genitive. Cf. aliquo terrarum, Epist. LXXXVI. 3 n.

(c) The dative of reference and the ethical dative are great favorites in the Letters, the latter especially with at, ecce, and hic. Perhaps in their use of the ethical dative Cicero and his correspondents have been surpassed only by the writers of comedy. Cf. ecce tibi et Bruti et tuae litterae (Att. 14. 19. 1); at ille tibi . . . pergit Brundisium (Att. 8. 8. 2). Cf. also notes to minori curae, Epist. XXV. 2, and to ecce, Epist. XXXV. 23.

(d) Certain public events, recurring at regular or irregular intervals, were of such importance in the eyes of the people that they were used in marking the date of an event.

This practice gives rise to such colloquial ablatives of time as novis magistratibus (Cael., Fam. 8. 10. 3), gladiatoribus (Pollio, Fam. 10. 32. 3), summis Circensibus (Cael., Fam. 8. 12. 3). The preposition in with the ablative is several times used instead of a conditional or temporal phrase. Cf. in victoria hominis necessarii = cum vicisset homo necessarius (Matius, Fam. 11. 28. 2).

The Verb.

84. (a) Passing over certain isolated cases which remind one of the Plautine usage, where the indicative occurs instead of the classical subjunctive, the use of the indicative in subordinate clauses in the indirect discourse and in questions of deliberation deserves special notice. Cf. scito Balbum tum fuisse Aquini, cum tibi est dictum (Fam. 16. 24. 2); nolito commoveri, si audieris me regredi, si forte Caesar ad me veniet (Pompeius, Att. 8. 12c. 2); quid mi auctor es? advolone an maneo? (Att. 13. 40. 2); cf. also notes to quam sollicitus sum, Epist. XLVIII. 1, and quam conversa res est, Epist. XLVI. 2.

(b) The present subjunctive of the definite second person singular in positive commands is of rather frequent occurrence, especially in closing formulae, e.g. ei dicas plurimam salutem et suavissimae Atticae (Att. 16. 7. 8); cautus sis, mi Tiro (Fam. 16. 9. 4). The future indicative and vis (second person singular of volo) with the infinitive are often used as polite substitutes for the imperative, e.g. tu interea non cessabis et ea quae habes instituta perpolies rosque diliges (Fam. 5. 12. 10); visne tu te, Servi, cohibere? (Sulpicius, Fam. 4. 5. 4).

The fact has been recently demonstrated¹ that, 'in the whole field of classical prose from the beginning of the Ciceronian period to the end of the Augustan period, there is but a single example of ne with the indefinite second person present subjunctive in a prohibition¹; and that, furthermore, prohibitions expressed by ne with the present or the perfect subjunctive, lack the dignity of the noli-construction, and are consequently confined to informal Latin.² Quite naturally, therefore, many of these prohibitions expressed by ne with the present subjunctive, and the majority of those expressed by ne with the perfect subjunctive, to be found in classical prose, are in the correspondence of Cicero,³ and twelve of the fourteen cases of the last-mentioned construction, which is the more colloquial of the two, occur in letters to Cicero's most familiar correspondents, e.g. 'tu, malum, inquires, 'actum ne agas' (Att. 9. 18. 3); iocum autem illius de sua egestate ne sis aspernatus (Q. fr. 2. 10 (12). 5).

¹ Elmer, The Latin Prohibitive.

(c) The so-called epistolary use of the tenses is the commonest peculiarity in the use of tenses to be found in the Letters. The writer of the letter imagines himself in the place of the recipient, and therefore uses a tense of past time in speaking of an event which was exactly or approximately contemporaneous with the writing of the letter. This usage is most frequent with verbs indicating the writing of a letter, or the sending of a letter or messenger,⁴ as ego tibi aliquid de meis scriptis mittam: nihil erat absoluti (Att. 1. 16. 18); quae mihi veniebant in mentem, quae ad te pertinere arbitrabar, quod in Ciliciam proficiscebam, existimavi me ad te oportere scribere (Fam. 2. 18. 3). Cf. also note to profecti sumus, Epist. XI. 3.

(d) Many interesting instances occur of the use of habere with the perfect participle passive, but if a few cases

¹ Elmer, p. 5.

² Elmer, pp. 17, 19.

³ Elmer, pp. 4, 17, 18.

⁴ For a more detailed statement of the principle, cf. Zimmermann's De epistulari temporum usu Ciceroniano.

be excepted, as, perhaps, si . . . quae Lepido digna sunt, perspecta habes (Lepidus, Fam. 10. 34. 4), this combination is not strictly synonymous with the perfect. Cf. note to sollicitum habent, Epist. LI. 1. For the use of the future perfect instead of the future, cf. note to dimisero, Epist. XV. 2.

The Adverb.

85. (a) One of the most noticeable characteristics in the syntax of the Letters consists in the use of the adverb with esse. This usage is frequent in colloquial Latin of all periods. It is commonly found with adverbs of place (prope, praesto, procul, etc.), and the general and particular adverbs of manner (ita, contra, aliter, bene, recte, tuto, etc.); e.g., sit modo recte in Hispaniis (Att. 10. 12a. 2); sed quidvis est melius quam sic esse ut sumus (Fam. 16. 12. 4). In this construction esse is something more than a simple copula.

(b) More rarely, but in a few clear cases, the adverb is used in place of an attributive adjective; e.g. meae ullae privatim iniuriae (Lentulus, Fam. 12. 14. 3). Cf. also note to circumcirca, Epist. LXXV. 4, and to sic, Epist. V. 3.

Parataxis.

86. The Letters, in common with other literary compositions which affect the sermo cotidianus, admit the paratactical arrangement more freely than formal Latin does. This fact is evident (1) in the use of coördination rather than subordination; e.g. hanc ergo plagam effugi per duos superiores Marcellorum consulatus, cum est actum de provincia Caesaris, nunc incido in discrimen ipsum (Att. 7. 1. 5), for cum effugissem, etc.; (2) in the paratactical use of the subjunctive in certain common formulae, e.g. fac diligas (Att. 3. 13. 2); (3) in the parenthetical use of certain verbs of thinking, e.g. sed, opinor, quiescamus (Att. 9. 6. 2); cuiusmodi velim, puto, quaeris (Cael., Fam. 8. 3. 3). Cf. also notes to ut facta est, Epist. V. 3, and opinor, Epist. XXXI. 4.

C. STYLE.

I. SINGLE WORDS.

87. The Substantive. (a) Abstract Nouns are used freely in the plural, not only in accordance with the principles stated by Draeger (*Hist. Synt.*² vol. I. pp. 18–21), but also to indicate persons, e.g. dignitates hominum, ‘persons of distinction.’

(b) Personal Pronouns, especially those of the first and second person singular, are used lavishly in many epistles, when neither contrast nor proper emphasis makes them necessary. Good illustrations of this pleonastic use are found in Fam. 4. 5. In this connection may be mentioned the occasional use of tute (Sulpicius, Fam. 4. 5. 5), and meme (Vatinius, Fam. 5. 9. 1).

88. The Adjective. (a) As elsewhere in colloquial Latin, adjectives, especially those expressing affection and admiration, are frequently joined to proper nouns, e.g. mi iucundissime Cicero (Dolabella, Fam. 9. 9. 3).

(b) Possessive Pronouns of the first or second person are applied in the Letters (1) to members of the writer’s family; (2) to members of the recipient’s family; (3) to those who are closely related to the writer or recipient; (4) to a person through the mention of whom a disagreeable subject is to be introduced, e.g. cf. Furnium nostrum (Caesar, Att. 9. 6a); and (5) to personal enemies or those held in contempt, e.g. Pompeius tuus (Cael., Fam. 8. 9. 5).

89. The Verb. Periphrastic expressions made up of facere and an object are often used instead of a simple verb, e.g. convicium facere (Att. 1. 14. 5). Items of news are frequently introduced by scito, e.g. scito C. Sempronium Rufum, mel ac delicias tuas, calumniam maximo plausu tulisse (Cael., Fam. 8. 8. 1); or by habeto and sic habeto, e.g. sic habeto, mi Tiro, neminem esse qui me amet, etc. (Fam. 16. 4. 4). Cf. notes to Epist. XXVI. 1, to testificor, Epist. L. 1, and to invidiam facere, Epist. LXXXVI. 6.

90. The Adverb. The colloquial use of intensive adverbs is one of the most striking stylistic peculiarities of the Letters. In this respect the language of Cicero's correspondence is even more remarkable than that of Roman comedy or satire. The adverbs which are used most frequently with an intensive force are bene, male, misere, nimio, perquam, pulchre, quam, sane, sane quam, satis, valde, valde quam, and vehementer; e.g. bene magna (C. Cassius, Fam. 12. 13. 4), misere nolle (C. Cassius, Fam. 12. 12. 3), pulchre intellegere (Brutus and Cassius, Fam. 11. 3. 3), sane quam sum gavisus (D. Brutus, Fam. 11. 13. 4), and vehementer four times (Cicero filius, Fam. 16. 21). Cf. also Index to the Notes under male, sane, etc.

91. The Preposition. De is used very frequently to introduce a new topic, e.g. de mandatis quod tibi curae fuit, est mihi gratum (Cicero filius, Fam. 16. 21. 8). Its place is sometimes taken by a clause with quod, e.g. quod ad rem publicam attinet, in unam causam omnis contentio conlecta est (Cael., Fam. 8. 11. 3); quod de agraria lege quaeris, sanè iam videtur refrixisse; quod me de Pompeii familiaritate obiurgas, nolim ita existimes, etc. (Att. 2. 1. 6).

92. The Interjection. A conversational tone is given to many of the familiar letters by the frequent use of interjections, e.g. ecce, heus, etc., some of which, as, for instance, hui (Epist. XLVIII. 2) and apage (Vatin., Fam. 5. 10a. 1), belong exclusively to vulgar Latin. Cf. also § 98.

II. PHRASEOLOGY.

93. Alliteration. While alliteration is found in the prose and poetry of all periods, it is especially common in ancient legal and religious formulae and in popular sayings. As the latter appear in large numbers in the more familiar letters, alliteration becomes one of the stylistic characteristics of Cicero's correspondence. Cf. cura, cogitatio, . . . commentatio causarum (Fam. 9. 20. 1); opera et oleum (Att. 2. 17. 1).

94. Asyndeton. In addition to asyndeton for emphasis and between clauses in lively narration, which is found in contemporaneous formal literature, Böckel¹ calls attention to two classes of cases in which asyndeton occurs in the Letters, as it does in other colloquial literature, with great frequency: (1) between two expressions of opposite meaning, e.g. palam secreto (Cael., Fam. 8. 1. 4), velit nolit (Q. fr. 3. 8. 4); (2) between two expressions of similar meaning, e.g. intercedendi impediendi (Fam. 8. 8. 6), certa clara (Att. 16. 13c. 2). Many of these expressions, like those discussed under Alliteration, are stereotyped popular phrases.

95. Brevity. Brevity is secured in many cases by the use of pregnant expressions, and by the omission of words and phrases not absolutely necessary to the sense. The words most commonly omitted are esse, dicere (many forms of both words are omitted), feri, aedes, and the pronoun as an object or as the subject of an infinitive.

In some instances more uncommon ellipses occur, e.g. ex Gallia [provincia] Lepidi (Pollio, Fam. 10. 33. 4); hoc magis animadversum est, quod intactus ab sibilo pervenerat Hortensius ad senectutem; sed tum tam bene (sibilatus est) ut in totam vitam quovis satis esset (Cael., Fam. 8. 2. 1). Cf. also § 75, and note to a Vestae, Epist. XIII. 2.

¹ Att. 8. 3. 3.

96. Extravagance in Expression. Formal literary compositions which are intended for publication, and which must therefore submit to the criticism of the general public, are more reserved in their expression than is the familiar intercourse between friends, whether carried on by conversation or correspondence. Abundant illustration of this fact is offered in the letters which passed between Cicero and his intimate friends, both in the use of single words and complete statements, e.g. immortalis = magnas (Plancus, Fam. 10. 11. 1): immortalis ago tibi gratias; infnitis = multis (Pollio, Fam. 10. 32. 4): infnitis pollicitationibus. Cf. also nam, cum maximam cepissem laetitiam ex humanissimi et carissimi patris epistula, tum vero iucundissimae tuae litterae cumulum mihi gaudii attulerunt (Cicero filius, Fam. 16. 21. 1). Cf. note to demiror, Epist. XXVI. 4.

97. Greek Words and Phrases. As Tyrrell remarks,¹ Greek words and phrases generally appear in the Correspondence as technical terms in philosophy, rhetoric, politics, medicine, and as slang phrases. Doubtless, also, as Cicero himself intimates, Greek was occasionally used as a possible protection if a letter should fall into the hands of an enemy. The Greek technical terms played the same part with reference to Latin that many of the corresponding technical terms borrowed from Latin play in modern composition, while the Greek popular expressions in the Letters may be compared with current French phrases. Cf. also note to παρησιαν, Epist. V. 8.

98. Exclamatory Questions. These questions belong to the language of everyday life, and almost every one of the familiar letters offers illustrations of the use of such exclamatory phrases as quid iam? cur hoc? etc. Cf. also § 92 and note to quid quaeris, Epist. V. 4.

99. Figurative Language. One of the most pronounced

¹ Vol. I.² pp. 66-7.

characteristics of colloquial language is its fondness for the picturesque. This is secured mainly by the use of metaphors. One of the commonest figures employed in the Letters is that drawn from heat and cold, — the former indicating activity, the latter inertia: e.g. illi rumores de comitiis Transpadanorum Cumarum tenuis caluerunt (Cael., Fam. 8. 1. 2); cum Romae a iudiciis forum refrixerit (Att. 1. 1. 2); scripsi Curionem valde frigere, iam calet (Cael., Fam. 8. 6. 5). Commercial, legal, and popular expressions, in a figurative sense, also occur in great variety. Cf. also notes to quas ego pugnas et quantas strages edidi, Epist. V. 1, and medicinam, Epist. IX. 2.

100. Polite Phrases. Such polite phrases as si me amas (e.g. Vatin., Fam., 5. 9. 1), amabo te (e.g. Cael., Fam. 8. 6. 5), and such terms of endearment as mel ac deliciae tuae (Cael., Fam. 8. 8. 1), are naturally of frequent occurrence. Apparently the Plautine sis (si vis) and sodes are not used. Cf. also notes to nostri amores, Epist. VII. 2, si me amas, Epist. XIII. 3, and molestum, Epist. XVIII. 10.

101. Pleonasm. While aiming at brevity in some cases, in others familiar speech indulges itself in duplicative or pleonastic expressions for the sake of emphasis or distinctness, in much the same way as it employs extravagant language. Instances from the Letters are rursus reducere (Balbus, Att. 8. 15a. 1); malle potius (Cato, Fam. 15. 5. 2); nostro iudicio . . . existimamus (Balbus and Oppius, Att. 9. 7a. 1), ostentare crebro (Dolabella, Fam. 9. 9. 2). On 'double expressions,' cf. note to oro obsecro, Epist. L. 1. See also § 79.

102. Popular and Proverbial Expressions. The informal character of the Letters is shown, not so much by the frequent use of these expressions, although their number in the aggregate is large, as by the fact that they are unaccompanied by any such apologetic phrase as ut aiunt, by which Cicero commonly introduces proverbial expressions and popular sayings in formal composition. Instances of popular expressions are duo parietes de eadem fidelia dealbare (Curius, Fam. 7. 29. 2); sus Minervam [docet] (Fam. 9. 18. 3); pictus et politus (Att. 2. 21. 4); sciens prudensque (Cael., Fam. 8. 16. 5).

103. Play upon Words, etc. In the same connection mention may be made of the fondness which Cicero and some of his correspondents show for playing upon words in their familiar letters. Illustrations are tu istic te Hateriano iure [jurisprudence] delectas, ego me hic Hirtiano [iure, 'sauce'] (Fam. 9. 18. 3); tu, qui ceteris cavere didicisti, in Britannia ne ab essedariis decipiaris caveto, 'you who have learned how to draw up securities for others, look out for your own security — and don't be taken in by the essedarii' (Fam. 7. 6. 2). Cicero's letters to his legal friend Trebatius (Fam. Bk. 7) are full of legal puns. Other good instances of similar witticisms are to be found in Att. 1. 16. 10 and in the letters to Paetus (Fam. Bk. 9). Cf. also notes to honoris causa, Epist. XIX. 2, and occidione occisum, XXXIV. 7. Cicero had a great reputation for wit of this sort (cf. Fam. 9. 16. 4), and after his death his secretary Tiro edited his witty sayings. Cf. Quint. 6. 3. 5; Macrob. Sat. 2. 1. 12.

104. In conclusion it may be noted that in his discussion of public and private affairs of a delicate character, Cicero often considered it discreet to express himself in language which would be unintelligible to every one save the person for whom the letter in question was intended. As he himself puts it in one case: sed haec scripsi properans et mehercule timide; posthac ad te aut, si perfidelem habebo cui dem, scribam plane omnia aut, si obscure scribam, tu tamen intelleges; in iis epistulis me Laelium, te Furium faciam; cetera erunt εν αἰνιγμοῖς (Att. 2. 19. 5). As a result of this policy there are some puzzling passages in the Letters which still frustrate the efforts of commentators to explain them. The difficulty of such passages is often increased by the ill-founded conjectures of early editors, or by the mistakes of copyists who were puzzled by obscure phrases or by unfamiliar Greek words. To these difficulties must be added the fact that in general only one side of the correspondence is preserved to us, and that brief reference is often made to persons and events about whose character our information can only be conjectural. In view of these facts, the success which has attended the interpretation of the Letters is remarkable.

CICERO'S LETTERS.

I. (Att. I. I.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Petitionis nostrae, quam tibi summae curae esse scio, huiusmodi ratio est, quod adhuc coniectura provideri possit. Prensatur unus P. Galba: sine fuco ac fallaciis more maiorum negatur. Vt opinio est hominum, non aliena rationi nostrae fuit illius haec praepropera prensatio; nam illi ita negant vulgo ut mihi se debere dicant: ita quiddam spero nobis profici, cum

I. Rome, July, 65 B.C. The tenth letter of the extant correspondence; the earlier letters being Att. I. 5, 6, 7 (68 B.C.); 9, 8, 10, 11 (67 B.C.); 3, 4 (66 B.C.). The letter is interesting for the light which it throws in general upon methods of electioneering at Rome, and in particular upon Cicero's political plans and prospects a year before the elections at which he intended to be a candidate for the consulship. On the elections, cf. also Herzog, I. pp. 654-661.

Cicero Attico sal.: cf. Intr. 62. This form of greeting, which precedes all the extant letters to Atticus, is probably not authentic.

i. petitionis: technical expression for a political canvass. Its position indicates that it is the subject of the letter. — summae

curae: cf. minori curae, Ep. XXV. 2 n. — prensatur, etc.: i.e. 'Galba alone is making an open canvass'; probably with reference to the practice of personally seeking votes or winning friends by shaking hands with, and talking with, voters in the Forum and other public places. — unus: Antonius and Cornificius have not yet begun an active canvass, although their intentions are known. On P. Sulpicius Galba, cf. Verr. i. 30. — fuco ac fallaciis: see Intr. 93; cf. below, more maiorum, praepropera prensatio, frontem ferias. — more maiorum: to be joined closely with negatur; cf. similar expressions, Fam. 7. 18. 3 ego te Balbo . . . more Romano commendabo, and Fam. 7. 5. 3. — praepropera: Galba is canvassing in July, 65 B.C., although the election hoc percrescit, plurimos nostros amicos inveniri. Nos autem initium prensandi facere cogitaramus eo ipso tempore quo tuum puerum cum his litteris proficisci Cincius dicebat, in campo comitiis tribunicis a. d. xvi Kalend. Sextiles. Competitores, qui certi esse videantur, Galba et Antonius et Q. Cornificius — puto te in hoc aut risisse aut ingemuisse; ut frontem ferias, sunt qui etiam Caesonium putent. Aquilium non arbitramur, qui denegat et iuravit morbum et illud suum regnum iudiciale opposuit; Catilina, si iudicatum erit meridie non lucere, certus erit competitor; de Aufidio et de Palicano non puto te exspectare dum will not take place before July, 64 B.C. — cogitaramus and dicebat: epistolary tenses, representing respectively the perfect and present; cf. Intr. 84 c. The statement is put in the form in which the facts would present themselves to Atticus when the letter should be received. — puerum, servant; referring to the tabellarius (see Intr. 64). — Cincius: one of the agents (procuratores) of Atticus. — a. d. xvi Kalend. Sextiles: this was not the formal announcement (professio) on Cicero's part of his intention of standing for the consulship, as the latter would be made on the day on which notice of the election was given, i.e. three nundinae, or 17 days, before the day of the election. Cf. Herzog, I. p. 656, 1092, n. 2. — Antonius: Cicero's colleague in 63 B.C. — Q. Cornificius: the father of the orator and politician Q. Cornificius, to whom Fam. 12. 17–30 are addressed. — risisse aut ingemuisse: on hearing that such nobodies aspire to the consulship. The situation, while humorous, is also one to excite the indignation of a patriot. — frontem ferias: cf. Brut. 278 nulla perturbatio animi, nulla corporis, frons non percussa, non femur. Cicero speaks of Caesonius in a very different way in Verr. i. 29 homo in rebus iudicandis spectatus et cognitus. — Aquilium: sc. competitorum fore. C. Aquilius Gallus was praetor with Cicero in 66 B.C. — iuravit morbum: the simple acc. after iurare is rare. The phrase is probably a legal one; cf. Fam. 8. 8. 3 cum calumniam iurasset. Iurare morbum means 'to take an oath that one is ill' as an excuse for the non-performance of some duty. — regnum iudiciale: Aquilius was a well-known jurist (pro Caec. 77), too much occupied with legal business to engage in politics. Cf. regno forensi, Ep. LXII. 1. — iudicatum erit: in the approaching trial of Catiline for misappropriation of public funds. The accuser was Cicero's subsequent enemy Clodius. — Aufidio: a former praetor in Asia (cf. pro Flacco, 45). — Palicano: a tribune in 71 B.C. Cicero's actual opponents at the polls were Galba and Catiline, patriscribam. De iis qui nunc petunt, Caesar certus putatur; Thermus cum Silano contendere existimatur, qui sic inopes et ab amicis et existimatione sunt ut mihi videatur non esse ἀδύνατον Curium obducere, sed hoc praeter me nemini videtur. Nostris rationibus maxime conducere videtur Thermum fieri cum Caesare; nemo est enim ex iis qui nunc petunt qui, si in nostrum annum reciderit, firmior candidatus fore videatur, propterea quod curator est viae Flaminiae, quae tum erit absoluta sane facile; eum libenter nunc Caesari consulem cians; C. Antonius, Q. Cornificius, L. Cassius Longinus, and C. Licinius Sacerdos, plebeians (cf. Asc. con. argum. to Or. in toga cand.).

2. qui nunc petunt, who are candidates this year. — Caesar: L. Julius Caesar, uncle of Antony the triumvir, and, by the second marriage of his sister Julia, brother-in-law of Lentulus, the Catilinarian conspirator. He tried unsuccessfully to mediate in 43 B.C. between the senate and Antony (Phil. 8. 1). He was placed by Antony upon the list of the proscribed in return for the consent of Octavius to the murder of Cicero, and escaped death only through the devotion of his sister Julia. — certus: here 'sure to win.' This expectation was realized. — Thermus cum Silano: the consuls for 64 B.C. (cf. Ep. II.) were L. Julius Caesar and C. Marcius Figulus, so that either another candidate than the three mentioned here came to the front and was elected, or else Thermus became Figulus by adoption and held the office under that name. It was D. Junius Silanus who, as consul designatus, and therefore first speaker in the senate, proposed that Lentulus and his fellow-conspirators should be put to death (Cat. 4. 7). — Thermus . . . existimatur: i.e. it is expected that there will be a hard fight between Thermus and Silanus. — ab amicis: ab is not infrequently used to introduce a limitation with adjectives which signify power, equipment, or their opposites, e.g. ab equitatu firmus, Ep. XCVIII. 2; ab omni re sumus paratiores, Fam. 10. 8. 6, and elsewhere. — Curium obducere: i.e. to run Curius in opposition. Curius, evidently a man held in light esteem, may have been the Quintus Curius who informed Cicero of Catiline's plans. — Thermum fieri: sc. consulem. — si in nostrum annum reciderit, if he goes over to my year, i.e. to the election for 63 B.C. — viae Flaminiae: the great northern thoroughfare from Rome to the Adriatic. The completion (absoluta) of this road would, as Cicero thinks, give Thermus political prestige and influence, and therefore make him a dangerous opponent a year later, although at the time of writing he has few followers (inopes ab amicis). "The great Roman roads, such as the via Appia, Flaminia, etc., were called viae praetoriae or consula- accuderim. Petitorum haec est adhuc informata cogitatio. Nos in omni munere candidatorio fungendo summam adhibebimus diligentiam et fortasse, quoniam videtur in suffragiis multum posse Gallia, cum Romae a iudiciis forum refrixerit, excurremus mense Septembri legati ad Pisonem, ut Ianuario revertamur. Cum perspexero voluntates nobilium, scribam ad te. Cetera spero prolixa esse, his dumtaxat urbanis competitoribus; illam manum tu mihi cura ut praestes, quoniam propius abes, Pompei, nostri amici: nega me ei iratum

res, and were under the charge of curatores." Tyrrell from Momm. St. R. II³. p. 454. — accuderim: the conjecture of Boot (see Crit. App.); a Plautine word. — informata cogitatio, general impression. — Gallia (Cispadana): it possessed the right of suffrage; cf. Phil. 2. 76 municipia coloniasque Galliae a qua nos . . . petere consulatum solebamus. — cum . . . refrixerit, when the heat of business in the courts at Rome shall have cooled down. On refrixerit, cf. Intr. 99. — mense Septembri: the ludi Magni or Romani began Sept. 4 and lasted 15 days, and later in the year came the ludi Plebei, the Saturnalia, etc., so that little legal business could be done between Sept. 1 and Jan. 1. — legati: the reference is to a legatio libera, an unofficial embassy. Senators favored with such a privilege could travel for their own pleasure or profit with the title and the rights of a legatus, and receive supplies from government agents without performing any official duties. The provinces found this senatorial junketing such a burden that Cicero in his consulship placed certain limitations upon it. — Pisonem: proconsul in Gallia Narbonensis. He was afterwards defended by Cicero against a charge of maladministration (repetundae) while governor of this province. — voluntates nobilium: the aristocracy were probably at this moment little inclined to support Cicero's candidacy, and voted for him the next year only because he was the candidate most likely to defeat Catiline and the democrats. — his . . . competitoribus, provided that civilians are my only rivals; for if some one returns from a successful military campaign to stand for the consulship, the result will be more uncertain. — manum: the support of Pompey. By the provisions of the Manilian law, Pompey had the year before been given charge of the war against Mithridates. Cicero's advocacy of that bill would naturally secure for him Pompey's support in the consular election. Atticus, who was at this time in Athens, and therefore nearer than Cicero to Pompey, was asked to make sure of Pompey's assistance; or, perhaps, as Tyrrell thinks, manum refers to the followers of Pompey, some of whom might return to Rome in time for the election.

fore, si ad mea comitia non venerit. Atque haec 3
huiusmodi sunt. Sed est quod abs te mihi ignosci pervelim. Caecilius, avunculus tuus, a P. Vario cum magna pecunia fraudaretur, agere coepit cum eius fra-tre A. Caninio Satyro de iis rebus quas eum dolo malo mancipio accepisse de Vario diceret; una agebant ceteri creditores, in quibus erat L. Lucullus et P. Scipio et is quem putabant magistrum fore, si bona veni-

3. pervelim: cf. Intr. 77. — Caecilius: for the relations existing between Caecilius and Atticus and the desire of Atticus to continue on good terms with his uncle, cf. Nepos, Att. 5 habebat avunculum Q. Caecilium, equitem Romanum, familiarem L. Luculli, divitem, difficillima natura. Cuius sic asperitatem veritus est, ut, quem nemo ferre posset, huius sine offensi-one ad summam senectutem retinu-erit benevolentiam. Quo facto tulit pietatis fructum. Caecilius enim moriens testamento adoptavit eum heredemque fecit ex dodrante; ex qua hereditate accepit circiter centiens sestertium. Cf. also Intr. 58.
Cicero's dilemma is therefore a serious one. If he accedes to the request of Caecilius, and appears against Satyrus, he will antagonize Satyrus and the latter's friend Domitius, who are at present very friendly to him and would be of great service to him politically. If he declines to accommodate Caecilius, he will offend the crabbed old gentleman and Atticus in some degree, and perhaps jeopardize the chances of Atticus for his uncle's property. Caecilius died five years later (Att. 3. 20. 1). — agere . . .
cum, has begun a suit against. — fratre, cousin; cf. Att. 1. 5. 1. — dolo malo: the formulae de dolo malo, first drawn up by the jurisconsult Aquilius Gallus (§ 1), were used in actions for damages on the ground of fraud. Cum ex eo (Aquilio) quaereretur quid esset dolus malus, respondebat, cum esset aliud simulatum, aliud actum

(Cic. de Off. 3. 60). In this case Varius would seem to have transferred his property to Satyrus, to save it from seizure by the creditors. — mancipio accepisse, to have purchased. mancipio (manus + capio) refers to the practice on the part of the purchaser of laying his hand upon the article purchased in the presence of five witnesses, as the binding act in his acquisition of the article. — dice-ret: 'by a carelessness of expression, the verb of saying or thinking is sometimes put in the subjunctive instead of the thing said' (Tyrrell). — L. Lucullus: Pom-pey's predecessor in command of the army acting against Mithridates. — P. Scipio: best known as commander of the Pompeian forces at the battle of Thapsus in 46 B.C. Cf. Bell. Afr. 79-86.
— magistrum (sc. auctionis): the bids at auctions were received and called out by the praeco, but the general management of such a sale was in the hands of a magister auc-tionis, who kept a record of the articles sold and in general was the legal representative of the owner.

rent, L. Pontius. Verum hoc ridiculum est de magistro. Nunc cognosce rem. Rogavit me Caecilius ut adessem contra Satyrum. Dies fere nullus est quin hic Satyrus domum meam ventitet; observat L. Domitium maxime, me habet proximum; fuit et mihi et Q. 4 fratri magno usui in nostris petitionibus. Sane sum perturbatus cum ipsius Satyri familiaritate, tum Domiti, in quo uno maxime ambitio nostra nititur. Demonstravi haec Caecilio; simul et illud ostendi, si ipse unus cum illo uno contenderet, me ei satisfacturum fuisse, nunc in causa universorum creditorum, hominum praesertim amplissimorum, qui sine eo quem Caecilius suo nomine perhiberet facile causam communem sustinerent, aequum esse eum et officio meo consulere et tempori. Durius accipere hoc mihi visus est quam vellem et quam homines belli solent, et postea prorsus ab instituta nostra paucorum dierum consuetudine longe refugit. Abs te peto ut mihi hoc ignoscas et me existimes humanitate esse prohibitum, ne contra amici summam existimationem miserrimo eius tempore

— L. Pontius (Aquila): in later years an active opponent of Caesar and one of the conspirators against him. He was killed near Mutina, in the battle against Antony, in which Hirtius fell (Fam. 10. 33. 4). — adessem: in the legal sense of appearing as an advocatus. — L. Domitium (Ahenobarbum): best known as the commandant of the fortress of Corfinium in 49 B.C. The loss of this town through the irresolution and cowardice of Domitius removed the main obstacle in the way of Caesar's march to Rome. The intense interest felt by the Pompeians at that time in his fate is plainly indicated by Att.

8. 12 c; 8. 7; 8. 8. He was killed while fleeing from Pharsalus. — in nostris petitionibus: Marcus Cicero had been quaestor, aedile, and praetor; Quintus had probably held the quaestorship and aedileship.

4. ambitio nostra, my political hopes. — illo: i.e. Satyro. — officio . . . tempori, my duty (to Satyrus) and (the exigency of) my position (as a candidate). — homines belli, gentlemen. — abs te: archaic, and more frequent in Cicero's earlier writings (cf. § 3). In later years he inclines to a te. — ne . . . venirem: a conviction for dolus malus would have been followed by in- venirem, cum is omnia sua studia et officia in me con-tulisset; quod si voles in me esse durior, ambitionem putabis mihi obstitisse; ego autem arbitrator, etiamsi id sit, mihi ignoscendum esse, ἐπεὶ οὐχ ἰερήϊον οὐδὲ βοεῖην; vides enim in quo cursu simus et quam omnes gratias

non modo retinendas, verum etiam acquirendas putemus. Spero tibi me causam probasse, cupio quidem certe. Hermathena tua valde me delectat et posita 5 ita belle est ut totum gymnasium eius ἀνάθημα esse videatur. Multum te amamus.

II. (Att. 1. 2.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

L. Iulio Caesare C. Marcio Figulo consulibus filiolo 1

famia (Tyrrell). — ἐπεὶ οὐχ ἰερήϊον οὐδὲ βοεῖην: II. XXII. 159. The meaning is 'since it is no small prize I fight for.'

5. Hermathena: a double-faced statue or bust, similar to those found in excavations to-day. One face was that of Hermes, the other that of Athena. — ut totum gymnasium . . . videatur: this is the MS. reading, but is scarcely intelligible; perhaps it means, 'so that the whole gymnasium seems to be an offering to it' (Watson). — multum te amamus: a colloquial expression of gratitude.

II. Rome, the latter part of 65 B.C. The historical value of this letter springs from the fact that it fixes the date of the birth of Cicero's son (65 B.C.), that it contains the main point in the evidence with reference to Cicero's defense of Catiline against the charge of misappropriation of public money, and accounts for the absence of letters between Cicero and Atticus from 64-62 B.C. inclusive (cf. last sentence).

1. L. Iulio Caesare C. Marcio Figulo consulibus: the natural meaning would be, 'in the consulship of,' etc., and would make 64 B.C. the date of this letter, but the reference to the approaching trial of Catiline proves that it must have been written in 65 B.C., after the election of the new consuls, as the trial was begun and finished in that year. The brevity and apparent lack of feeling in Cicero's announcement to his most intimate friend of the birth of his son has called forth severe criticisms from his enemies, and apologies from his friends (cf. Abeken, pp. 33, 34) — quite without reason. Both parties have failed to see the gay humor of the passage which couples this important event in his family life with the most important event in the political world. For an account of the new consuls, cf. Ep. I. — filiolo: for an account me auctum scito salva Terentia. Abs te tamdiu nihil litterarum! Ego de meis ad te rationibus scripsi antea diligenter. Hoc tempore Catilinam, competitorum nostrum, defendere cogitamus. Iudices habemus quos volumus, summa accusatoris voluntate. Spero, si absolutus erit, coniunctiorem illum nobis fore in ratione of him, see Intr. 54. — scito, let me inform you; a favorite expression borrowed from colloquial Latin, for introducing a bit of news. Cf. the use of habeto and sic habeto, Ep. XXVI. 1 n. — Terentia: cf. Intr. 52. — abs te . . . ego, not a word from YOU in so long a time, while I, etc. For abs te, cf. Ep. I. 4 n. — hoc tempore . . . cogitamus: it will never be certainly known whether Cicero did defend Catiline in 65 B.C. or not, but this passage certainly indicates such an intention on his part, and there is no satisfactory reason for believing that he did not carry out his purpose. The fact that Cicero believed in Catiline's guilt (cf. Ep. I. 1) would not, perhaps, have deterred him, as he in later years undertook the defense of Vatinius, Gabinius, and C. Antonius, equally notorious men, under still more questionable circumstances, when political considerations, as in this case, made it seem advisable. For the arguments in support of the opposite view, cf. Tyrrell, I², pp. 8, 9. — summa accusatoris voluntate: the charge was brought by P. Clodius. The accuser had the right of challenging peremptorily a certain number of jurors, and the phrase quoted above would indicate that Clodius had availed himself of this privilege in rejecting jurors who were likely to vote for a conviction. If this view be correct, Clodius was really acting in the interest of Catiline in bringing the charge, since if Catiline were acquitted, he could not be put on trial again. This method of protecting criminals, called praevaricatio, became commoner in later years (cf. Plin. Epist. 3. 9. 33–35). The method to be employed in securing an acquittal for Catiline casts more of a shadow upon Cicero's honor than the fact that he intended to undertake or did undertake the defense.

 2 petitionis; sin aliter acciderit, humaniter feremus. Tuo adventu nobis opus est maturo; nam prorsus summa hominum est opinio tuos familiares, nobiles homines,

2. tuos familiares: probably ironical, although it is true that Atticus was intimate with many of the prominent men in Rome (cf. Nep. Atticus, 15, 16, 18). — nobiles homines . . . fore: referring probably to the aristocracy as a body; cf. voluntates nobilium, Ep. I. 2 n, and the following significant utterance in regard to the attitude of the Optimates from the de Petitione Consulatus, 13, written by Quintus to his brother a few months later, noli putare eos, qui sunt eo honore usi, non videre, tu cum idem sis adeptus, quid dignitatis habiturus sis: eos vero, qui consularibus familiis nati locum maiorum consecuti non sunt, adversarios honori nostro fore. Ad eorum voluntatem mihi conciliandam maximo te mihi usui fore video. Quare Ianuario mense, ut constituisti, cura ut Romae sis.

III. (Fam. 5. 7.)

M. TVLLIVS M. F. CICERO S. D. CN. POMPEIO CN. F. MAGNO IMPERATORI.

S. t. e. q. v. b. e. Ex litteris tuis, quas publice misisti, cepi una cum omnibus incredibilem voluptatem; tantam enim spem oti ostendisti quantam ego semper omnibus te uno fretus pollicebar. Sed hoc scito, tuos suspicio tibi, nisi si qui admodum te amant, invidere. Hortensius and Crassus may have been particularly in Cicero's thoughts. Besides the feeling of distrust which certain members of the aristocracy cherished toward this novus homo, many of them were offended by his previous democratic tendencies as shown, for instance, in the prosecution of Verres, and by his willingness to rob the oligarchy of its power for the benefit of Pompey in the case of the Manilian law. Cf. de Pet. Cons. 4, 5; Sall. Cat. 23 end, and Intr. 4.—Ianuario . . . Romae sis: the next letter to Atticus (Att. 1. 12) was written in 61 B.C. The break in the correspondence is explained by the presence of Atticus in Rome or its vicinity.

III. Rome, Apr., 62 B.C. In Dec., 63 B.C. Cicero had sent to Pompey, who was in the East, a somewhat lengthy letter (now lost), in which he had given a résumé of the achievements of his consulship. This letter, written probably in that egotistical vein which characterizes many of Cicero's utterances in regard to his consulship, apparently offended Pompey, who replied in a brief, unsympathetic letter. At the same time, Pompey sent a letter to the senate containing no word of commendation for Cicero. The letter before us was written upon the receipt of these two epistles. For the formula of greeting, see Intr. 62.

1. S. t. e. q. v. b. e.: for si tu exercitusque valetis, bene est; a stereotyped form of salutation which Cicero uses only in official or formal letters, or in replying to some one who has employed it in writing to him. Intr. 62.—publice, officially, to the magistrates and senate. Cf. Fam. 15. 1.—tantam . . . spem oti: along with the carrying out of other projects, Pompey had in 64 B.C. reduced Syria and Cilicia into provinces, so that his work of subjugation in the East was practically ended.—pollicebar: in particular in the oration for the Manilian law.—

veteres hostis, novos amicos vehementer litteris per-2 culsos atque ex magna spe deturbatos iacere. Ad me autem litteras quas misisti, quamquam exiguam significationem tuae erga me voluntatis habebant, tamen mihi scito iucundas fuisse; nulla enim re tam laetari soleo quam meorum officiorum conscientia, quibus si quando non mutue respondetur, apud me plus officii residere facillime patior. Illud non dubito, quin, si te mea summa erga te studia parum mihi adiunxerint, res p.
 3 nos inter nos conciliatura coniuncturaque sit. Ac, ne ignores quid ego in tuis litteris desiderarim, scribam aperte, sicut et mea natura et nostra amicitia postulat.
 Res eas gessi, quarum aliquam in tuis litteris et nostrae necessitudinis et rei p. causa gratulationem expectavi, quam ego abs te praetermissam esse arbitror quo verebatur ne cuius animum offenderes; sed scito ea, quae nos pro salute patriae gessimus, orbis terrae iudicio ac testimonio comprobari, quae, cum veneris, tanto consilio tantaque animi magnitudine a me gesta esse cognosces, ut tibi, multo maiori quam Africanus fuit, veteres hostis, novos amicos: the democrats, probably, to whose support Pompey owed his present position. Probably the friendly tone of Pompey's letter to the senate made them fear an alliance between Pompey and that body. — iacere, are overwhelmed.

2. mea . . . studia: Cicero's efforts in behalf of the Manilian law, his advocacy of a senatus consultum decreeing a thanksgiving of 10 days in honor of Pompey's victories in the East (cf. Prov. Cons. 27), as well as various complimentary public utterances, e.g. Cat. 4. 21.

3. in tuis litteris: the clause

ne . . . offenderes shows that Cicero is referring to Pompey's letter to the senate (Böckel). — ne . . . offenderes: those who sympathized with the Catilinarian conspirators, those who on constitutional grounds opposed their execution, the democrats in general, and Cicero's enemies in particular, would have all taken umbrage if Pompey had approved Cicero's course in 63 B.C. — orbis terrarum indicates the Roman world. The phrase employed here is used, therefore, to exaggerate Cicero's fame. — Africanus . . . Laelium: Böckel quotes, in explanation of iam me, non multo minorem quam Laelium, facile et in re p. et in amicitia adiunctum esse patiari.

IV. (Fam. 7. 23.)

CICERO S. D. M. FADIO GALLO.

Tantum quod ex Arpinati veneram cum mihi a te litterae redditae sunt, ab eodemque accepì Aviani litteras, in quibus hoc inerat liberalissimum, nomina se facturum, cum venisset, qua ego vellem die. Fac, quaeso, qui ego sum, esse te: estne aut tui pudoris aut nostri primum rogare de die, deinde plus annua postulare? Sed essent, mi Galle, omnia facilia, si et ea mercatus esses quae ego desiderabam, et ad eam summam quam volueram; ac tamen ista ipsa, quae te emisse scribis, non solum rata mihi erunt, sed etiam grata; plane enim intellego te non modo studio, sed

Cicero's meaning, de Re Pub. 1. 18 fuit enim hoc in amicitia quasi quoddam ius inter illos, ut militiae propter eximiam belli gloriam Africanum ut deum coleret Laelius, domi vicissim Laelium, quod aetate antecederat, observaret in parentis loco Scipio. — Laelium: attracted into acc. by me.

IV. Rome, 62 B.C. M. Fadius Gallus was a personal friend of Cicero, to whom he wrote Fam. 7. 23-27. Cf. Fam. 13. 59 M. Fadium unice diligo summaque mihi cum eo consuetudo et familiaritas est pervetus. He was a man of artistic and literary tastes. Like Cicero, he wrote a eulogy of Cato. Cf. Ep. LXXXI. 2.

1. tantum quod: equivalent to commodum; cf. Att. 15. 13. 7. This usage, perhaps a colloquial

one, became comparatively frequent in post-Augustan prose, e.g. navis Alexandrina, quae tantum quod affulerat, Suet. Aug. 98. —

Arpinati: Cicero inherited his villa at Arpinum from his father (de Leg. Agr. 3. 8). He had fitted it up in imitation of the villa of Atticus at Buthrotum. — Aviani: as the sequel shows, Gallus had made certain purchases of Avianius for Cicero, and Avianius generously offered to delay recording them until it should suit Cicero's convenience to pay. Nomina facere is a commercial expression, meaning to set down items of debt in an account book. — rogare de die (sc. solutionis): 'anno asker credit' (Tvrrell). — mi Galle: cf. mi Pomponi, Ep. X n.

etiam amore usum, quae te delectarint, hominem, ut ego semper iudicavi, in omni iudicio elegantissimum, 2 quae me digna putaris, coemisse. Sed velim maneat Damasippus in sententia; prorsus enim ex istis emptionibus nullam desidero; tu autem ignarus instituti mei, quanti ego genus omnino signorum omnium non aestimo, tanti ista quattuor aut quinque sumpsisti. Bacchas istas cum Musis Metelli comparas. Quid simile? primum ipsas ego Musas numquam tanti putassem, atque id fecissem Musis omnibus approbantibus, sed tamen erat aptum bibliothecae studiisque nostris congruens; Bacchis vero ubi est apud me locus? 'At pulchellae sunt.' Novi optime et saepe vidi: nominatim tibi signa mihi nota mandassem, si probassem; ea enim signa ego emere soleo, quae ad similitudinem gymnasiorum exornent mihi in palaestra locum. Martis vero signum quo mihi, pacis auctori? Gaudeo nullum Saturni signum fuisse; haec enim duo signa putarem mihi aes alienum attulisse. Mercuri mallet aliquod fuisset: 3 felicius, puto, cum Aviano transigere possemus. Quod

2. Damasippus had apparently promised to take the statues if they did not please Cicero. — genus omnino signorum omnium. all the statues in the world. — Musis Metelli: statues in the possession of Metellus. — tanti putassem: sc. as you paid for your Bacchae. — Musis omnibus approbantibus: the Muses themselves would not have been offended at being rated at a lower price than you paid for the Bacchae. — erat, would have been. — Martis . . . pacis auctori: the Bacchae in Cicero's study would be absurd enough, but the statue of Mars would be still more ridiculous for a man who prided himself upon being a dux togatus. Cf. Cat. 3. 23 togati me uno togato duce et imperatore vicistis. — aes alienum: the quaint comment of Manutius is: Martis enim et Saturni signa nihil prosperum promittere, astrologi confirmant: stulte, qui divinationem rerum futurarum, quae soli Deo notae sunt, ad suam scientiam revocant. — Mercuri: the god of good luck, especially in money matters; cf. Hor. Sat. 2. 3. 68 reiecta praeda, quam praesens Mercurius fert; Pers. 6. 62 sum tibi Mercurius; venio deus huc ego ut ille pingitur; and Plautus Amph. 1-14. — felicius . . . trans-

tibi destinaras trapezophorum, si te delectat, habebis; sin autem sententiam mutasti, ego habebō scilicet. Ista quidem summa ne ego multo libentius emerim deversorium Tarracinae, ne semper hospiti molestus sim. Omnino liberti mei video esse culpam, cui plane res certas mandaram, itemque Iuni, quem puto tibi notum esse, Aviani familiarem. Exhedria quaedam mihi nova sunt instituta in porticula Tusculani: ea volebam tabellis ornare; etenim, si quid generis istiusmodi me delectat, pictura delectat. Sed tamen, si ista mihi sunt habenda, certiozem velim me facias, ubi sint, quando arcessantur, quo genere vecturae; si enim Damasippus in sententia non manebit, aliquem Pseudodamasippum vel cum iactura reperiemus. Quod ad me de domo scribis iterum, iam id ego proficiscens mandaram meae Tulliae; ea enim ipsa hora acceperam tuas litteras. Egeram etiam cum tuo Nicia, quod is utitur, ut scis, familiariter Cassio. Vt redii autem, prius quam tuas legi has proximas litteras, quaesivi de mea Tullia quid egisset.

igere possemus: i.e. with the help of Mercury, the god of bargains.

3. trapezophorum: strictly a 'table bearer,' but here, as in a few other passages, it seems to indicate the table itself, perhaps because the support or legs were often made of marble or ivory (Juv. II. 122 ff.) cut into fantastic shapes, e.g. of griffins or dolphins, and thus formed the most conspicuous and ornamental part of the table. Cf. also Tyrrell, II. p. 239. — ne ego: cf. ne, Ep. XVII. 2 n. — deversorium: the meagre hotel accommodations in Italy (cf. Hor. Sat. I. 5, especially vv. 71-76) made it desirable for wealthy people to own houses at which they could stop for a night while journeying from one place to another. Cicero had such lodges apparently at Sinuessa, Cales, and Anagnia. — exhedria: these were rooms in private houses set apart for lectures and discussions. Cf. also Tyrrell, II. p. 241. — Pseudodamasippum: some imitator of Damasippus. Damasippus (perhaps only a type) was notorious 20 years later, in Horace's time, for his crazy enthusiasm in collecting bric-a-brac and statues; cf. Hor. Sat. 2. 3. 18 ff.

4. Cassio: Gallus had probably rented or bought a house from Cassius (Tyrrell conjectures Crasso, as the latter had a sister named

Per Liciniam se egisse dicebat (sed opinor Cassium uti non ita multum sorore); eam porro negare se audere, cum vir abesset — est enim profectus in Hispaniam Dexius —, illo et absente et insciente migrare. Est mihi gratissimum tanti a te aestimatam consuetudinem vitae victusque nostri, primum ut eam domum sumeres, ut non modo prope me, sed plane mecum habitare posses, deinde ut migrare tanto opere festines. Sed ne vivam, si tibi concedo, ut eius rei tu cupidior sis quam ego sum: itaque omnia experiar; video enim quid mea intersit, quid utriusque nostrum. Si quid egero, faciam ut scias. Tu et ad omnia rescribes et quando te exspectem facies me, si tibi videtur, certiore.

V. (Att. I. 16.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

1 Quæris ex me quid acciderit de iudicio, quod tam præter opinionem omnium factum sit, et simul vis

Licina). Licinia, the sister of Cassius, is at present occupying the house, and does not wish to make a change during the absence of her husband in Spain. — ne vivam: Cicero's favorite asseverations in the letters are moriar, si (Att. 5. 20. 6); ne vivam, si (Att. 4. 17. 5); and ne sim salvus, si (Att. 16. 13 A.1). His less elegant correspondent Cælius writes peream, si (Ep. XLVIII. 2). Horace uses the latter expression in Sat. 2. 1. 6 peream male, si; cf. also dispeream, ni, 1. 9. 47.

V. Rome, May, 61 B.C. This letter tells the story of the trial of Clodius for sacrilege. Cf. also Intr. 10 and Att. I. 13. 3. Knowing the conclusive evidence against Clodius, the indignation of the pontifices, and the determined stand taken by the senate in ordering an inquiry, Atticus is surprised to hear of his acquittal, and has asked for an explanation. Cicero in this letter replies to that inquiry, and explains the condition of things in the commonwealth and his own attitude towards Clodius. For further details of the sacrilege of Clodius, cf. Att. I. 12. 3; I. 14. 5. On Caesar's attitude during the trial, cf. Suet. Jul. 74 testis citatus, negavit se quicquam comperisse, quamvis et mater Aurelia et soror Julia apud eosdem iudices omnia ex fide rettulissent. On the attitude of Pompey, cf. Att. I. 14. 1, 2. The conduct of scire quo modo ego minus quam soleam proeliatum sim. Respondebo tibi ὕστερον πρότερον Ὀμηρικῶς. Ego enim, quam diu senatus auctoritas mihi defendenda fuit, sic acriter et vehementer proeliatum sum ut clamor concursusque maxima cum mea laude fierent. Quod si tibi umquam sum visus in re publica fortis, certe me in illa causa admiratus esses. Cum enim ille ad conationes confugisset, in iisque meo nomine ad invidiam uteretur, di immortales! quas ego pugnans et quantas criminal trials in a Roman court was entrusted to the praetor, his consilium, and the iudices. The praetor passed upon questions of law, in the decision of which he was assisted by the consilium, a body of jurists called in to give legal advice, while questions of fact were relegated to the iudices. A list of several hundred iudices, chosen under the lex Aurelia of 70 B.C. from the ranks of the senators, knights, and tribuni aerarii (fiscal officials of the tribes; cf. Momm. St. R. III. 189-196), was published at the beginning of each year. From this list the iudices for a particular trial were selected by lot. A verdict rendered by a majority of them was valid.

1. quaeris: Atticus in his letter had asked Cicero two questions: (1) why the trial of Clodius resulted so unexpectedly in an acquittal; (2) why Cicero proved so poor a fighter. Cicero replies to the second question first, the answer extending to the sentence, itaque, si causam, etc., 2, and then to the first one. He applies to this inverted order the phrase ὕστερον πρότερον Ὀμηρικῶς, because, in the first book of the Odyssey, Odysseus is introduced in the midst of his wanderings, his previous adventures being narrated in subsequent books.— quod . . . factum sit: the subjunctive is used because the reason is urged by Atticus.— senatus auctoritas: cf. Att. 1. 14. 5 cum decerneretur frequenti senatu, contra pugnante Pisone, ad pedes omnium singillatim accidente Clodio, ut consules populum cohortarentur ad rogationem accipiendam. — ille: Clodius. — cum . . . uteretur: after the passage in the senate of the resolution given above, Clodius contiones miserarum habebat, in quibus Lucullum, Hortensium, C. Pisonem, Messallam consulem contumeliose laedebat; me tantum 'comperisse' omnia criminabatur (Att. 1. 14. 5). The word 'comperi' Cicero had unfortunately used so often with reference to the movements of the Catilinarian conspirators (cf. in Cat. 1. 10 and 3. 4) that it had evidently become a byword with his enemies, and was used by Clodius in taunting him; cf. also Fam. 5. 5. 2.— quas ego, etc.: cf. also proeliatum above. Just such extravagant figures drawn from military life as Plautus puts into the mouth of the scheming slave or parasite who has outgenerated his opponent; cf. e.g. Capt. 153, M. G. 815, 1156, and the striking passage strages edidi! quos impetus in Pisonem, in Curionem, in totam illam manum feci! quo modo sum insectatus levitatem senum, libidinem iuventutis! Saepe, ita me di iuvent, te non solum auctorem consiliorum meorum, verum etiam spectatorem pugnarum mirificarum

 2 desideravi. Postea vero quam Hortensius excogitavit ut legem de religione Fufius tribunus pl. ferret, in qua nihil aliud a consulari rogatione differebat nisi iudicum genus — in eo autem erant omnia — pugnavitque ut ita fieret, quod et sibi et aliis persuaserat nullis illum

221-227. With such a warlike people as the Romans were, such metaphors were very natural and effective in the language of everyday life. The use of them here harmonizes with the colloquial tone of the entire letter; cf. also Intr. 99. — Pisonem: though consul, and ordered by the senate to further the passage of the law by the comitia, Piso was really acting in the interests of Clodius. Cf. note to senatus auctoritas above. — Curionem: father of the Curio who, as tribune in 50 B.C., defended Caesar so brilliantly in the senate. He led the opposition in the senate to the bill of investigation (Att. 1. 14. 5). — senum: Piso and the elder Curio. — iuventutis: the younger Curio and young men like him.

2. Hortensius: consul in 69 B.C., and the most prominent leader of the Optimates at this time. He had been the leading orator in Rome until Cicero appeared; cf. Brut. 1. 1. — de religione: concerning the sacrilege which had been committed. — legem ferret: a technical expression, used of bringing forward a bill. A rogatio was a bill submitted to the people for confirmation in the comitia, for which the people were asked to vote, and affirmative ballots were marked V · R · (uti rogas). The rogatio was in this case to be submitted by a consul (rogatio consularis) in accordance with the resolution of the senate quoted above. Cf. note to senatus auctoritas. — iudicum genus: by the action of the senate, which was submitted to the people for confirmation, a special tribunal would have been established for the trial of Clodius, in which the presiding praetor would have chosen the iudices. Through the treachery of Piso and the use of force by Clodius this bill was not passed in the comitia (Att. 1. 14. 5). About the middle of February, Fufius, acting in the interests of Clodius, and carrying out a compromise accepted by Hortensius, allowed the passage by the comitia of a bill which provided for a court of inquiry, but left the iudices to be chosen as usual by lot, since the friends of Clodius thought that in this way a venal jury could be secured more easily, as the defense would have the right under this arrangement to reject a certain number of jurors. — nullis iudicibus: the negation belongs logically with posse iudicibus effugere posse, contraxi vela perspiciens inopiam iudicum neque dixi quicquam pro testimonio, nisi quod erat ita notum atque testatum ut non possem praeterire. Itaque, si causam quaeris absolutionis, ut iam πρὸς τὸ πρότερον revertar, egestas iudicum fuit et turpitude; id autem ut accideret, commissum est Hortensi consilio, qui, dum veritus est ne Fufius ei legi intercederet; quae ex senatus consulto ferebatur, non vidit illud, satius esse illum in infamia relinqui ac sordibus quam infirmo iudicio committi, sed ductus odio properavit rem deducere in iudicium, cum illum plumbeo gladio iugulatum iri tamen diceret. Sed iudicium 3 si quaeris quale fuerit, incredibili exitu, sic uti nunc ex eventu ab aliis, a me tamen ex ipso initio consilium Hortensi reprehendatur. Nam, ut reiectio facta est

—contraxi vela: Cicero is fond of figures drawn from ships or shipwreck; cf., for instance, Fam. 12. 25. 5 quam ob rem, mi Quinte, conscende nobiscum, et quidem ad puppim; una navis est iam bonorum omnium, quam quidem nos damus operam ut rectam teneamus; utinam prospero cursu! sed, quicumque venti erunt, ars nostra certe non aberit. Cf. also the reference to the shipwrecked fortunes of Catiline's followers, and the comparison of the conspirators to bilge-water in the ship of state (in Cat. 2. 7).—inopiam: their poverty and probable venality.—neque dixi . . . testatum: Clodius tried to establish an alibi by proving that on the night in question he was at Interamna, 90 miles from Rome, while Cicero testified that Clodius had visited his house that very day, within three hours of the time in question (cf. Att. 2. 1. 5; Plut. Cic. 29).

—πρὸς τὸ πρότερον: to return to the first question, i.e. quid acciderit de iudicio.—infamia, disgrace, not technically, 'loss of citizenship.'—sordibus: the mourning worn by persons accused (Watson).—iugulatum iri: scarcely a literary word, but borrowed from colloquial Latin. Thus, cf. Plaut. Stich. 581 ita mi auctores fuere, ut ego met me hodie iugularem fame; cf. also Hor. Sat. 1. 7. 35.—diceret: cf. diceret, Ep. 1. 3 n.

3. incredibili exitu: sc. fuit; cf. Intr. 95.—sic has here the force of a predicate adjective after fuit to be supplied: 'the trial was of such a nature.' Cf. Plaut. Trin. 46, Catull. 3. 13, Hor. Sat. 2. 2. 120, Petronius 46; and see Intr. 85.—reiectio: the prosecution and the defense had, as with us, the privilege of 'peremptorily challenging' a certain number of iudices, whose places were then filled by new men. Cf.

clamoribus maximis, cum accusator tamquam censor bonus homines nequissimos reiceret, reus tamquam clemens lanista frugalissimum quemque secerneret, ut primum iudices consederunt, valde diffidere boni coeperunt. Non enim umquam turpior in ludo talario consessus fuit: maculosi senatores, nudi equites, tribuni non tam aerarii quam, ut appellantur, aerati; pauci tamen boni inerant, quos reiectione fugare ille non voluntate, Ep. II. 1 n. — accusator: L. Lentulus Crus. — lanista: an owner and trainer of bands of gladiators. As the kind-hearted lanista avoids sending his best gladiators into encounters where they will be sure to lose their lives, so the defendant avoids sending honest men into a jury-box where they will lose their reputation. For another explanation, see Tyrrell. The correlation of ut facta est and ut primum . . . consederunt would not be found in careful prose.— in ludo talario: the vestis talaris reached to the ankles, and was not worn by respectable people (cf. Gell. 6. [7.] 12), and a ludus talaris was probably an entertainment of a low class where the performers wore this garment; cf. Fronto, Ep. p. 160 Naber laudo censoris illud, qui ludos talaris (effugeret), quod semet ipsum diceret, cum ea praeterisset, difficile dignitati servire, quin ad modum crotali aut cymbali pedem poneret. — maculosi: perhaps in its general sense, perhaps with special reference to men after whose names the censors had placed a nota. — nudi, destitute; cf. inopiam, 2 n. — tribuni . . . aerati: this is difficult to understand. The common reading is, non tam aerati . . . aerarii. The term aerarii was sometimes applied to citizens of the lowest class, outside the limits of the centuries of the Servian constitution, the 'riffraff' of the population; and the phrase is understood as meaning, 'not so much tribunes with money (aerati) as tribunes without money or reputation (aerarii).' The objections to this explanation are that the point is obscure, and that in a list of the three classes of people composing the jury, where the technical designations have been used in two instances, we expect to find the third term used, and used in the technical sense, i.e. we expect senatores . . . equites, tribuni non tam aerarii. The transposition by a copyist of aerarii (or aerari, as the MS. really reads) and aerati would not be unnatural. If we may adopt the reading non tam aerarii . . . aerati, the expression would mean 'not so much tribunes who have money (for the tribuni aerarii had money in their charge) as tribunes who are to be had for money (aerati).' This reading brings into relief the essential point, viz. the venality of the judges. This conjecture was first put forward by Muretus. Cicero is quoting one of those witticisms current in Rome which are so frequent in his letters; 'not so much tribuni aerarii as, to potuerat, qui maesti inter sui dissimiles et maerentes sedebant et contagione turpitudinis vehementer permovebantur. Hic, ut quaeque res ad consilium primis 4 postulationibus referebatur, incredibilis erat severitas nulla varietate sententiarum: nihil impetrabat reus, plus accusatori dabatur quam postulabat. Triumphabat — quid quaeris? — Hortensius se vidisse tantum; nemo erat qui illum reum ac non miliens condemnatum arbitraretur. Me vero teste producto credo te ex acclamatione Clodi advocatorum audisse quae consurrectio iudicum facta sit, ut me circumsteterint, ut aperte iugula sua pro meo capite P. Clodio ostentarent: quae mihi res multo honorificentior visa est quam aut illa, quote the current witticism, tribuni aerati. — maesti . . . et maerentes: maesti seems to refer rather to the sorrow shown by the looks and general aspect, maerentes to sorrow expressed in words (Tyrrell). Possibly for maerentes we should read mirantes.

4. primis postulationibus: the preliminary legal questions concerning the conduct of the trial. The term consilium was sometimes applied to the jury, but here and in 5 it refers to the body of jurists who were called in to give legal advice to the praetor (cf. Madvig, Verf. u. Verw. d. röm. St. II. 255, Momm. St. R. I⁸. 307–319). In the trial of Quinctius, the consilium was composed of three men (Cic. pro Quinct. 54). — quid quaeris? in a word. Cf. Att. 2. 1. 4 praebere Metellus impedit et impedit. Quid quaeris? Est consul φιλοπατρης et, ut semper iudicavi, natura bonus. Such exclamatory questions are very frequent in Latin comedy (cf. Plaut.

M. G. 322, 472, 818, 834; also Hor. Ep. 1. 10. 8, etc.), and their frequency and variety in Cicero's letters is a strong indication of the colloquial tone of the letters. Some of these familiar questions which are used to give animation to the narrative are quid est and quid iam (Ep. XLVIII. 1), quid ergo (Fam. 8. 12. 2), cur hoc (Fam. 8. 17. 2), and quid dicam de, etc. (Ep. XC. 4). Cf. also Intr. 98. — se vidisse tantum, that he had shown such foresight. — nemo . . . arbitraretur, there was no one who thought of him as accused but rather as convicted a thousand times over. The use of miliens harmonizes with the extravagant tone of the letter. Cf. n. on quas ego above, and Intr. 96. — ex acclamatione . . . facta sit, how the iudices in consequence of the outcry made by the supporters of Clodius rose in a body. The laxity of the Roman court in allowing an expression of partisan feeling in the courtroom and in maintaining no surveillance over the jury during the cum iurare tui cives Xenocratem testimonium dicentem prohibuerunt, aut cum tabulas Metelli Numidici, cum eae, ut mos est, circumferrentur, nostri iudices aspiciere 5 noluerunt; multo haec, inquam, nostra res maior. Itaque iudicum vocibus, cum ego sic ab iis, ut salus patriae, defenderer, fractus reus et una patroni omnes conciderunt, ad me autem eadem frequentia postridie venit, quacum abiens consulatu sum domum reductus. Clamare praeclari Ariopagitae se non esse venturos nisi praesidio constituto. Refertur ad consilium: una sola sententia praesidium non desideravit. Defertur res ad senatum: gravissime ornatissimeque decernitur; laudantur iudices; datur negotium magistratibus; responsurum hominem nemo arbitrabatur. Ἔσπετε νῦν μοι, Μοῦσαι, — ὄππως δὴ πρῶτον πῦρ ἔμπεσε. Nosti Calvum ex Nanneianis, illum laudato-trial (5) is noticeable. — Xenocratem, Metelli Numidici: both incidents are again mentioned in Cic. pro Balb. 11, 12, though without Xenocrates's name. Metellus was tried for misappropriation of public money while propraetor in Africa. Cicero's vanity is shown by his expression of pleasure at the complimentary action of a jury whose character he has just criticised so severely, and whose conduct he immediately proceeds to condemn with equal severity. — tui cives: the Athenians are called in jest the fellow-citizens of Atticus because of the fondness which Atticus had shown for Athens, as indicated by his long stay in the city. Perhaps Cicero has in mind also his friend's cognomen. The Athenians wished to bestow upon Atticus Athenian citizenship (Nepos, Att. 3. 1), but he declined it. — tabulas, accounts; sc. of public funds managed by him.

5. coniderunt, collapsed; like fractus, used colloquially. — postridie venit: i.e. in the morning to pay their respects. — quacum . . . reductus: at the conclusion of his consulship, Cicero took an oath before the people that he had saved the commonwealth, and then occurred the incident to which he refers; quo quidem tempore is meus domum fuit e foro reditus ut nemo, nisi qui mecum esset, civium esse in numero videretur, Cic. in Pis. 7. — Ariopagitae: ironical. — una sola . . . desideravit: there was only one vote in the negative. — negotium: sc. of protecting the jury. — ἔσπετε, etc.: Hom. Il. XVI. 112, 113. — Calvum: in a recent letter, Att. 1. 14. 3, Cicero had written to Atticus of a speech made by rem meum, de cuius oratione erga me honorifica ad te scripseram: biduo per unum servum, et eum ex gladiatorio ludo, confecit totum negotium: arcessivit ad se, promisit, intercessit, dedit; iam vero — o di boni, rem perditam! — etiam noctes certarum mulierum atque adolescentulorum nobilium introductiones nonnullis iudicibus pro mercedis cumulo fuerunt. Ita, summo discessu bonorum, pleno foro servorum, xxv iudices ita fortes tamen fuerunt ut summo proposito periculo vel perire maluerint quam perdere omnia: xxxi fuerunt quos fames magis quam fama commoveret; quorum Catulus cum vidisset quendam, 'Quid vos,' inquit, 'praesidium a nobis postulabatis? An ne nummi vobis eriperentur timebatis?' Habes, ut brevissime potui, genus iudici et causam absolutionis. Quaeris deinceps qui nunc sit status rerum et qui meus. Rei publicae statum illum, quem tu meo consilio, ego divino confirmatum putabam, qui bonorum omnium coniunctione et auctoritate consulatus mei fixus et fundatus videbatur, nisi quis nos deus respexerit, elapsum scito esse de manibus uno hoc iudicio, si iudicium est triginta homines populi Romani levissimos ac nequissimos nummulis acceptis ius ac fas omne delere et, quod

Crassus complimentary to him; the clause, de cuius oratione, etc., shows, therefore, that Calvum refers to Crassus. Calvus was apparently a nickname given to Crassus, perhaps because of his baldness. — ex Nanneianis: if the reading is correct, a thrust at Crassus, understood by Atticus but unintelligible to us. — arcessivit: sc. iudices. — intercessit: i.e. gave security for the payment. — summo discessu bonorum, notwithstanding the withdrawal of all honest men. — quos fames magis quam fama commoveret, who were influenced more by hunger than by honor. Cf. Intr. 103. — Catulus: consul in 78 B.C. Cf. Cic. de lege Manil. 51.

6. bonorum omnium coniunctione: Cicero prided himself upon the reconciliation of the senators and knights which his consulship had brought about. Cf. Cic. in Cat. 4. 15. — si iudicium est, etc., if it can be called a trial when

omnes non modo homines, verum etiam pecudes factum esse sciant, id Talam et Plautum et Spongiam et ceteras huiusmodi quisquillas statuere numquam esse
7 factum. Sed tamen, ut te de re publica consoler, non ita ut sperarunt mali, tanto imposito rei publicae vulnere, alacris exultat improbitas in victoria. Nam plane ita putaverunt, cum religio, cum pudicitia, cum iudiciorum fides, cum senatus auctoritas concidisset, fore ut aperte victrix nequitia ac libido poenas ab optimo quoque peteret sui doloris, quem improbissimo
8 cuique inusserat severitas consulatus mei. Idem ego ille — non enim mihi videor insolenter gloriari, cum de me apud te loquor in ea praesertim epistula quam nolo aliis legi — idem, inquam, ego recreavi adfectos animos bonorum, unumquemque confirmans, excitans; insectandis vero exagitandisque nummariis iudicibus omnem omnibus studiosis ac fautoribus illius victoriae

thirty, etc. — non modo homines, verum etiam pecudes: a proverbial expression. — Talam, Plautum, and Spongiam: fictitious names given in derision of the low origin of the judges. — ceteras huiusmodi quisquillas, the rest of the riffraff of that ilk. — quisquillas: a colloquial word. Cf. Novius, Tog. 88, Ribbeck; cf. also Italian quisquiglia.

7. senatus auctoritas: the senate had taken the initiative in bringing Clodius to justice. — poenas ab optimo quoque: the earliest indication, perhaps, in Cicero's letters of his consciousness that the democratic party was planning to punish those who were responsible for the execution of the Catilinarian conspirators.

8. idem ego ille: sc. whose severity had made the wicked suffer. —

aliis legi, to be read to others. This explanation of legi as equivalent to recitari is justified by Ep. LX. 1 ex iis litteris quas Atticus a te missas mihi legit, quid ageres et ubi esses cognovi. The use of epistula (not litterae) harmonizes with the expression quam nolo aliis legi, and emphasizes, what is evident in the letter itself, its confidential character; epistula was usually applied to a personal letter. — victoriae: join with παρησταν. — omnem παρησταν eripui, I took all the brag out of. Greek words and expressions in the letters are often from the literary slang of the period., e.g. (Att. 7. 1. 5) ἐπὶ τῆς κτῆρας, 'venering'; (Att. 10. 17. 1) ἐκρένεα, 'gush,' and in many cases play the same part in colloquial Latin (cf. Tyrrell, I.² p. 67) that French phrases de παρησίου eripui, Pisonem consulem nulla in re consistere umquam sum passus, desponsam homini iam Syriam ademi, senatum ad pristinam suam severitatem revocavi atque abiectum excitavi, Clodium praesentem fregi in senatu cum oratione perpetua plenissima gravitatis, tum altercatione huiusmodi, ex qua licet pauca degustes — nam cetera non possunt habere neque vim neque venustatem remoto illo studio contentionis, quem ἀγῶνα vos appellatis. Nam, ut Idibus Maiis in senatum convenimus, rogatus ego sententiam multa dixi de summa re publica, atque ille locus inductus a me est divinitus, ne una plaga accepta patres conscripti conciderent, ne deficerent; vulnus esse eiusmodi, quod mihi nec dissimulandum nec pertimescendum videretur, ne aut ignorando stultissimi aut metuendo ignavissimi iudicaremur. Bis absolutum esse Lentulum, bis Catilinam: hunc tertium iam esse a iudicibus in rem publicam immissum. ‘Erras, Clodi: non te iudices urbi, with us, e.g. (Att. 12. 45. 2) ἀκρόβια, ‘ennui,’ (Att. 7. 1. 5) ὀδοῦ πᾶσπερον, ‘en passant.’ Cf. Intr. 97. — consistere, to get a footing. — desponsam (not decretam): i.e. promised to Piso by Pompey, who had just organized Syria into a province, but not officially assigned to him by the senate. — vos, you Athenians. Cf. tui cives, 4.

9. Idibus Maiis: this fixes the date of the letter as later than May 15. — rogatus sententiam: the technical expression used of the action of the presiding consul in asking senators their views on the question before the senate. The rules of the Roman senate allowed a senator to depart from the special topic under consideration, and de summa re publica dicere.

Cf. Willems, II. 186. — ille locus, etc., the following point was developed by me with telling effect. — Lentulum: Catiline’s fellow-conspirator, who was accused de peculatu in 80 B.C., and at a later date underwent a similar experience. — Catilinam: tried on a charge of ‘repetundae’ in 65 B.C. (cf. intr. to Ep. II.). He was again on trial, in 64 B.C., for the murder of M. Marius Gratidianus. No mention is made here of the charge of interest brought in 73 B.C. against the Vestal Fabia, sister of Cicero’s wife Terentia, in which Catiline was implicated. Cicero regarded the charge as unfounded, and wished, furthermore, to spare the good name of Terentia’s family. — immissum: properly used of sed carceri reservarunt, neque te retinere in civitate, sed exsilio privare voluerunt. Quam ob rem, patres conscripti, erigite animos, retinete vestram dignitatem. Manet illa in re publica bonorum consensus; dolor accessit bonis viris, virtus non est imminuta; nihil est damni factum novi, sed quod erat, inventum est: in unius hominis perditu iudicio plures similes reperti 10 sunt.' Sed quid ago? paene orationem in epistulam inclusi. Redeo ad altercationem. Surgit pulchellus wild beasts. Catiline is compared to a wolf, Cic. in Cat. 2. 2. — reservarunt: Cicero addressed Catiline in 64 B.C. in almost the same language: O miser, qui non sentias illo iudicio te non absolutum, verum ad aliquod severius iudicium ac maius supplicium reservatum (Or. in tog. cand.). — exsilio privare: if Clodius had been convicted, he would have been exiled. The iudices, by acquitting him, have deprived him of the safety which exile would give, and allowed him an open field in which to commit a crime punishable with death, the carcer being the common place of execution for citizens. The oration of which this was a part was entitled, Oratio in P. Clodium et C. Curionem, and has been preserved in a fragmentary form. — illa . . . consensus: 'that harmony which my consulship secured.' Cf. note on 6. — quod erat, inventum est: the jurors who acquitted Clodius were venal before; the trial had merely brought that fact to light.

10. pulchellus: diminutive of pulcher, a parody upon Clodius's cognomen Pulcher, while at the same time it contains an ironical allusion to his lack of personal beauty, to which Cicero refers, Or. in P. Clod. et C. Cur.: sed

credo postquam speculum tibi adlatum est longe te a pulchris abesse sensisti. Pulchellus may also be used in derision of the effeminacy of Clodius, for, speaking of the group of young men to whom Clodius belonged, Cicero says, concurabant barbatus iuvenes, totus ille grex Catilinae, Att. 1. 14. 5. Well-trimmed beards marked the climax of dandyism. Diminutives do not always indicate that the individual in question is smaller than others of its kind, but that the speaker feels affection, pity, or contempt for it. Thus Cicero speaks of his daughter as Tulliola (my darling Tullia), Att. 4. 1. 4; Servius, referring to the sad death of the same woman, speaks of her as a muliercula, Fam. 4. 5. 4; while the predominant feeling suggested by pulchellus is one of contempt. Such a use of the diminutive is especially common in colloquial language. Diminutive adjectives and adverbs with this force are farther removed from formal language than diminutive nouns, and the very fact that these adjectives and adverbs are not infrequent in Cicero's letters is one of the strongest indications of the familiar character of the letters. Cf. misellus (Att. 3. 23. 5), vetulus puer; obicit mihi me ad Baias fuisse. Falsum, sed tamen quid huic? 'Simile est,' inquam, 'quasi dicas in operto fuisse.' — 'Quid,' inquit, 'homini Arpinati cum aquis calidis?' 'Narra,' inquam, 'patrono tuo, qui Arpinatis aquas concupivit'; nosti enim marinas. — 'Quousque,' inquit, 'hunc regem feremus?' 'Regem appellas,' inquam, 'cum Rex tui mentionem nullam fecerit?' Ille autem Regis hereditatem spe devorarat. — 'Domum,' inquit, 'emisti.' 'Putes,' in-

(Att. 13. 29. 1), and even from comparatives, minusculus (Att. 14. 13. 5), and meliuscule (Att. 4. 6. 2). Cf. also Intr. 76. — ad Baias: Clodius twits Cicero with living at the fashionable seaside resort Baiae, whose reputation for strictness of morals was a little questionable. Cicero, disdaining to defend himself, intimates that Clodius had been found once in far more suspicious surroundings, i.e. at the festival of the Bona Dea. — falsum, sed tamen quid huic (sc. falsum id esse responderem): addressed to Atticus, not to Clodius. One of Cicero's houses was at Puteoli, so that while he could technically deny having a villa at Baiae, he was within the circle of its influence, as he himself felt, for he refers to the place as Cratera illum delicatum ('Crater with its well-known allurements'), Att. 2. 8. 2. — in operto (Bonae Deae): a technical phrase, 'at the mystic rites.' — quid homini Arpinati cum aquis calidis: i.e. what business has a countryman from Arpinum at a watering-place? Cicero replies, 'Make that remark to your patron (Curio) who was terribly anxious for the springs of a countryman from Arpinum.' The Aquae Arpinatis were medicinal springs upon an estate once belonging to C. Marius. Cicero parries the thrust at his provincialism, therefore, by referring to the fact that one of Rome's most illustrious men lived in his native town Arpinum, and hits Clodius through Curio, for the latter had obtained the estate during the Sullan proscriptions, and therefore not in an honorable way. — nosti enim marinas: addressed to Atticus. These springs were perhaps called marinae because they were near the sea-coast. — regem appellas, cum . . . fecerit, do you talk of a rex, when Rex made no mention of you? Q. Marcius Rex was brother-in-law of Clodius, and at his death passed over the latter entirely in his will. — ille autem, etc.: a parenthetical explanation to Atticus, as the death of Rex had occurred very recently. — domum: Cicero's house was in the most fashionable part of the city, on the Palatine, and cost him $150,000 (Fam. 5. 6. 2). Cf. Intr. 45. Clodius wishes to characterize Cicero as a parvenu, and perhaps to suggest that the money had been obtained in a questionable way. Gell. 12. 12 tells us that the money for the purchase of the house came from P. Cornelius Sulla, who was defended by Cicero in 62 B.C. — putes:

quam, 'dicere: iudices emisti.' — 'Iuranti,' inquit, 'tibi non crediderunt.' 'Mihi vero,' inquam, 'xxv iudices crediderunt, xxxi, quoniam nummos ante acceperunt, tibi nihil crediderunt.' Magnis clamoribus
 11 adflictus conticuit et concidit. Noster autem status est hic: apud bonos iidem sumus quos reliquisti, apud sordem urbis et faecem multo melius nunc quam reliquisti. Nam et illud nobis non obest, videri nostrum testimonium non valuisse: missus est sanguis invidiae sine dolore, atque etiam hoc magis, quod omnes illi fautores illius flagiti rem manifestam illam redemptam esse a iudicibus confitentur. Accedit illud, quod illa contionalis hirudo aerari, misera ac ieiuna plebecula, me ab hoc Magno unice diligi putat; et hercule multa indefinite second person, while the subject of dicere is te, referring to Clodius. — iuranti: i.e. when he gave his testimony. If the judges had believed Cicero's testimony, they would have convicted Clodius. — crediderunt . . . crediderunt: the play upon words can be reproduced in English by the word 'trusted.' Cf. Intr. 103. — concidit: cf. 5 n.

11. noster autem status: with these words the third topic of the letter begins, Cicero's political and personal fortunes. — melius: cf. Intr. 85 a. — quam reliquisti: we should expect quum quos nos reliquisti. — et illud non obest: this calls for et illud prodest, but the form of expression undergoes change, and the place of the second correlative is taken by accedit illud. — missus est, has been let; a surgical expression. Cf. Att. 6. 1. 2 sic Appius, cum ēē ἀπαπέσθως provinciam curarit, sanguinem miserit, quicquid potuit detraxerit, mihi tradiderit

enectam, προσανατρεφουμένην eam a me non libenter videt; cf. also Livy, 3. 54. 4. — sine dolore: i.e. without weakening Cicero, for the reason indicated in the following passage. — rem manifestam, etc.: 'that the case was clear, and an acquittal secured from the jurors by the use of money.' — contionalis hirudo aerari: the populace who spent their time in the contiones, instead of being at work, and who lived upon largesses of corn granted by the leges frumentariae. — plebecula: the diminutive expresses contempt; cf. note to pulchellus, 10. The populace was composed largely of freedmen. Cicero refers to them elsewhere (Att. 2. 16. 1) as pedisequi, 'lackeys.' His earlier democratic tendencies would seem to have given way already to aristocratic sympathies. — Magno: i.e. Pompey. The force of putat is a common one: 'The people think that I am loved by Pompey, but they are mistaken.' Only four months before Cicero et iucunda consuetudine coniuncti inter nos sumus, usque eo, ut nostri isti commissatores coniurationis, barbatuli iuvenes, illum in sermonibus Cn. Ciceronem appellent. Itaque et ludis et gladiatoribus mirandas ἐπισημασίας sine ulla pastoricia fistula auferebamus. Nunc est expectatio comitorum, in quae omnibus invi-¹² tis trudit noster Magnus Auli filium, atque in eo neque auctoritate neque gratia pugnat, sed quibus Philippus omnia castella expugnari posse dicebat in quae modo asellus onustus auro posset ascendere; consul autem ille deterioris histrionis similis suscepisse negotium dicitur et domi divisores habere, quod ego non credo.

had indulged in this caustic arraignment of Pompey: nihil come, nihil simplex, nihil ἐν τοῖς πολιτικοῖς illustre, nihil honestum, nihil forte, nihil liberum (Att. I. 13. 4). — isti commissatores coniurationis, those who conspired only over their wine-cups (Tyrrell). — barbatuli: Caelius, Dolabella, Curio filius, Clodius, etc. Cf. note to pulchellus, 10. — Cn. Ciceronem: the nickname given to Pompey may suggest that he was as vacillating as Cicero in his actions, as Mommsen explains it, or that the friendship between Cicero and Pompey was so close as to make them one. — ludis et gladiatoribus: colloquial ablatives of time. Cf. Intr. 83 d. Such colloquial ablatives Cicero has with one exception (Philipp. 9. 16) avoided outside the letters. The ludi referred to were probably the ludi Megalenses in April. — ἐπισημασίας: these indications of popularity were probably given when Cicero and Pompey entered while the games were being held. For a similar scene when Caesar and Curio entered the theatre, cf. Ep.

VII. 3.— pastoricia fistula: shrill whistles were used by a politician's opponents to drown the applause of his supporters. Hissing was also common (Ep. VII. 2).

12. comitorium: the consular election. — Auli filium: i.e. L. Afranius. By designating him as Auli filium Cicero means perhaps that Afranius was himself a man of no worth. He was consul in 60 B.C., proconsul of Gallia Cisalpina in 59 B.C., was pardoned by Caesar for espousing the cause of Pompey in the Civil War, joined the Pompeian forces again, and was captured and put to death after the battle of Thapsus. — Philippus: the methods of Philip of Macedon had become proverbial. Cf. Hor. Od. 3. 16. 13–15 diffidit urbium portas vir Macedo et subruit aemulos reges muneribus. In Juv. 12. 47 he is callidus emptor Olynthi. — consul . . . ille: i.e. Piso. — deterioris histrionis: a δευτεραγωνιστής. Pompey takes the leading rôle in this comedy of the election of Afranius, and the consul Piso plays the second part. — divisores: men to distribute money. — quod ego

Sed senatus consulta duo iam facta sunt odiosa, quod in consulem facta putantur, Catone et Domitio postulante: unum, ut apud magistratus inquiri liceret, alterum, cuius domi divisores habitarent, adversus rem publicam. Lurco autem tribunus pl., qui magistratum insimulatum lege Aelia iniit, solutus est et Aelia et Fufia, ut legem de ambitu ferret, quam ille bono auspicio claudus homo promulgavit. Ita comitia in a. d. vi Kal. Sext. dilata sunt. Novi est in lege hoc, ut qui nummos in tribubus pronuntiarit, si non dederit, impune sit, sin dederit, ut, quoad vivat, singulis tribubus non credo: the context would indicate that Cicero did believe the story, and this saving clause may have been added for fear that the letter might be intercepted. — Domitio: cf. Ep. I. 3 n. — unum . . . alterum: one, that the houses of the magistrates might be searched for professional bribers or money to be used in bribery; the other, that if bribery agents were found at the house of a magistrate, such a magistrate should be considered guilty of an offense against the public weal. As the person of a magistrate was inviolable during his term of office, this was the only action possible against him. Cf. Momm. St. R. I. 705. — adversus rem publicam: (sc. eum facere).

13. Lurco autem, etc., furthermore Lurco the plebeian tribune, who has taken a magistracy impugned by the Aelian law, has been exempted from the operation of both the Aelian and Fufian laws, in order that he might bring forward his bill in regard to bribery, which he has published under good auspices, seeing that he is a lame man. The leges Aelia et Fufia gave elections precedence in point of time over the introduction of new laws. By the postponement of the comitia in order that Lurco might bring in his bill, this section of the law was suspended. Cf. Mommsen, St. R. I. 83 and 111, n. 4. — magistratum insimulatum lege Aelia: one portion of the Aelian law, passed about 155 B.C., apparently for the first time gave to magistrates the right to take the auspices before the meeting of the concilium plebis, and, by announcing them as unfavorable, to interfere with the action of the tribune who presided over this assembly. Cf. Herzog, I. 419, 1163. By the Aelian law, therefore, Lurco's own office was insimulatus. — bono auspicio claudus homo: ironical. In early days bodily infirmity debarred a man from office altogether. The proposal of a bill by a lame man, therefore, scarcely augured well for its success. — quoad vivat: i.e. every year for the rest of his life. — HS.: the usual abbreviation for sestertius and sestertium, derived from IIS(emis), as the sestertius was worth $2\frac{1}{2}$ asses. The horizontal stroke indicates that the symbols have a numerical

HS. CIO CIO CIO debeat. Dixi hanc legem P. Clodium iam ante servasse; pronuntiare enim solitum esse et non dare. Sed, heus tu! videsne consulatum illum nostrum, quem Curio antea ἀποθέωσιν vocabat, si hic factus erit, Fabam Mimum futurum? Quare, ut opinor, φιλοσοφητέον, id quod tu facis, et istos consulatus non flocci facteon. Quod ad me scribis te in Asiam statu- 14
isse non ire, equidem mallet ut ires, ac vereor ne quid in ista re minus commode fiat; sed tamen non possum reprehendere consilium tuum, praesertim cum egomet in provinciam non sim profectus. Epigramma- 15

value.—HS. CIO CIO CIO: 3000 sesterces, or more than $120.00. As there were 35 tribes, the annual fine would have been over $4200.—heus tu! a colloquial exclamation, commonly followed in Plautus by a command. Cf. Bacch. 327; cf. also Intr. 92.—hic: i.e. Afranius.—factus erit: sc. consul.—Fabam Mimum: if the reading is correct, perhaps Böckel's explanation is the most plausible one. The mimus (a kind of farce) was a popular form of entertainment. One of these farces well known at Rome was called the Faba Mimus. Both here and in the other passage (Seneca, Ἀποκολοκύντωσις, 9) where the expression occurs, the writer is speaking on the subject of an apotheosis. Now the Pythagoreans were the most prominent teachers of re-incarnation, and at the same time laid down certain rules in regard to the use of beans as an article of diet. The Faba Mimus may therefore have been a parody on the teachings of Pythagoras upon these two points, and well known for its wit or nonsense, so that the meaning of the passage may be, 'if Afranius is elected consul, that consulship of mine, which Curio used in mockery to call an apotheosis, will be the sort of an apotheosis that one sees in the 'Bean Farce,' for my companion in apotheosis will be this nobody Afranius.' See Crit. Append.—φιλοσοφητέον, one must play the philosopher.—id quod tu facis: Atticus throughout his life, except during Cicero's consulship and his candidacy for that office, held aloof from politics, following in this respect the teachings of his school, the Epicurean.—facteon: a hybrid form, instead of faciendum, suggested by φιλοσοφητέον, and after the analogy of the Greek verbal in -τέον with the accusative after it. Cf. Intr. 74.

14. te in Asiam, etc.: Quintus Cicero, who was going out to Asia as propraetor, had invited his brother-in-law Atticus, to accompany him as legatus. Cf. Ep. VI. 7 n.—vereor ne quid, etc.: Quintus did take umbrage at the refusal of Atticus. Cicero would also have gladly seen Atticus go, to restrain his hot-headed brother.—cum egomet, etc.: Cicero declined a province at the close of his consulship.

tis tuis, quae in Amaltheo posuisti, contenti erimus, praesertim cum et Thyillus nos reliquerit et Archias nihil de me scripserit, ac vereor ne, Lucullis quoniam Graecum poëma condidit, nunc ad Caecilianam fabulam 16 spectet. Antonio tuo nomine gratias egi eamque epistulam Mallio dedi. Ad te ideo antea rarius scripsi, quod non habebam idoneum cui darem, nec satis scie-
 17 bam quo darem. Valde te venditavi. Cincius si quid ad me tui negoti detulerit, suscipiam; sed nunc magis in suo est occupatus, in quo ego ei non desum. Tu, si uno in loco es futurus, crebras a nobis litteras 18 exspecta; ast plures etiam ipse mittito. Velim ad me scribas cuiusmodi sit 'Αμαλθειον tuum, quo ornatu, qua τοποθεσία; et quae poëmata quasque historias de 'Αμαλθεία habes, ad me mittas. Libet mihi facere in

15. Amaltheo: the villa of Atticus near Buthrotum, in Epirus, was so called from the nymph Amalthea. The library of this villa was adorned with the busts of noted Romans. Cicero's was among the rest. Beneath the busts (Nepos, Att. 18. 5) were commemorative inscriptions. Cicero is pleased to receive this recognition, especially as the contemporary poets at Rome, Thyillus and Archias, are neglecting him. Archias is well known because of Cicero's oration in his behalf. He had begun a poem upon Cicero's consulship (pro Ar. 28). — Caecilianam fabulam: we know from Cicero's oration in support of Archias of the friendship existing between the latter and the Caecili Metelli. The work here mentioned would seem to have been a dramatic composition founded upon the achievements of the Caecilian family. One of the earlier writers of comedy was Caecilius Statius, whom Cicero calls (Att. 7. 3. 10) malus auctor Latinitatis, and Caecilianam fabulam may therefore have a double meaning, 'a play in the manner of Caecilius (Statius) upon the Caecilians.'

16. Antonio: C. Antonius, Cicero's colleague in the consulship, and now governor of Macedonia, a province which he had received in return for not supporting the Catilinarians. Cicero had asked Antonius to grant Atticus some favor (Fam. 5. 5). — Mallio: perhaps T. Manlius, a negotiator of Thespieae in whose interest Fam. 13. 22 was written. — quo darem, where to send it. — valde te venditavi, I have heartily praised you, i. e. to Antonius.

17. Cincius: cf. Ep. I. 1 n.

18. facere i. e. an Amaltheum. — nihil erat absoluti, I have nothing finished. For the tense, cf. Intr. 84 c.

Arpinati. Ego tibi aliquod de meis scriptis mittam.
Nihil erat absoluti.

VI. (Att. 1. 17.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Magna mihi varietas voluntatis et dissimilitudo opinionis ac iudici Q. fratris mei demonstrata est ex litteris tuis, in quibus ad me epistularum illius exempla misisti: qua ex re et molestia sum tanta adfectus, quantam mihi meus amor summus erga utrumque vestrum adferre debuit, et admiratione, quidnam accidisset, quod adferret Q. fratri meo aut offensionem tam gravem aut commutationem tantam voluntatis. Atque illud a me iam ante intellegebatur, quod te quoque ipsum discedentem a nobis suspicari videbam, subesse nescio quid opinionis incommodae, sauciumque esse

VI. Rome, Dec. 5, 61 B.C. At this time there had been a disagreement of long standing between Quintus Cicero and his wife Pomponia, who was the sister of Atticus. On leaving Rome to assume the propraetorship of Asia in 61 B.C., Quintus had invited Atticus to accompany him as legatus, and Atticus had declined the invitation (cf. Ep. V. 14). This refusal and the suspicion of Quintus that Pomponia was abetted in her opposition by her brother (cf. odiosas suspiciones, 1), had led to such a serious breach between the two men that Quintus, as current rumor said, had expressed himself very unfavorably in regard to his brother-in-law at Rome, and had actually left the city without writing to him (cf. 4). Atticus naturally felt aggrieved, and in his letter to Marcus Cicero took occasion to remind his friend of the services which he had rendered him in the past (cf. 5). To avoid a misunderstanding with Atticus, and to put his brother's conduct in a more favorable light, without aggravating the quarrel between Quintus and Pomponia, and without putting Atticus in the wrong, constitute the delicate task which Cicero essays. With this letter cf. Ep. XXX. 3, 4.

1. epistularum . . . exempla: the letters which Quintus addressed to Atticus from Thessalonica (cf. 4), which would seem to have been very bitter in their tone. Cf. offensionem tam gravem, below.—discedentem: sc. for Epirus at the close of 62 or in the early part of 61 B.C. (cf. Att. 1. 13. 1).

eius animum et insedissee quasdam odiosas suspiciones, quibus ego mederi cum cuperem antea saepe et vehementius etiam post sortitionem provinciae, nec tantum intellegebam ei esse offensionis quantum litterae tuae declararunt, nec tantum proficiebam quantum volebam.

2 Sed tamen hoc me ipse consolabar, quod non dubitabam quin te ille aut Dyrrachi aut in istis locis uspiam visurus esset; quod cum accidisset, confidebam ac mihi persuaseram fore ut omnia placarentur inter vos, non modo sermone ac disputatione, sed conspectu ipso congressuque vestro. Nam quanta sit in Quinto fratre meo comitas, quanta iucunditas, quam mollis animus et ad accipiendam et ad deponendam offensionem, nihil attinet me ad te, qui ea nosti, scribere. Sed accidit perincommode, quod eum nusquam vidisti. Valuit enim plus quod erat illi nonnullorum artificii inculcatum quam aut officium aut necessitudo aut amor vester ille

3 pristinus, qui plurimum valere debuit. Atque huius incommodi culpa ubi resideat, facilius possum existimare quam scribere; vereor enim ne, dum defendam meos, non parcam tuis. Nam sic intellego, ut nihil a domesticis vulneris factum sit, illud quidem quod erat eos certe sanare potuisse. Sed huiusce rei totius vi-

—insedissee: sc. in animo.—antea saepe: it is evident that the ill-feeling of Quintus antedated the refusal of Atticus to serve as legatus.

2. in istis locis: i.e. in Epirus, where Atticus now was. Cf. Ep. V. 15 n.—nihil attinet: cf. de quo quid sentiam, nihil attinet dicere, Fam. 4. 7. 3.—perincommode: cf. Intr. 77.—nonnullorum artificii: the anger of Quintus had evidently been inflamed by some of the enemies of Atticus.

3. facilius . . . scribere: Cicero touches upon one of the fundamental and unknown causes of the enmity of Quintus, which, however, he does not dare state in a letter.—meos . . . tuis: the plural used politely for the singular (cf. ego autem, Ep. VII. 1), as Cicero can be thinking only of Quintus and Pomponia respectively.—ut nihil, granting that no, etc.—domesticis: i.e. Pomponia.

tium, quod aliquanto etiam latius patet quam videtur, praesenti tibi commodius exponam. De iis litteris quas 4 ad te Thessalonica misit, et de sermonibus quos ab illo et Romae apud amicos tuos et in itinere habitos putas, ecquid tantum causae sit ignoro; sed omnis in tua posita est humanitate mihi spes huius levandae molestiae. Nam, si ita statueris, et irritabiles animos esse optimorum saepe hominum et eosdem placabiles, et esse hanc agilitatem, ut ita dicam, mollitiamque naturae plerumque bonitatis, et, id quod caput est, nobis inter nos nostra sive incommoda sive vitia sive iniurias esse tolerandas, facile haec, quemadmodum spero, mitigabuntur. Quod ego ut facias te oro; nam ad me, qui te unice diligo, maxime pertinet neminem esse meorum, qui aut te non amet aut abs te non ametur. Illa pars 5 epistolae tuae minime fuit necessaria, in qua exponis quas facultates aut provincialium aut urbanorum commodorum et aliis temporibus et me ipso consule praetermiseris. Mihi enim perspecta est ingenuitas et magnitudo animi tui, neque ego inter me atque te quicquam interesse umquam duxi praeter voluntatem institutae vitae, quod me ambitio quaedam ad honorum stu-

4. de iis litteris: cf. Intr. 91.— de sermonibus: cf. introd. note, and Att. 1. 19. 11 (written in March, 60 B.C.) Quintus frater purgat se mihi per litteras et adfirmat nihil a se cuiquam de te secus esse dictum. — causae: sc. for his conduct. — irritabiles: cf. Q. fr. 1. 1. 37 omnes enim, qui instinc veniunt, ita de tua virtute integritate humanitate commemorant, ut in tuis summis laudibus excipiant unam iracundiam.

5. provincialium probably refers not to political positions but to business opportunities in the provinces which Atticus had neglected in serving the interests of Cicero, notably during the latter's candidacy for the consulship and incumbency of that office. Most of the business ventures of Atticus, who was a money-lender, were carried on in the provinces. — voluntatem institutae vitae: Cicero was interested in politics while Atticus held aloof from them; cf. Intr. 58. — honorum: public distinctions, especially political offices. — cum . . . disdium, te autem alia minime reprehendenda ratio ad honestum otium duxit. Vera quidem laude probitatis diligentiae religionis neque me tibi neque quemquam antepono, amoris vero erga me, cum a fraterno amore

 6 domesticoque discessi, tibi primas defero. Vidi enim, vidi penitusque perspexi in meis variis temporibus et sollicitudines et laetitias tuas. Fuit mihi saepe et laudis nostrae gratulatio tua iucunda et timoris consolatio grata. Quin mihi nunc te absente non solum consilium quo tu excellis, sed etiam sermonis communicatio, quae mihi suavissima tecum solet esse, maxime deest — quid dicam? in publicane re, quo in genere mihi neglegenti
 . esse non licet, an in forensi labore, quem antea propter ambitionem sustinebam, nunc ut dignitatem tueri gratia possim, an in ipsis domesticis negotiis, in quibus ego cum antea tum vero post discessum fratris te sermonesque nostros desidero? Postremo non labor meus, non requies, non negotium, non otium, non forenses res, non domesticae, non publicae, non privatae carere diutius tuo suavissimo atque amantissimo consilio ac
 7 sermone possunt. Atque harum rerum commemorationem verecundia saepe impedivit utriusque nostrum; nunc autem ea fuit necessaria propter eam partem epistulae tuae, per quam te ac mores tuos mihi purgatos ac probatos esse voluisti. Atque in ista incommoditate alienati illius animi et offensi illud inest tamen commodi, quod et mihi et ceteris amicis tuis nota fuit cessi, if I except the love of my brother and of my family. Cf. Fam. 6. 12. 2 Caesaris familiares . . . cum ab illo discesserint, me habeant proximum. — primas: sc. partes.

6. sustinebam, nunc: sc. sustineo.

7. purgatos ac probatos: cf. Intr. 93. — nota . . . testificata: Atticus had informed Cicero several months before of his intention et abs te aliquanto ante testificata tua voluntas omittendae provinciae, ut quod una non estis non dissensi-one ac discidio vestro, sed voluntate ac iudicio tuo factum esse videatur. Quare et illa quae violata expiabuntur et haec nostra quae sunt sanctissime conservata suam religionem obtinebunt. Nos hic in re publica 8 infirmam miseram commutabilique versamur. Credo enim te audisse nostros equites paene a senatu esse diiunctos; qui primum illud valde graviter tulerunt, promulgatum ex senatus consulto fuisse ut de eis qui ob iudi-candum acceperent quaereretur. Qua in re decernenda cum ego casu non adfuissem sensissemque id equestrem ordinem ferre moleste neque aperte dicere, obiurgavi senatum, ut mihi visus sum, summa cum auctoritate et in causa non verecunda admodum gravis et not to go to Asia, and had probably based his refusal upon his well-known policy of keeping out of politics (cf. Ep. V. 14). These facts would absolve Atticus from the charge of cherishing any ill-will toward Quintus. — *et illa . . .

et haec nostra*: the letter up to this point consists of two distinct parts; in the first part (1-4) the relations existing between Atticus and Quintus are discussed, in the second part (5-7) the relations between Atticus and Marcus Cicero. A third division of the letter, devoted to politics, begins with 8.

8. ob iudicandum: this senatorial investigation was directed particularly against the jury in the Clodian trial, the majority of which was supposed to have been bribed (cf. Ep. V. 5). Cato, who proposed the investigation (cf. Att.
2. 1. 8), was acting simply in the interests of justice; but, as many of the suspected jurors were equi-

tes, the equestrian order regarded the investigation as a covert attack upon themselves, which at the same time they could not oppose (neque aperte dicere) without appearing to defend crime. The incident offers an excellent opportunity to contrast the methods of Cato and of the political group to which he belonged, with those of Cicero and his school. Cato wishes to punish the offenders regardless of the political consequences, or,
as Cicero puts it (Att. 2. 1. 8), dicat
. . . tamquam in Platonis πολιτεία,
non tamquam in Romuli faece sensentiam. Cicero abhors the deed, but does not wish to punish the evil-doers, for fear of alienating the class to which they belonged, and thus weakening the opposition to the democracy. Cf. Att. 2. 1. 8 (end). Cato prevailed. — accepis- sent: used absolutely, as in Att. 5.
21. 5 and 11. 22. 2. Ordinarily pecu- niam is expressed. Cf. Crit. Append

9 copiosus fui. Ecce aliae deliciae equitum vix ferendae!
 quas ego non solum tuli, sed etiam ornavi. Asiam qui de censoribus conduxerant, questi sunt in senatu se cupiditate prolapsos nimium magno conduxisse; ut induceretur locatio postulaverunt. Ego princeps in ad-iutoribus, atque adeo secundus; nam ut illi auderent hoc postulare Crassus eos impulit. Invidiosa res, tur-pis postulatio et confessio temeritatis. Summum erat periculum ne, si nihil impetrassent, plane alienarentur a senatu. Huic quoque rei subventum est maxime a nobis, perfectumque ut frequentissimo senatu et liberalissimo uterentur, multa que a me de ordinum dignitate et concordia dicta sunt Kal. Decembr. et postridie.
 Neque adhuc res confecta est, sed voluntas senatus perspecta. Vnus enim contra dixerat Metellus consul designatus, unusque erat dicturus, ad quem propter diei brevitatem perventum non est, heros ille noster 10 Cato. Sic ego conservans rationem institutionemque nostram tueor, ut possum, illam a me conglutinatam

9. ecce aliae takes the place of a correlative to primum, 8.—aliae deliciae, another charming scheme.—Asiam: the privilege of collecting the taxes in the provinces for a period of five years was assigned to the highest bidders by the censors (cf. Marquardt's Staatsverwaltung II.² 248 ff.). Those who had contracted for the taxes in Asia, finding that they had offered too much, demanded that their contracts should be cancelled (ut induceretur locatio).—atque adeo: to introduce a correction; equivalent to vel potius. Cf. Cic. in Caec. 68 and Dziatzko on Ter. Phorm. 389.—secundus: Cicero was their second champion in point of time and of prominence. Crassus was probably heavily interested in a pecuniary way in the matter. Perhaps he also wished to widen the breach between the senate and the knights in order to further his own political plans.—summum . . . periculum: see Crit. Append.—frequentissimo senatu: at a frequens senatus mentioned in Att. 1. 14. 5 there were 415 members present, while a frequens senatus in the December holiday season contained 200 members (cf. Q. fr. 2. 1. 1, and Willems, Le Sénat de la Républ. Rom. II. 165–170).—Metellus: i.e. Q. Metellus Celer; cf. Att. 2. 1. 4; pro Cacl. 59.—heros ille: because regardless of the political consequences. Cf. note to ob iudicandum, above.

concordiam; sed tamen, quoniam ista sunt tam infirma, munitur quaedam nobis ad retinendas opes nostras tuta, ut spero, via quam tibi litteris satis explicare non possum, significatione parva ostendam tamen: utor Pompeio familiarissime. Video quid dicas. Cavebo quae sunt cavenda, ac scribam alias ad te de meis consiliis capessendae rei publicae plura. Lucceium scito consulatum habere in animo statim petere; duo enim soli dicuntur petitori: Caesar — cum eo coire per Arrium cogitat — et Bibulus — cum hoc se putat per C. Pisonem posse coniungi. Rides? Non sunt haec ridicula, mihi crede. Quid aliud scribam ad te, quid? Multa sunt, sed in aliud tempus. Si exspectare velis, cures ut sciam. Iam illud modeste rogo quod maxime cupio, ut quam primum venias. Nonis Decembribus.

10. concordiam: cf. coniunctio, Ep. V. 6 n. — quaedam . . . tuta . . . via: in response to a warning from Atticus, Cicero explains his political plans in Att. 2. 1. 6, as follows: non ut ego de optimati illa mea ratione decederem, sed ut ille (Pompeius) esset melior et aliquid de populari levitate deponeret. He has hopes even of Caesar: quid si etiam Caesarem . . . reddo meliorem.

11. Lucceium: cf. intr. note to Ep. XVIII. Cicero is writing of the elections which would take place in midsummer of 60 B.C. Caesar allied himself with Lucceius, but the Optimates partially frustrated the combination by the election of Bibulus as Caesar's colleague. — cum eo: i.e. Caesar. — Arri-

um: a man of neither ability nor distinguished antecedents, but put forward by Crassus to support Caesar. — cogitat, putat: sc. Lucceius. — cum hoc: i.e. Bibulus; cf. Ep. VII. 2 n. — C. Pisonem: C. Calpurnius Piso, who had been consul in 67 B.C. and later governor of Gallia Narbonensis, was an extreme member of the party of the Optimates, and a bitter enemy of Caesar, who had brought a legal action against him a few years before. He could therefore be relied upon to use his best efforts to further the cause of Bibulus, upon whom the Optimates centered their efforts in their struggle against Caesar. — mihi crede: cf. mihi crede, Ep. XXVII. 1 n.

VII. (Att. 2. 19.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

1 Multa me sollicitant et ex rei publicae tanto motu et ex iis periculis quae mihi ipsi intenduntur et sescenta sunt; sed mihi nihil est molestius quam Statium manu missum:

Nec meum imperium, — ac mitto imperium: non simultatem meam Revereri saltem!

Nec quid faciam scio neque tantum est in re quantus est sermo. Ego autem irasci ne possum quidem iis quos valde amo. Tantum doleo, ac mirifice quidem. Cetera in magnis rebus. Minae Clodi contentionesque, quae mihi proponuntur, modice me tangunt. Etenim vel subire eas videor mihi summa cum dignitate vel declinare nulla cum molestia posse. Dices fortasse: ‘Digni-

VII. Rome, July, 59 B.C. In accordance with the compact made in 60 B.C. between Caesar, Pompey, and Crassus, who formed what is commonly called the First Triumvirate, Caesar had been elected consul for 59 B.C., and the radical measures whose passage he had secured or was securing with the help of Pompey (cf. Att. 2. 16. 2) opened Cicero's eyes to the character of Pompey, and to the danger which threatened the state. The letter presents a lively picture of the political turmoil in Rome, throws light upon the attitude of the populace toward Caesar and Pompey, as viewed from an aristocratic standpoint, and discloses Cicero's realization for a moment of the danger with which the designs of Clodius threaten him.

1. sescenta: cf. miliens, Ep. V. 4 n.— Statium manu missum (esse): Quintus Cicero had lately set his slave Statius free, and this action had given color to the rumor that Statius exerted too great an influence over Quintus. Cf. Q. fr. 1. 2. 3 quod autem me maxime movere solebat, cum audiebam illum plus apud te posse quam gravitas istius aetatis imperi prudentiae postularet, etc. — nec meum imperium, etc.: from Ter. Phorm. 232. — mitto, I waive. — revereri: an exclamatory infinitive expressing indignation. — ego autem, etc.: perhaps a general statement, or Cicero may refer to his brother alone, as on grounds of politeness or discretion he often employs the plural when thinking of a single person. — cetera, etc.: pointing back to multa me sollicitant;

tatis ἄλις, tamquam δρυός: saluti, si me amas, consule.' Me miserum! cur non ades? Nihil profecto te praeteriret; ego fortasse τυφλώττω et nimium τῷ καλῷ προσπέπονθα. Scito nihil umquam fuisse tam infame, tam 2 turpe, tam peraeque omnibus generibus ordinibus aetatibus offensum quam hunc statum qui nunc est; magis mehercule quam vellem, non modo quam putaram. Populares isti iam etiam modestos homines sibilare docuerunt. Bibulus in caelo est, nec quare scio, sed ita laudatur quasi

Vnus homo nobis cunctando restituit rem.

Pompeius, nostri amores, quod mihi summo dolori est, ipse se adflixit. Neminem tenent voluntate; ne metu necesse sit iis uti vereor. Ego autem neque pugno cum illa causa propter illam amicitiam, neque approbo, ne omnia improbem quae antea gessi; utor via. Populi 3

'my other troubles concern important matters.'—dignitatis ἄλις, tamquam δρυός, quite enough of dignity, as men said of the oak. The proverbial expression, ἄλις δρυός, refers to the time when men gave up a diet of acorns for one of bread. In general language, 'times are changed, and what suited the past is ill adapted to the present.' Jeans aptly cites the same proverb from Voltaire: 'Le siècle du gland est passé, vous donnerex du pain aux hommes.' Cf. also Intr. 102.—τυφλώττω and τῷ καλῷ προσπέπονθα (am passionately attached) are very likely naturalized Greek phrases. Cf. Intr. 97.

2. generibus, ordinibus, to all parties, classes.—non modo quam putaram: 'to say nothing of what I had anticipated.'—populares: the triumvirs, who found their supporters in the democratic party.—Bibulus: Caesar's colleague in the consulship; cf. Luceium, Ep. VI. 11 n. He opposed Caesar's plans to the best of his ability, but his opposition was rather obstinate than effective. Cf. Mommsen, Rom. Hist. IV. 245. Subsequently he was commander of Pompey's fleet in the Civil War.—in caelo est, is extolled to the skies.—unus homo, etc.: the celebrated line from the Annals of Ennius descriptive of Fabius Maximus Cunctator, ironically applied to the passive resistance of Bibulus.—ipse se adflixit: i.e. by allying himself with Caesar.—tenent: sc. the triumvirs.—illa causa: the cause of the triumvirs.—illam amicitiam: Cicero's well-known friendship for Pompey.—utor via: i.e. the via media, turning off neither to the one side nor to the other.

sensus maxime theatro et spectaculis perspectus est. Nam gladiatoribus qua dominus qua advocati sibilis conscissi; ludis Apollinaribus Diphilus tragoedus in nostrum Pompeium petulanter invectus est;

Nostra miseria tu es magnus . . .

miliens coactus est dicere;

Eandem virtutem istam veniet tempus cum graviter gemes totius theatri clamore dixit, itemque cetera — nam et eiusmodi sunt ii versus ut in tempus ab inimico Pompei scripti esse videantur — ;

Si neque leges te neque mores [cogunt] . . .

et cetera magno cum fremitu et clamore sunt dicta. Caesar cum venisset, mortuo plausu Curio filius est insecutus. Huic ita plausum est ut salva re publica Pompeio plaudi solebat. Tulit Caesar graviter. Litte-

3. theatro et spectaculis: abl. of time. Cf. gladiatoribus, Ep. V. 11 n. and Intr. 83 d. Upon political demonstrations on such occasions, Böckel cites pro Sestio, 115-126. — qua . . . qua = et . . . et: a usage not occurring in Cicero outside the letters, but found in comedy; cf. Plaut. Men. 666. — dominus: this seems from the connection to refer to Pompey. As Tyrrell remarks, to the Roman at this time the figure in the foreground was Pompey, not Caesar. Pompey attended the gladiatorial show which was given by Gabinius (Att. 2. 24. 3). — ludis Apollinaribus: given July 6-13, under the direction of the praetor urbanus. — istam: difficult to understand as referring to the subject of gemes; but perhaps we may understand, 'the time shall come when you (Pompey) shall bitterly repent of this very prowess of yours,' i.e. in carrying everything through with a high hand. — mortuo plausu, as the applause (for Caesar) died away. The contrast revealed Caesar's unpopularity. Allowance should be made for the fact that Cicero was sitting among the senators and knights, who favored Curio, and at a distance from the lower classes, who were in the rear of the theatre, and could not well compare the applause from the two sections, even if he were impartial. — Curio filius: the younger Curio continued to be Caesar's most active and dangerous opponent until 50 B.C., when Caesar purchased his support by the payment of a large sum of money. Cf. Fam. 2. 1; 2. 7; 8. 10. 3; 16. 11. 2, and Vell. Pat. 2. 48. 3. — litterae . . . erat susceptum: the tenses in this paragraph rae Capuam ad Pompeium volare dicebantur. Inimici erant equitibus qui Curioni stantes plauserant, hostes omnibus. Rosciae legi, etiam frumentariae minitabantur. Sane res erat perturbata. Equidem malueram quod erat susceptum ab illis silentio transiri, sed vereor ne non liceat. Non ferunt homines quod videtur esse tamen ferendum; sed est iam una vox omnium, magis odio firmata quam praesidio. Noster autem Publius⁴ mihi minitatur, inimicus est; impendet negotium, ad quod tu scilicet advolabis. Videor mihi nostrum illum consularem exercitum bonorum omnium, etiam satis bonorum habere firmissimum. Pompeius significat studium erga me non mediocre; idem adfirmat verbum de me illum non esse facturum, in quo non me ille fallit, sed ipse fallitur. Cosconio mortuo sum in eius locum invitatus. Id erat vocari in locum mortui. Nihil mihi are probably epistolary. Cf. Intr. 84 c.—equitibus qui, etc.: the hostility of the equites toward Caesar is hard to understand, as his legislation to relieve the publicani who had bid too high for the privilege of collecting the taxes (Att. 1. 17. 9; 2. 16. 2) was calculated to win their favor.—Capuam: Pompey was at Capua as a member of the commission appointed under Caesar's agrarian laws.—Rosciae legi: the lex Roscia, proposed by L. Roscius Otho in 67 B.C., set apart 14 rows of seats for the knights immediately behind the orchestra, where the senators sat. This law had been threatened in Cicero's consulship also; cf. Att. 2. 1. 3 and Mommsen, St. R. III. 520.—frumentariae: the lex Terentia et Cassia passed in 73 B.C. fixed a low price for corn. Cf. Cic. Verr. ii. 3. 163, 174.

The repeal of this law would be aimed at the poor people, as the repeal of the Roscian law would injure the equites.—quam praesidio: i.e. than by power of resistance.

4. noster: the possessive is often thus used ironically in the letters of one whom the writer dislikes or despises. Cf. Intr. 88 b.—impendet negotium: Clodius wished to take vengeance upon Cicero for the latter's evidence on the trial for sacrilege, and for the discomfiture which he had suffered at his hands in the debate in the senate (cf. Ep. V. 2 n). Cf. Intr. 14.—consularem exercitum: i.e. the backing which Cicero's consulship won him.—illum (facturum): i.e. Clodius.—in locum mortui: Cosconius had been a member of Caesar's land commission. Cicero is offended that, inturpius apud homines fuisset, neque vero ad istam ipsam ἀσφάλειαν quicquam alienius; sunt enim illi apud bonos invidiosi, ego apud improbos meam retinuissem 5 invidiam, alienam adsumpsissem. Caesar me sibi vult esse legatum. Honestior declinatio haec periculi; sed ego hoc non repudio. Quid ergo est? Pugnare malo; nihil tamen certi. Iterum dico: utinam adesses! sed tamen, si erit necesse, arcessemus. Quid aliud? quid? Hoc opinor: certi sumus perisse omnia. Quid enim ἀκκίζόμεθα tamdiu? Sed haec scripsi properans et mehercule timide. Posthac ad te aut, si perfidelem habebo cui dem, scribam plane omnia, aut, si obscure scribam, tu tamen intelleges. In iis epistulis me Laelium, te Furium faciam; cetera erunt ἐν αἰνυμοῖς. Hic Caecilium colimus et observamus diligenter. Edicta Bibuli audio ad te missa. Iis ardet dolore et ira noster Pompeius.

stead of making him an original member of the commission, the triumvirs should wait until a member died, and should then offer him the chance of stepping into a dead man's shoes, so to speak. The phrase implies also that one holding a place on the commission would be dead politically. — istam: Atticus had evidently recommended a conciliatory course; see above, 'saluti, si me amas, consule.' — apud bonos invidiosi: the division of the public lands was always bitterly opposed by the Boni.

5. legatum: as Caesar's legate during his proconsulship, Cicero might hope for protection against the attacks of Clodius. Cf. Att. 2. 18. 3. Cicero's agitation shows itself in the abruptness of the style (Billerbeck). — perfi- delem: cf. Intr. 77. — Laelium: Cicero elsewhere (Ep. III. 3) compares himself to Laelius. In his next letter to Atticus (Att. 2. 20. 5) he announces his intention of calling himself Laelius in the letters and leaving the name of Atticus unchanged. The plan suggested here does not seem to have been carried out. Furius, consul 136 B.C., was a friend of the younger Laelius. — cetera erunt ἐν αἰνυμοῖς: numerous illustrations of this fact may be found in the care with which Cicero often avoids referring to people by their names. He alludes also to delicate personal and political matters in a covert way. Cf. Intr. 104. — Caecilium: cf. Ep. I. 3. — edicta Bibuli: Bibulus, Caesar's colleague in the consulship, after ineffectual efforts to oppose Caesar's

VIII. (Att. 2. 22.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Quam vellem Romae! Mansisses profecto si haec fore putassemus; nam Pulchellum nostrum facillime teneremus aut certe quid esset facturus scire possemus. Nunc se res sic habet: volitat, furit; nihil habet certi, multis denuntiat; quod fors obtulerit, id facturus videtur. Cum videt quo sit in odio status hic rerum, in eos qui haec egerunt impetum facturus videtur; cum autem rursus opes eorum et exercitus recordatur, convertit se in bonos. Nobis autem ipsis tum vim, tum iudicium minatur. Cum hoc Pompeius egit et, ut ad me ipse referebat, — alium enim habeo neminem testem — vehementer egit, cum diceret in summa se perfidiae et sceleris infamia fore, si mihi periculum crearetur ab eo quem ipse armasset, cum plebeium fieri action, shut himself up in his own house and issued proclamations declaring Caesar's acts illegal. Cf. Mommsen, Rom. Hist. IV. 247. — noster: cf. 4 n.

VIII. Rome, Aug. or Sept., 59 B.C. The excited tone and the abrupt style of the letter betray the writer's appreciation of the imminence of the danger threatening him.

1. quam vellem Romae: if the text is correct, either to be connected with the greeting (cf. Fam. 1. 10), or an extreme case of ellipsis, with te esse understood. Cf. Att. 13. 21. 6 de Caesaris adventu scripsit ad me Balbus non ante Kal.; 13. 2. 1 Pisonem sicubi (poteris, conveni, ut) de auro (conficias), and Intr. 95. — Pulchellum: cf. Ep. V. 10 n. — nunc: in the existing state of affairs, in contrast to what would have been true had Atticus remained. — denuntiat (sc. vim): the absolute use of denuntio is remarkable. See Crit. Append. — eos: i.e. the triumvirs. — exercitus: the force awaiting Caesar in Gaul.

2. cum hoc: i.e. Clodio. — alium . . . testem: this suggests a doubt of the truth of Pompey's statement. There can in fact be little doubt that Caesar and Pompey understood the designs of Clodius, and tacitly approved of his election to the tribuneship. It was part of their plan to break down the prestige of the senate, and that could be accomplished in no better way than by degrading one of its leaders and discrediting its somewhat autocratic treatment of the Catilinarian conspiracy. — cum . . . passus esset: Pompey actually passus esset; fidem recepisse sibi et ipsum et Appium de me; hanc si ille non servaret, ita laturum ut omnes intellegerent nihil sibi antiquius amicitia nostra fuisse. Haec et in eam sententiam cum multa dixisset, aiebat illum primo sane diu multa contra, ad extremum autem manus dedisse et adfirmasse nihil se contra eius voluntatem esse facturum. Sed postea tamen ille non destitit de nobis asperrime loqui; quod si non faceret, tamen ei nihil crederemus atque omnia, sicut facimus, par-

 3 remus. Nunc ita nos gerimus ut in dies singulos et studia in nos hominum et opes nostrae augeantur. Rem publicam nulla ex parte attingimus; in causis atque in illa opera nostra forensi summa industria versamur, quod egregie non modo iis qui utuntur opera nostra, sed etiam in vulgus gratum esse sentimus. Domus celebratur, occurritur; renovatur memoria consularis, studia significantur; in eam spem adducimur, ut nobis ea contentio quae impendit interdum non fugi-
 4 enda videatur. Nunc mihi et consiliis opus est tuis et amore et fide; quare advola. Expedita mihi erunt took some part in the proceedings of the comitia curiata when Clodius was adopted; cf. Att. 2. 12. 1. — fidem recepisse, etc.: 'both Clodius and Appius have given him (Pompey) a promise not to attack me.' Recipio in this sense is colloquial. The full expression is in me recipio. — Appium: Appius Claudius Pulcher, the brother of Clodius, had been Cicero's friend until the quarrel with Clodius occurred. He was in 52 B.C. Cicero's predecessor as governor of Cilicia. The 13 letters of Bk. 3, ad Fam., are addressed to him. — multa contra (sc. dixisse): cf. Intr. 95. The verb of saying is most frequently omitted, as here, in reporting the words of another.

3. in causis: in this year Cicero delivered orations in behalf of C. Antonius, of A. Thermus, and of L. Flaccus. Of these a portion of the oration for Flaccus is preserved. — occurritur: me run to meet me when I appear upon the street.

4. expedita, etc.: Cicero in later years did not consider the advice of Atticus, who came to Rome to help him, so judicious as he had hoped it would be; cf. Ep. XV. 1 (written in 57 B.C.) cognoram . . . te in consiliis mihi dandis nec fortioerem nec prudentioerem

omnia, si te habebō. Multa per Varronem nostrum agi possunt, quae te urgente erunt firmiora, multa ab ipso Publio elici, multa cognosci, quae tibi occulta esse non poterunt, multa etiam — sed absurdum est singula explicare, cum ego requiram te ad omnia. Vnum illud 5 tibi persuadeas velim, omnia mihi fore explicata, si te videro; sed totum est in eo, si ante quam ille ineat magistratum. Puto Pompeium Crasso urgente, si tu aderis, qui per Βοῶπιον ex ipso intellegere possis qua fide ab illis agatur, nos aut sine molestia aut certe sine errore futuros. Precibus nostris et cohortatione non indiges. Quid mea voluntas, quid tempus, quid rei quam me ipsum. — Varronem: cf. intr. to Ep. LX. Varro was an intimate friend of Pompey, and could therefore be of service to Cicero.

5. si te videro: protases of the future form often stand in the oratio obliqua in the indicative to indicate the time relation solely (Böckel). Cf. also Intr. 84 a. — si ante: sc. te videro; cf. quam vellem, I n. — ille ineat magistratum: Clodius would become tribune in December. — puto Pompeium, etc.: 'I think that if you are here, while Crassus is urging Pompey on, you, who can find out from the prime mover himself through her of the ox-eyes, with how much sincerity the triumvirs are acting, I think, I say, that we shall be either free from annoyance or at least from misconceptions.' — Crasso urgente: the dislike which Crassus felt for Cicero seems to date from 66 B.C., when Cicero, in his speech for the Manilian law, by exaggerating the part which Pompey had played in certain matters, had belittled the achievements of Crassus. An apparent, not a real, reconciliation took place in the senate in 61 B.C. (cf. Ep. V. 5 n; XIII. 2). Another open quarrel between the two men occurred in 54 B.C.; cf. Fam. 1. 9. 20. — Βοῶπιον: Clodia, the sister of Clodius. This epithet of Hera as applied to her has a double meaning. On the one hand, as with Hera, the brilliancy of Clodia's eyes was one of her claims to beauty. Cicero speaks of her flagrantia oculorum, pro Cael. 49. On the other hand, her will was imperious, and her fondness to control men and things as well marked as was that of Hera. She was the Lesbia of the poet Catullus, and the mistress of the young orator Caelius, by whom the letters of Bk. 8, ad Fam. were written. For a sketch of her life, cf. Boissier, Cicéron et ses Amis, 174-186. Cf. also Merrill's Catullus, Intr. 18 ff. She hated Cicero, and knew and sympathized with her brother's plans against him. Apparently Atticus was one of her friends.

6 magnitudo postulet intellegis. De re publica nihil habeo ad te scribere, nisi summum odium omnium hominum in eos qui tenent omnia. Mutationis tamen spes nulla; sed, quod facile sentias, taedet ipsum Pompeium vehementerque paenitet. Non provideo satis quem exitum futurum putem, sed certe videntur haec
7 aliquo eruptura. Libros Alexandri, neglegentis hominis et non boni poëtae, sed tamen non inutilis, tibi remisî. Numerium Numestium libenter accepi in amicitiam; et hominem gravem et prudentem et dignum tua commendatione cognovi.

IX. (Att. 2. 23.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

1 Numquam ante arbitror te epistulam meam legisse, nisi mea manu scriptam. Ex eo colligere poteris quanta occupatione distinear; nam, cum vacui temporis nihil haberem et cum recreandae voculae causa

6. de re publica: cf. Intr. 91. — nihil habeo ad te scribere, I have nothing to write you. Cf. Cic. pro Balb. 33 quid habes igitur dicere de Gaditano foedere. — qui tenent omnia: i.e. the triumvirs. — non provideo satis, etc.: colloquial for non provideo satis qui exitus futurus sit. Such phrases occur most frequently after dicere, arbitrari, credere, and praedicare. They are very frequent in Latin comedy, as sed finem fore quem dicam nescio, Plaut. Trin. 2; sed dic tamen unde onustam celocem agere te praedicem, Plaut. Pseud. 1306; inimiciorem nunc utrum credam magis sodalemne esse an Bacchidem, incertum admodumst, Plaut. Bacch. 500 f.

7. libros Alexandri: in 59 B.C. Cicero was at work on his Chorographia, a treatise upon geography (cf. Att. 2. 4. 3; 2. 6. 1; 2. 7. 1), and Atticus had sent to him a poem upon the same subject, written by Alexander of Ephesus (Att. 2. 20. 6). — Numerium Numestium: recommended to Cicero by Atticus; cf. Att. 2. 20. 1.

IX. Rome, Aug. or Sept., 59 B.C.

1. nisi mea manu scriptam: cf. Intr. 64. — quanta occupatione distinear: his attention was given to professional matters rather than to politics; cf. 3. — voculae: cf. pulchellus, Ep. V. 10 n, and voculas, Ep. LI. 2 n. — ambulare: Quintilian, II. 3. 19.

necesse esset mihi ambulare, haec dictavi ambulans. Primum igitur illud te scire volo, Sampsiceramum no-²strum amicum vehementer sui status paenitere resfuiti-^{que}que in eum locum cupere ex quo decidit, doloremque suum impertire nobis et medicinam interdum aperte quaerere, quam ego posse inveniri nullam puto; deinde omnes illius partis auctores ac socios nullo adversario consensescere, consensionem universorum nec voluntatis nec sermonis maiorem umquam fuisse. Nos autem —³ nam id te scire cupere certo scio — publicis consiliis nullis intersumus, totosque nos ad forensem operam laboremque contulimus, ex quo, quod facile intellegi possit, in multa commemoratione earum rerum quas gessimus desiderioque versamur. Sed Βοώπιδος no-recommends walking, among other things, as good for the voice. — dictavi: Tiro, Cicero's principal secretary, was an expert shorthand writer and the author of a system of stenography. Cf. Intr. 57. — haec dictavi ambulans: no better proof could be required that Cicero did not intend his letters for publication than the fact that many of them were composed while on a journey, or just as the vessel is weighing anchor, between the courses at dinner, or while the messenger is impatiently standing behind him with cloak and hat on. Cf. Ep. LXX. 1. To his brother, who had complained of the illegibility of his letters, he writes: sed hoc facio semper, ut quicumque calamus in manus meas venerit, eo sic utar tamquam bono, Q. fr. 2. 14. 1. Cf. also ante lucem, Ep. XVI. 7 and Intr. 64.

2. Sampsiceramum: a nickname several times applied to Pompey (cf. Att. 2. 17. 1). Sampsiceramus was the petty ruler of Emesa, which Pompey had conquered. Elsewhere (Att. 2. 17. 3) Pompey is alluded to as Arabarches, the despot of eastern Egypt, or Hierosolymarius, 'the Jerusalemite' (Att. 2. 9. 1) from his capture of Jerusalem. The application of these nicknames to Pompey suggests that after his return from the East, he assumed an arrogant and autocratic manner more befitting a petty eastern despot than a Roman citizen. The very sound of the nicknames would also suggest his pompous manner. — ex quo decidit: cf. quia deciderat ex astris, Att. 2. 21. 4. — medicinam . . . quaerere: a favorite metaphor, not only with Cicero but with other Roman writers; developed at great length, for instance, by Servius Sulpicius in Ep. LXXV. 5. Cf. also Intr. 99.

3. desiderio versamur: i. e. I am haunted by a painful remembrance of my past achievements. — Βοώπιδος: cf. Ep. VIII. 5 n. — strae consanguineus non mediocres terrores iacit atque denuntiat, et Sampsicramo negat, ceteris prae se fert et ostentat. Quamobrem, si me amas tantum quantum profecto amas, si dormis, expergiscere, si stas, ingredi, si ingredi, curre, si curris, advola. Credibile non est quantum ego in consiliis et prudentia tua, quodque maximum est, quantum in amore et fide ponam. Magnitudo rei longam orationem fortasse desiderat, coniunctio vero nostrorum animorum brevitate contenta est. Permagni nostra interest te, si comitiis non potueris, at declarato illo esse Romae. Cura ut valeas.

X. (Att. 3. 4.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Miseriae nostrae potius velim quam inconstantiae tribuas, quod a Vibone quo te arcessebamur subito

nostrae: cf. noster, Ep. VII. 4 n. Clodia had at one time hoped to attract Cicero by her charms, and her hatred of him was partly due to the failure of her efforts.—si comitiis (esse Romae) non potueris: the elections were to take place Oct. 18 (cf. Att. 2. 20. 6), but the tribunes did not enter on the duties of their office until December 10.

Cicero's urgent requests for the presence of Atticus would seem to have been successful, as there is a break in the correspondence between the two men from November, 59, to March, 58, during which time Atticus was doubtless in Rome.

The correspondence of the year 59 B.C. reveals the utter helplessness of the senatorial party to cope with the triumvirs. The former were without a 'platform' and without leaders. The petulant opposition of Bibulus and the tactless obstinacy of Cato excited only ridicule and anger. These letters as a whole disclose also Cicero's lack of political insight in failing utterly to appreciate the strength of the Triumvirate, and in failing to see up to the last moment the danger of his own position (cf. also Intr. 14). In striking contrast to the letters of this year are those written six months later.

X. Vibo, about April 12, 58 B.C. The letters of this third book, ad Att., written in exile, expose perhaps more than any other portion of his correspondence, the weak side of Cicero's character. He is unmanly, selfish, and ungrateful. In contrast the letters of 44 and 43 B.C. breathe a spirit of unflinching courage and unselfish discessimus; adlata est enim nobis rogatio de pernicie mea, in qua quod correctum esse audieramus erat eiusmodi, ut mihi ultra quadringenta milia liceret esse, illo pervenire non liceret. Statim iter Brundisium versus contuli ante diem rogationis, ne et Sica, apud quem eram, periret et quod Melitæ esse non licebat. Nunc tu propera ut nos consequare, si modo recipiemur. Adhuc invitamur benigne, sed quod superest timemus. Me, mi Pomponi, valde paenitet vivere, qua in re apud patriotism. It is only when two such epochs in Cicero's life are placed side by side that the reader can discover the true key to his character, which is to be found in the fact that he was peculiarly sensitive to his surroundings, and was exalted or depressed by circumstances which would have had no abiding influence upon a more phlegmatic nature (cf. Intr. 50).

Without waiting to see what action would be taken upon the bill of Clodius, which did not mention him by name (qui civem Romanum indemnatum interemisset, ei aqua et igni interdiceretur, Vell. Paterc. 2. 45), Cicero left Rome about March 20, 58 B.C., and went to his friend Sica, near Vibo. Here news reached him of the amended bill directed against him personally. He therefore hastily left Vibo for Tarentum and Brundisium. See Intr. 15 f.

quo te arcessebamus: in Att. 3. 3.—rogatio: cf. Ep. V. 2 n. The rogatio in this case read as follows: velitis iubeatis ut M. Tullio aqua et igni interdictum sit; cf. Cic. de Domo, 47.—correctum: the amended bill forbade Cicero to remain at any point within 400 miles of Italy. After a bill had been brought forward an interval of 17 days, a trinundinum (cf.

Herzog, I. 1092, n. 2; see, however, Momm. St. R. III. 376, n. 1) was allowed to elapse before a vote was taken upon it, during which time it could be modified.—illo: to Sicily or Malta.—rogationis: sc. ferendae.—ne et: carelessly used for et ne, as the force of ne does not extend to the second of the two correlative clauses.—ne . . . periret: those who should harbor an exile within the prescribed limits made themselves liable to a severe penalty.—Melitæ: Malta was within the 400-mile limit.—mi Pomponi: Cicero rarely addresses his correspondent by name in a letter. In the 397 letters to Atticus, Atticus is addressed by name only 28 times: mi Attice nineteen times, mi Tite once, and mi T. Pomponi once, otherwise as in this letter. The omission of the praenomen, as Tyrrell remarks, indicated intimacy; cf. quod sine praenomine familiariter, ut debebas, ad me epistolam misisti, etc., Fam. 7. 32. 1. The polite order was mi Pomponi, and Cicero deviates from this order but once, when in a jesting letter he addresses a friend, Testa mi. Cf. also Cicero mi, Curius, Fam. 7. 29. 1. In general, the possessive pronoun indicates informality.—paenitet vivere, qua me tu plurimum valuisti. Sed haec coram. Fac modo ut venias.

XI. (Fam. 14. 4.)

TVLLIVS S. D. TERENCEIAE ET TVLLIAE ET
CICERONI SVIS.

1 Ego minus saepe do ad vos litteras quam possum propterea quod cum omnia mihi tempora sunt misera, tum vero cum aut scribo ad vos aut vestras lego, conficior lacrimis sic ut ferre non possim. Quod utinam minus vitae cupidi fuissetus! certe nihil aut non multum in vita mali vidissetus. Quod si nos ad aliquam alicuius commodi aliquando recipiendi spem fortuna reservavit, minus est erratum a nobis; si haec mala fixa sunt, ego vero te quam primum, mea vita, cupio videre et in tuo complexu emori, quoniam neque dii, quos tu castissime coluisti, neque homines, quibus ego
2 semper servivi, nobis gratiam rettulerunt. Nos Brun-in re . . . valuisti: Cicero seems to have contemplated suicide. Cf. Att. 3. 7. 2, first sentence, and Att. 3. 3 utinam illum diem videam, cum tibi agam gratias quod me vivere coegisti! adhuc quidem valde me paenitet. — coram: cf. Intr. 95.

XI. Brundisium, April 29, 58 B.C. On suis, cf. suis, Ep. XIII. superscription, n.

1. litteras: litterae probably indicates here, as in several other passages, more than one letter; cf. litteris, Ep. XCIX. 1 n. — vitae cupidi: Cicero may be regretting either his mistake in not having met death while making an armed resistance to Clodius, as some of his friends advised, or his failure to commit suicide; cf. paenitet vivere, Ep. X. n. — aliquam

alicuius . . . aliquando: these words indicate sufficiently Cicero's despair: — dii . . . servivi: a statement suggestive of the respective attitudes of the two sexes in Cicero's time in religious matters. — neque homines . . . rettulerunt: Cicero's friends did, however, stand by him, and many of those outside Rome, like Flaccus at Brundisium (2) and Plancius at Thessalonica (Att. 3. 14. 2), assisted him at the peril of their lives and fortunes, while his friends at Rome and the people throughout Italy worked steadily for his recall. For the risk which Flaccus ran, cf. pro Planc. 97 in hortos me M. Laeni Flacci contuli, cui cum omnis metus publicatio bonorum exsilium mors proponeretur haec

disi apud M. Laenium Flaccum dies XIII fuimus, virum optimum, qui periculum fortunarum et capitis sui prae mea salute neglexit, neque legis improbissimae poena deductus est quo minus hospiti et amicitiae ius officiumque praestaret. Huic utinam aliquando gratiam referre possimus! Habebimus quidem semper. Brun-³ disio profecti sumus a. d. II K. Mai.; per Macedoniam Cyzicum petebamus. O me perditum! O adflictum! Quid nunc rogem te ut venias, mulierem aegram et corpore et animo confectam? Non rogem? Sine te igitur sim? Opinor, sic agam: si est spes nostri reditus, eam confirmes et rem adiuves; sin, ut ego metuo, transactum est, quoquo modo potes ad me fac venias. Vnum hoc scito: si te habebo, non mihi videbor plane perisse. Sed quid Tulliola mea fiet? Iam id vos videte; mihi deest consilium. Sed certe, quoquo modo se res habebit, illius misellae et matrimonio et famae servi-perpeti, si acciderent, maluit quam custodiam mei capitis dimittere.

2. capitis: citizenship in its broadest sense.—poena: cf. ne periret, Ep. X. n.

3. profecti sumus: a regular use of the epistolary perfect for the present. Cicero is on the point of sailing.—a. d. II K. Mai.: an unusual expression for pridie K. Mai., but for the same formula, cf. C. I. L. I. 902, 979.—petebamus: a regular epistolary imperfect, indicating what would be going on at the time the letter was received. Cf. Intra. 84 c.—aegram . . . corpore: Terentia's health would seem to have been delicate at the best, if we may judge from Cicero's earnest words in several letters, e.g. Ep. LVIII. and Fam. 14. 22. Cf. also Ep. LVI.

—sic agam: a colloquial phrase, meaning little more than 'this is the best plan.' Its stereotyped character is shown by the fact that Cicero proceeds to state a plan of action, not for himself but for Terentia.—confirmes . . . adiuves: on the mood and tense, cf. Intra. 84 b.—transactum est, it's all over; a colloquialism. Actum est is more common; cf. e.g. Att. 5. 15. 1; 9. 12. 4, and Plaut. Trin. 308; Ter. And. 465. Both phrases convey the idea of an unfortunate conclusion. In Ter. Heaut. 564 that idea is more fully expressed by the addition of perii.—quid Tulliola mea fiet: cf. Att. 6. 1. 14 quid illo fiet? quid me? On the diminutives Tulliola and misellae (below), cf. Intra. 76 and pulchellus, Ep. V. 10 n.—matri-

endum est. Quid? Cicero meus quid aget? Iste vero sit in sinu semper et complexu meo. Non queo plura iam scribere; impedit maeror. Tu quid egeris nescio; utrum aliquid teneas an, quod metuo, plane sis 4 spoliata. Pisonem, ut scribis, spero fore semper nostrum. De familia liberata nihil est quod te moveat. Primum tuis ita promissum est, te facturam esse ut quisque esset meritus; est autem in officio adhuc Orpheus, praeterea magnopere nemo; ceterorum servorum ea causa est ut, si res a nobis abisset, liberti nostri essent, si obtinere potuissent; sin ad nos pertinerent, servirent praeterquam oppido pauci. Sed haec minora 5 sunt. Tu quod me hortaris ut animo sim magno et spem habeam reciperae salutis, id velim sit eiusmodi ut recte sperare possimus. Nunc miser quando tuas iam litteras accipiam? Quis ad me perferet? Quas ego exspectassem Brundisi, si esset licitum per nautas, qui tempestatem praetermittere noluerunt. Quod reliquum est, sustenta te, mea Terentia, ut potes honestissime. Viximus, floruimus; non vitium nostrum, sed virtus nostra nos adflixit; peccatum est nullum, nisi quod non una animam cum ornamentis amisimus. Sed si hoc fuit liberis nostris gratius, nos vivere, cetera, monio: Tullia's marriage to her first husband Piso; cf. Pisonem nostrum, Ep. XIII. 2 n. Cicero is thinking of the payment of the dowry. — Cicero meus: Marcus Cicero, the orator's son.

4. de familia liberata: Cicero's disposition of his own slaves before leaving Rome is fully explained in the sentence, ceterorum servorum . . . oppido pauci. Terentia evidently fears the loss of her slaves. Cicero quiets her anxiety by assuring her that the control of her slaves rests in her own hands (te facturam esse, etc.). — in officio, faithful. — si obtinere potuissent, if they could maintain (their claim to freedom against my enemies). — oppido: a colloquial word; cf. Dziatzko on Ter. Phorm. 317 and Wölfflin, Lat. u. rom. Comparison, 21.

5. esset licitum: cf. licitum est, Ep. LXXV. 3 n. — ornamentis: i.e. position and dignity.

quamquam ferenda non sunt, feramus. Atque ego, qui te confirmo, ipse me non possum. Clodium Philhetaerum quod valetudine oculorum impediabatur, hominem fidelem, remisi. Sallustius officio vincit omnes. Pescennius est perbenevolus nobis, quem semper spero tui fore observantem. Sica dixerat se mecum fore, sed Brundisio discessit. Cura, quod potes, ut valeas et sic existimes, me vehementius tua miseria quam mea comoveri. Mea Terentia, fidissima atque optima uxor, et mea carissima filiola et spes reliqua nostra, Cicero, valete. Pr. K. Mai. Brundisio.

XII. (Att. 3. 12.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Tu quidem sedulo argumentaris quid sit sperandum, et maxime per senatum, idemque caput rogationis proponi scribis, quare in senatu dici nihil liceat; itaque siletur. Hic tu me accusas quod me afflictum, cum ita

6. Clodium Philhetaerum, Sallustius, Pescennius: freedmen.—perbenevolus: cf. Intr. 77.—Sica: cf. Ep. X.—quod potes: with posse the restrictive relative quod and quod eius are often found with the indic. in Cicero and in Terence (Böckel). Cf. Att. 10. 2. 2 tu tamen, quod poteris, ut adhuc fecisti, nos consiliis iuvabis. In this letter, one of the most familiar and unreserved in the correspondence, there is a pronounced colloquial tone, e.g. sic agam, transactum est (3), oppido (4), and esset licitum (5).—Brundisio: cf. Intr. 62.

XII. Thessalonica, July 17, 58 B.C. Cicero stayed at Thessalonica from May to November, 58 B.C.,

under the protection of the quaestor Plancius.

1. sedulo: probably from the conversational vocabulary, if we may judge from its frequency in comedy and in the Letters, and its infrequency (e.g. Cic. de Fin. 3. 16; Livy, 34. 14. 3) elsewhere. Cf. Ter. Ad. 251, 413; Eun. 362; Heaut. 126; Cic. Att. 9. 15. 6; Fam. 5. 10 A. 2. It is found oftenest with facio.—caput . . . scribis: cf. Att. 3. 15. 6 at tute scripsisti ad me quoddam caput legis Clodium in curiae poste fixisse NE REFERRI NEVE DICI LICERET ('that no motion should be brought forward and no speech made').—hic: this word may express surprise here as elsewhere in the Letters:

sim adflictus ut nemo umquam, quod tute intellegis? Spem ostendis secundum comitia. Quae ista est eodem
 2 tribuno pl. et inimico consule designato? Percussisti autem me etiam de oratione prolata. Cui vulneri, ut scribis, medere, si quid potes. Scripsi equidem olim ei iratus quod ille prior scripserat, sed ita compresseram ut numquam emanaturam putarem. Quomodo exciderit nescio; sed quia numquam accidit ut cum eo verbo uno concertarem, et quia scripta mihi videtur neglegentius quam ceterae, puto posse probari non esse meam. Id, si putas me posse sanari, cures velim; sin plane perii,
 3 minus laboro. Ego etiam nunc eodem in loco iaceo, sine sermone ullo, sine cogitatione ulla. Licet tibi, ut scribis, significarim ut ad me venires; dudum tamen intellego te istic prodesse, hic ne verbo quidem levare me posse. Non queo plura scribere, nec est quod scribam: vestra magis exspecto. Data XVI Kal. Sextiles Thessalonicae.

'do you blame me, then?' Cf. Ep. LXXIX. 4 hic tu me abesse urbe miraris, in qua domus nihil delectare possit, etc.? or it may mean, 'at this point in your letter,' after writing of the action of Clodius. — secundum comitia: Pompey expressed later the same hope of favorable action 'after the comitia'; cf. Att. 3, 18. 1. — eodem . . . designato: i.e. with Clodius as tribune and Metellus Nepos as consul designatus. Metellus Nepos proved to be friendly. See Cicero's letter of thanks for the support of Metellus Nepos, Fam. 5. 4; cf. also pro Sest. 130.

2. de oratione prolata: Cicero had written a speech against Curio the elder, which unfortunately was published. Cf. also Att. 3, 15. 3 in senatu rem probe scribis actam;

sed quid Curio? an illam orationem non legit? quae unde sit prolata nescio. This must be a different oration from the one of which we have extracts in Ep. V. 9. — quod ille prior scripserat: probably just before or after the trial of Clodius, as Curio was the champion of Clodius in the senate; cf. Att. 1. 14. 5. — quomodo exciderit, how it got out. — puto . . . meam: Cicero's intention to disavow the authorship of this speech finds some extenuation in the desperate nature of his position. For other questionable acts, cf. Intr. 47.

3. ut ad me venires, etc.: see Crit. Append. — istic, there, where you are, i.e. in Rome. — vestra: (not tua) to include letters from other friends also. — data (sc. est epistula) XVI Kal.: in the letters

XIII. (Fam. 14. 2.)

TVLLIVS S. D. TERENTIAE SVAE ET TVLLIOLAE ET
CICERONI SVIS.

Noli putare me ad quemquam longiores epistulas scribere, nisi si quis ad me plura scripsit cui puto rescribi oportere; nec enim habeo quid scribam, nec hoc tempore quicquam difficilius facio. Ad te vero et ad nostram Tulliolam non queo sine plurimis lacrimis scribere; vos enim video esse miserrimas quas ego beatissimas semper esse volui, idque praestare debui et, nisi tam timidi fuissetis, praestitissetis. Pisonem no-

of the third book to Atticus, the date is regularly given without a.d. The same statement is not true of the letters to others during this period. — Thessalonicae: cf. Intr. 62.

XIII. Thessalonica, Oct. 5, 58 B.C. suis in the superscription is plural because it belongs to both the children. For variations of this salutation, cf. Fam. 14. 1, 3, and 6. The possessive pronoun indicates familiarity, and Cicero uses it in addressing the members of his family only. It is used in all the 24 letters to his wife, in Bk. 14, ad Fam., with one exception: in the fifteenth letter, Ep. LVIII., which is cold and formal, he writes, Tullius s. d. Terentiae. Upon the significance of the possessive in this use, cf. Fam. 16. 18. 1. In a previous letter to his freedman Cicero had written, Tullius Tironi sal., omitting Tiro's praenomen. The latter evidently remarked upon the salutation as too familiar for a letter from patron to freedman. Upon which Cicero put at the head of his next letter the same salutation, and added in the body of the letter, Quid igitur? non sic oportet? equidem censeo sic; addendum etiam SVO.

1. nisi si: apparently a favorite pleonasm for nisi in the language of everyday life; see Intr. 101, and cf. Reisig-Schmalz, Lat. Syn. note 612 d; Schmalz, Jahresb. Mannheim, 1881, p. 44. Schmalz says that it has crowded the classical nisi out of use in the Latin of the Christian fathers. — nec . . . scribam: note the difference in meaning between non habeo quod scribam, non habeo quid scribam, and non habeo scribere. Cf. Ep. VIII. 6 n. — Tulliolam: see Intr. 53. On the diminutive, cf. pulchellus, Ep. V. 10 n. — tam timidi: Lucullus had advised (Plut. Cic. 31) the use of force in opposing Clodius. Atticus and others had apparently counselled moderation. Cf. Fam. 1. 9. 13; Att. 3. 15. 7. The change to the plural is probably made to include these two friends and others who had advised a moderate course.

2. Pisonem nostrum: cf. Intr.

strum merito eius amo plurimum. Eum, ut potui, per litteras cohortatus sum gratiasque egi, ut debui. In novis tr. pl. intellego spem te habere. Id erit firmum, si Pompei voluntas erit; sed Crassum tamen metuo. A te quidem omnia fieri fortissime et amantissime video, nec miror, sed maereo casum eiusmodi ut tantis tuis miseriis meae miseriae sublevantur. Nam ad me P. Valerius homo officiosus scripsit, id quod ego maximo cum fletu legi, quemadmodum a Vestae ad tabulam Valeriam ducta esses. Hem, mea lux, meum desiderium, unde omnes opem petere solebant! Te nunc, mea Terentia, sic vexari, sic iacere in lacrimis et sordibus, 53. He worked devotedly to prevent Cicero's exile, and afterwards to secure his recall; cf. Fam. 14 1. 4; 14. 3. 3.—in novis tr. pl.: the new tribunes would come into office Dec. 10, and had all promised to help Cicero. One of the number was Milo, leader of the 'physical force' section of the senatorial party.—voluntas erit: sc. firma.—Crassum: cf. Ep. VIII. 5 n.—P. Valerius: mentioned several times in the Letters, but little is known of him.—a (sc. templo) Vestae: cf. the English expression 'from St. Paul's.' This ellipsis of templum or aedes between the preposition and the genitive of the name of a divinity, according to C. F. W. Müller, appears first in Ter. Ad. 582. 'It belongs, therefore, to the colloquial language of the Scipionic circle, and must be considered rather familiar than vulgar or archaic.' Cf. ad Opis, Att. 14. 14. 5; ad Apollinis, Ep. XVI. 3; ad Vestae, Hor. Sat. 1. 9. 35. Somewhat similar is ad L. Tondei (domum) vorsu, C. I. L. I. 1143. See also Intr. 95 and Arch. f. lat. Lex.

II. 368. Terentia's half-sister Fabia was a Vestal virgin, and Terentia had probably taken refuge with her.—ad tabulam Valeriam: Pliny, N. H. 35. 22, quoted by Hofmann, tells us that there was a painting upon the side wall of the Curia Hostilia, executed by the order of M.' Valerius Maximus to celebrate his victories. Near this painting (the Tabula Valeria) there was probably a banker's stall, to which Terentia was forced to come to make an affidavit with reference to her property, or possibly to secure a loan.—hem: a colloquial word, to be distinguished from the demonstrative particle em. It expresses joy, astonishment, or, as here, grief. It is frequent in comedy; cf. Ter. And. 383, 420, 462. and see Intr. 92.—mea lux, meum desiderium: cf. Fam. 14. 5. 1 si tu et Tullia, lux nostra, valetis; Ep. XI. 6 mea Terentia, fidissima atque optima uxor; Fam. 14. 5. 2 vos, mea suavissima et optatissima Terentia. Cf. Intr. 49, 52.—unde . . . solebant: as they hoped to win Cicero's legal or political support through her in idque fieri mea culpa, qui ceteros servavi ut nos periremus! Quod de domo scribis, hoc est de area, ego 3 vero tum denique mihi videbor restitutus, si illa nobis erit restituta. Verum haec non sunt in nostra manu.

 Illud doleo, quae impensa faciendast, in eius partem te miseram et despoliatam venire. Quod si conficitur negotium, omnia consequemur; sin eadem nos fortuna premet, etiamne reliquias tuas misera proicies? Obsecro te, mea vita, quod ad sumptum attinet, sine alios qui possunt, si modo volunt, sustinere, et valetudinem istam infirmam, si me amas, noli vexare; nam mihi ante oculos dies noctesque versaris; omnis labores te excipere video; timeo ut sustineas. Sed video in te esse omnia. Quare, ut id quod speras et quod agis consequamur, servi valetudini. Ego ad quos scribam 4

tercession. — iacere, etc.: cf. Ep. XII. 3 eodem in loco iaceo, etc. The infinitives vexari, etc., are exclamatory. — qui ceteros, etc.: the execution of Lentulus and his fellow-conspirators, by which Cicero had saved Roman citizens from murder and arson, was the pretext for his banishment.

3. de domo: cf. Intr. 16. — illud doleo, etc.: a common Latin idiom; cf. Att. 2. 24. 1 quas Numestio litteras dedi, sic te iis evocabam. — negotium: i.e. Cicero's recall. Negotium with the force of res is colloquial, and frequent in all periods. Cf. the slang expression, 'Tell me the whole business.' — mea vita: cf. note upon mea lux above. — sine alios . . . sustinere: Terentia proposed to sell her own property in order to raise money for the expenses attendant upon her husband's recall. Cicero opposes this plan still more urgently in Fam. 14. 1. 5 quod ad me.

mea Terentia, scribis te vicum vendituram, quid, obsecro te, — me miserum! — quid futurum est? et, si nos premet eadem fortuna, quid puero misero fiet? Cf. also Ep. XI. 3. — si me amas: this expression and amabo te, sis (si vis) and sodes (si audes) are set phrases in colloquial Latin which are joined to words of command for the sake of politeness and emphasis, e.g. da mihi hoc, mel meum, si me amas, si audes, Plaut. Trin. 244; amabo te, si quid quod opus fuerit Appio facies, ponito me in gratia, Fam. 8. 6. 5. Cf. also Intr. 100, and Arch. f. lat. Lex. IX. 485-491. — mihi ante oculos dies noctesque versaris: a colloquial pleonasm which occurs also in Fam. 14. 3. 2, and would not perhaps have been employed, had the writer been in a calmer frame of mind. See note to nisi si, I. Cf., however, mihi soli versatur ante oculos, Lael. 102.

nescio, nisi ad eos qui ad me scribunt, aut ad eos de quibus ad me vos aliquid scribitis. Longius, quoniam ita vobis placet, non discedam; sed velim quam saepissime litteras mittatis, praesertim si quid est firminus quod speremus. Valet, mea desideria, valet. D. a. d. III Non. Oct. Thessalonica.

XIV. (Att. 3. 22.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

1 Etsi diligenter ad me Q. frater et Piso quae essent acta scripserant, tamen vellem tua te occupatio non impedisset quo minus, ut consuisti, ad me quid ageretur et quid intellegeres perscriberes. Me adhuc Plancius liberalitate sua retinet, iam aliquotiens conatum ire in Epirum. Spes homini est iniecta, non eadem quae mihi, posse nos una decedere; quam rem sibi magno honori sperat fore. Sed iam, cum adventare milites dicentur, faciendum nobis erit ut ab eo discedamus; quod cum faciemus, ad te statim mittemus, ut
2 scias ubi simus. Lentulus suo in nos officio, quod et re et promissis et litteris declarat, spem nobis nonnullam adfert Pompei voluntatis; saepe enim tu ad me scripsisti eum totum esse in illius potestate. De Me-

4. mea desideria: the plural includes wife, daughter, and son.

XIV. Thessalonica, with a postscript from Dyrrachium, Nov. 25, 58 B.C.

1. Piso: cf. Ep. XIII. 2 n. — consuisti: cf. Intr. 82. — Plancius: quaestor of Macedonia and Cicero's host at Thessalonica. In return for his kindness Cicero defended him in 54 B.C., in the Or. pro Plancio. Cf. also Fam. 14. 1. 3. — milites, etc.: the province of Macedonia had been assigned to the consul L. Calpurnius Piso for 57 B.C., and Cicero feared the coming of his soldiers.

2. Lentulus: elected to the consulship for 57 B.C. Cicero based great hopes upon this man's friendship for him and influence with Pompey. — de Metello: Q. Caecilius Metellus Nepos was to be the colleague of Lentulus. He had, as tribune, prevented Cicero, at the close of his consulship (Fam.

tello scripsit ad me frater quantum sperasset profectum esse per te. Mi Pomponi, pugna ut tecum et cum meis mihi liceat vivere, et scribe ad me omnia. Premor luctu, desiderio omnium meorum, qui mihi me cariores semper fuerunt. Cura, ut valeas.

Ego quod, per Thessaliam si irem in Epirum, per diu nihil eram auditorus et quod mei studiosos habeo Dyrrachinos, ad eos perrexi, cum illa superiora Thessalonicae scripsissem. Inde cum ad te me convertam, faciam ut scias, tuque ad me velim omnia quam diligentissime, cuicumodi sunt, scribas. Ego iam aut rem aut ne spem quidem exspecto. Data vi Kal. Decembr. Dyrrachi.

XV. (Att. 4. 1.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Cum primum Romam veni fuitque cui recte ad te litteras darem, nihil prius faciendum mihi putavi (quam

5. 2. 7), from making the customary speech to the people. Atticus had subsequently brought about a reconciliation. Cf. also Ep. XII. 1 n.

3. mi Pomponi: cf. Ep. X. n. — scribe ad me omnia: a request to be found in almost every letter of this period. Cicero puts more confidence in the letters of Atticus than in those of his brother Quintus; cf. Att. 3. 18. 2 Q. frater, homo mirus, qui me tam valde amat, omnia mittit spei plena, metuens, credo, defectionem animi mei; tuae autem litterae sunt variae, neque enim me desperare vis nec temere sperare.

4. cuicumodi: a very rare genitive form for cuiuscuiusmodi. Cf. also Fam. 4. 7. 4, pro Sext. Rosc. 95, and Verr. ii. 5. 107. It is perhaps found in Plaut. Bacch. 400. See Krebs, Antibarbarus, Neue, Formenlehre, II.² 246; and Wilkins, Cic. de Or. 3. 94. — Dyrrachi: cf. Thessalonicae, Ep. XII. 3 n.

XV. Rome, Sept., 57 B.C. Cicero landed at Brundisium Aug. 5, 57 B.C., after an absence of 16 months (Plut. Cic. 33). He entered Rome Sept. 4, delivered the Oratio post Reditum in the senate Sept. 5, and directly afterwards addressed the people (cf. 5 of this letter); Sept. 7 he proposed a bill in the senate putting Pompey in charge of the corn commission, and after the adjournment of the senate advocated the bill before the people (6). It became a law Sept. 8 (7).

1. recte, with safety. — tibi

ut tibi absentī de reditu nostro gratularer; cognoram enim — ut vere scribam — te in consiliis mihi dandis nec fortio^rem nec prudentio^rem quam me ipsum, nec etiam pro praeteritā meā in te observantiā nimium in custodia salutis meae diligētem, eundemque te, qui primis temporibus erroris nostri aut potius furoris particeps et falsi timoris socius fuisses, acerbissime discidium nostrum tulisse plurimumque operae, studi, diligentiae, laboris ad conficiendum reditum meum con-2 tulisse. Itaque hoc tibi vere adfirmo, in maxima laetitia et exoptatissima gratulatione unum ad cumulandum gaudium conspectum aut potius complexum mihi tuum defuisse; quem semel nactus numquam dimisero ac, nisi etiam praetermissos fructus tuae suavi-

absenti: Atticus was in Epirus. — cognoram enim: the reason for the congratulation, which is the main thought, is contained in the second infinitive clause, eundem te . . . contulisse; the first infinitive clause, te . . . diligētem, which is concessive, and therefore logically subordinate, is in a free way made coördinate with the other. — nec fortio^rem, etc.: in Att. 3. 15. 4 also Cicero reproaches Atticus for a lack of wisdom and bravery: sed tu tantum lacrimas praebuisti dolori meo. Cf. tam timidi, Ep. XIII. 1 n. — nec . . . nimium diligētem: this means in formal Latin, 'not too active,' but here it means, 'not very active,' without any idea of excess, or, as we say, 'none too active.' This use of nimum, nimio, and nimis is frequent in colloquial Latin. Cf. homo nimium lepidus, 'a very charming man' (not 'too charming a man'), Plaut. Mil. 998; locos nimium mirabilis, 'exceedingly strange places,' Trin.

931; illud non nimium probo, 'I don't particularly approve of it,' Cic. Fam. 12. 30. 7. Cf. also Intr. 90. — erroris nostri: in assuming that the first bill of Clodius, which did not mention Cicero by name, was directed against him, and in confessing thereby its applicability to him. Cf. Ep. X., introd. note. — plurimum operae, etc.: during Cicero's exile Atticus not only made the best use of his wide acquaintance with politicians of all factions to secure Cicero's recall (cf., e.g., Metello, Ep. XIV. 2 n), but also aided Cicero's family, which was in financial straits (Ep. XIII.).

2. quem: antecedent in tuum. — dimisero: in early Latin the fut. perf. did not involve the idea of completion before the occurrence of another event (cf. F. Cramer, Arch. f. lat. Lex. IV. 594-598), so that Plautus writes, huc aliquantum abscessero, Trin. 625; immo alium potius misero, Capt. 341. In the later period the dis-

tatis praeteriti temporis omnes exegero, profecto hac restitutione fortunae me ipse non satis dignum iudicabo. Nos adhuc in nostro statu quod difficillime recipari posse arbitrati sumus, splendorem nostrum illum forensem et in senatu auctoritatem et apud viros bonos gratiam magis quam optamus, consecuti sumus; in re autem familiari, quae quemadmodum fracta, dissipata, direpta sit non ignoras, valde laboramus, tuarumque non tam facultatum, quas ego nostras esse iudico, quam consiliorum ad colligendas et constituendas reliquias nostras indigemus. Nunc, etsi omnia aut scripta esse a tuis arbitror aut etiam nuntiis ac rumore perlata, tamen ea ipse scribam brevi, quae te puto potissimum ex meis litteris velle cognoscere. Pr. Nonas Sextiles Dyrrachio sum profectus, ipso illo die, quo lex est lata de nobis. Brundisium veni Nonis Sextilibus. Ibi mihi Tulliola mea fuit praesto natali suo ipso die, qui casu idem natalis erat et Brundisinae coloniae et tuae vicinae Salutis; quae res animadversa a multitudine summa Brundisinorum gratulatione celebrata est. Ante diem vi Idus Sextiles cognovi litteris Quinti mirifico studio omnium aetatum atque ordinum, incredibili con-

tion between the fut. and fut. perf. was introduced into formal Latin, but was not always observed in colloquial Latin; cf. Cic. Att. 3. 19. 1 nusquam facilius hanc miseriam vitam vel sustentabo vel, quod multo est melius, abiecero.

3. forensem: i.e. as a lawyer. — optamus: he fears his position may excite envy. — in re autem familiari: Cicero's house upon the Palatine had been destroyed, his villas plundered, and the rest of his property had been so badly managed by Terentia and her dishonest steward Philotimus that he found himself nearly bankrupt on his return. He was even forced to put up his Tusculan villa for sale; cf. Att. 4. 2. 7. — fracta, etc.: for the metaphor, cf. contraxi vela, Ep. V. 2 n.

4. Tulliola: cf. pulchellus, Ep. V. 10 n. — coloniae: its establishment as a colonia dated from 245 B.C. Cf. Müller's Handbuch, III. 475. — Salutis: for the erection and decoration of the temple of Salus, see Livy, 10. 1, Pliny, N. H. 35. 19, and Val. Max. 8. 14.

cursu Italiae legem comitiis centuriatis esse perlatam. Inde a Brundisinis honestissimis ornatus iter ita feci ut undique ad me cum gratulatione legati convenerint. 5 Ad urbem ita veni ut nemo ullius ordinis homo nomenclatori notus fuerit qui mihi obviam non venerit, praeter eos inimicos quibus id ipsum, se inimicos esse, non liceret aut dissimulare aut negare. Cum venissem ad portam Capenam, gradus templorum ab infimo plebe completi erant, a qua plausu maximo cum esset mihi gratulatio significata, similis et frequentia et plausus me usque ad Capitolium celebravit, in foroque et in ipso Capitolio miranda multitudo fuit. Postridie in senatu, qui fuit dies Nonarum Septembr., senatui gratias egimus. 6 Eo biduo cum esset annonae summa caritas et homines ad theatrum primo, deinde ad senatum concurrissent, impulsu Clodi mea opera frumenti

6.—concurso Italiae: Cicero was more popular with the people of Italy than with the populace at Rome, and by a decree of the senate the former were urged to come to Rome to uphold his cause.—ornatus: used absolutely without the abl. of the thing, as in Fam. 1. 1. 3.—legati: delegates representing the towns on the Via Appia.

5. nomenclatori: the nomenclator stood at his master's elbow, and whispered in his ear the name and the calling of those whom his master met, and any fact of importance concerning them. For the valuable services which he rendered a candidate, cf. Hor. Ep. 1. 6. 49–54.—ad portam Capenam: the Via Appia entered the city through the porta Capena, at the right of which was the temple of Honos and Virtus.—ab

infimo, from top to bottom.—plebe: as Böckel remarks, Cicero wishes to emphasize the enthusiasm which the lower classes showed.—usque ad Capitolium: i.e. between the Palatine and Caelian, thence through the Forum, and up the Clivus to the Capitol.—senatui gratias egimus: in the Oratio post Reditum, though the authenticity of the extant oration bearing that title is sometimes questioned.

6. ad theatrum: to the temporary theatre where the ludi Romani were being held.—impulsu Clodi: Böckel shows by a quotation from Asconius that there had been scarcity at Rome for three months. Perhaps, however, the populace had been led by Cicero's friends to expect a return of prosperity upon his recall, and as they found that this inopiam esse clamarent, cum per eos dies senatus de annona haberetur et ad eius procurationem sermone non solum plebis, verum etiam bonorum Pompeius vocaretur, idque ipse cuperet multitudoque a me nominatim ut id decernerem postularet, feci et accurate sententiam dixi, cum abessent consulares, quod tuto se negarent posse sententiam dicere, praeter Messallam

result did not follow, there was a popular reaction against him, led by Clodius.—id ipse (sc. Pompeius) cuperet: in the latter part of 58 B.C. Pompey and Clodius had a violent quarrel, and were still at enmity with each other. Atticus might therefore have supposed that the position, which was to be offered to Pompey, since it was the result of the agitation led by Clodius, was distasteful to Pompey.—ut id decernerem, that I should advocate that course.—quod . . . dicere: Cicero comments bitterly upon the cowardice of the Optimates in an oration delivered a short time after this: at enim non nulli propter timorem, quod se in senatu tuto non esse arbitrabantur, discesserunt. Non reprehendo, nec quaero fueritne aliquid pertimescendum; puto suo quemque arbitratu timere oportere, de Domo, 8. The entire sentence beginning with eo biduo, with its rapid succession of temporal clauses, the rapidity of whose effect is heightened by the use of asyndeton, with its graphic description of the movements of the populace, is calculated to present the urgency of the popular demand in a forcible manner. Cicero seems to feel that his action in coming forward as the champion of a measure which would give Pompey extraordinary power, and thereby offend the Optimates, may appear unwise, and therefore calls for justification. Its unwisdom would consist in its tendency to estrange the Optimates at the moment when Cicero needed their help in getting indemnification for the loss of his house on the Palatine. It would also seem inconsistent with Cicero's political principles to advocate increasing the power of one of the triumvirs. Cicero strives to meet these two objections by presenting the urgency of the case and the fact, if we may accept it as a fact, that Pompey's appointment was favored by the Boni (verum etiam bonorum). Böckel acutely remarks that it may have been the purpose of Clodius to force Cicero to propose the grant of extraordinary powers, in order to compromise him in the eyes of the aristocracy and the pontifices. He certainly succeeded in putting him in a dilemma: to oppose the bill would have been to brave the wrath of the people and the enmity of Pompey, who had labored to secure his recall from exile; to favor the measure was to antagonize the aristocracy.—quod . . . negarent: on the subj., cf. diceret, Ep. I. 3 n.—Messallam: M. Valerius Messalla Niger, consul in 61 B.C. He is highly praised by Cicero, in Att. I. 14. 6, for his integrity. Messalla and Afranius were supporters of Pompey. On Afra-

et Afranium. Factum est senatus consultum in meam sententiam, ut cum Pompeio ageretur ut eam rem susciperet lexque ferretur; quo senatus consulto recitato, continuo, cum more hoc insulso et novo plausum meo nomine recitando dedissent, habui contionem; omnes magistratus praesentes praeter unum praetorem et duos 7 tribunos pl. dederunt. Postridie senatus frequens, et omnes consulares nihil Pompeio postulanti negarunt. Ille legatos quindécim cum postularet, me principem nominavit et ad omnia me alterum se fore dixit. Legem consules conscripserunt, qua Pompeio per quinquennium omnis potestas rei frumentariae toto orbe terrarum daretur; alteram Messius, qui omnis pecuniae dat potestanus, cf. Auli filius, Ep. V. 12 n. — eam rem: i.e. the procuring of corn. — meo nomine: Cicero had been a leading advocate of the bill, so that his name probably appeared in the list of those who put it into legal form; cf. note on legem . . . conscripserunt below. — recitando: here, as frequently in Livy (e.g. 25. 30. 6) and occasionally in Tacitus, the ablative of the gerundive takes the place of the missing pres. part. pass. — praetorem: the praetor was Appius Claudius Pulcher, the brother of Clodius. Cf. Ep. VIII. 2. The two tribunes, Sex. Atilius Serranus and Q. Numerius Rufus, had already opposed Cicero in other matters. Cf. Cic. pro Sest. 72, 94. — dederunt (sc. contionem): a contio was either an assembly of the people held to consider a question but not to vote upon it, or a speech delivered before such an assembly. Only a magistrate could give a private citizen the right of speaking in a contio, and the technical phrase for such permission was contionem dare or in contionem producere.

7. senatus frequens (sc. fuit): cf. frequentissimo senatu, Ep. VI. 9 n. — alterum se: cf. vide quam mihi persuaserim te me esse alterum, Ep. XXI. 1, and verus amicus est tanquam alter idem, Lael. 80. — legem . . . conscripserunt: the senate voted upon a general proposition or upon a number of propositions laid before it. If a motion was adopted, it was written out in legal form, after its passage, by a committee containing the leading representatives of the party which had supported it. It contained, when thus drawn up, the title, the year, the day, the place of meeting, the name of the proposer and of those who witnessed the drawing up of the bill, and then the enacting clause or clauses, with sometimes an indication of the number present. For a senatus consultum in legal form, cf. Allen, Remnants of Early Latin, Nos. 82, 105; Cic. Fam. 8. 8. 5. Cf. also Willems, II. 206–216. — Mes-

tem et adiungit classem et exercitum et maius imperium in provinciis quam sit eorum qui eas obtineant. Illa nostra lex consularis nunc modesta videtur, haec Messius non ferenda. Pompeius illam velle se dicit, familiares hanc. Consulares duce Favonio fremunt; nos tacemus et eo magis, quod de domo nostra nihil adhuc pontifices responderunt. Qui si sustulerint religionem, aream praeclaram habebimus, superficiem consules ex senatus consulto aestimabunt; sin aliter, demolientur, suo nomine locabunt, rem totam aestimabunt. Ita sunt res nostrae, 'ut in secundis fluxae, ut in adversis bonae.' In re familiari valde sumus, ut scis, perturbati. Praeterea sunt quaedam domestica, quae litteris non com-sus: a tribune and a follower of Pompey; cf. Att. 8. 11 D. 2. — maius imperium in provinciis, etc.: the bill of Messius would have subordinated Caesar to Pompey. — consularis: because action was proposed by a consul, not by a tribune, as in the case of the other law. — Pompeius . . . hanc: a good illustration of Pompey's political methods. — Favonio: a man of more energy than tact; an admirer and imitator of Cato. Although only a quaestor, the boldness with which he advocated the cause of the Optimates brought even the consulares to accept him as their leader. He was praetor when the Civil War opened, took Pompey's side, and was pardoned by Caesar after the battle of Pharsalus. He fought on the side of the liberatores in the battle of Philippi, and was put to death after the battle by the order of Octavius. — de domo nostra: cf. Ep. XIII. 3 n. Either the pontifices may decide that the consecration by Clodius was void (si sustulerint religionem), return the site to Cicero, and reimburse him for the loss of his house; or they may consider the consecration legal (sin aliter) and indemnify him for the loss of both house and grounds.

8. ut in secundis . . . bonae: probably an iambic verse from an old poet. The quotation occurs, Att. 4. 2. 1, Ep. ad Brut. 1. 10. 2. Cf. Ribbeck, Trag. Rom. Frag. p. 274. — in re familiari: cf. note on 3 above. — quaedam domestica: the first reference in Cicero's letters to the trouble between himself and Terentia, which led eleven years later to a divorce. Cf. Att. 4. 2. 7 (written a month later) cetera, quae me sollicitant, μυστικώτερα sunt: amamur a fratre et a filia. The omission of Terentia's name here is very significant. The reference to domestic troubles immediately after a statement concerning the unsatisfactory condition of his property lends color to the hypothesis that the reckless management of Cicero's property by Terentia and her mitto. Q. fratrem insigni pietate, virtute, fide præditum sic amo ut debeo. Te exspecto et oro ut matures venire, eoque animo venias ut me tuo consilio egere non sinas. Alterius vitæ quoddam initium ordimur. Iam quidam, qui nos absentes defenderunt, incipiunt præsentibus occulte irasci, aperte invidere; vehementer te requirimus.

XVI. (Q. fr. 2. 3.)

MARCUS QVINTO FRATRI SALVTEM.

1 Scripsi ad te antea superiora; nunc cognosce postea quæ sint acta. A Kal. Febr. legationes in Idus Febr. reiciebantur. Eo die res confecta non est. A. d. IIII Non. Febr. Milo adfuit. Ei Pompeius advocatus venit;

steward was one of the causes of the misunderstanding. Cf. Intr. 52. — quidam: the Optimates, whose sympathy, shown while he was in misfortune, had now given way to the same jealousy which they had evinced towards him in former years. Cf. voluntates nobilium, Ep. I. 2 n. They disapproved also of his political course after his return; cf. quod dicere, 6 n.

XVI. Rome, written Feb. 12, sent Feb. 15, 56 B.C. This letter presents in a graphic manner the disordered state of affairs in Rome in 56 B.C. and the isolation of Pompey. The latter fact led Pompey to meet Caesar at Luca in April and renew the Triumvirate, notwithstanding his manifest jealousy of Caesar and his open enmity towards Crassus; cf. Momm. Rom. Hist. IV. 354-370.

1. antea: in his last letter, Q. fr. 2. 2, written Jan. 17. — legationes: i.e. audiences given to foreign embassies. — reiciebantur, were postponed. The reception of foreign embassies was the regular order of business for February. — eo die: i.e. the Kal. — res: Ptolemy Auletes, the king of Egypt, being unable to maintain his position at home, had fled to Rome for help, and in his absence the Alexandrians had placed his daughter Berenice on the throne. The senate, at the suggestion of the consul Lentulus Spinther, voted that the consul who should receive Cilicia as his province should restore Ptolemy. Cilicia fell to Lentulus, but the friends of Pompey contended that the restoration of Ptolemy should be placed in his hands. For the dispute which followed, cf. Fam. I. 1. Cicero espoused the cause of Lentulus. He uses simply res in referring to the matter here, as he had written in detail upon the subject in his last letter to Quintus (Q. fr. 2. 2. 3). — adfuit (sc. comitiis tributis): Milo was accused of riotous proceedings by Clodius. For the dixit Marcellus a me rogatus; honeste discessimus; producta dies est in VIII Idus Febr. Interim reiectis legationibus in Idus referebatur de provinciis quaestorum et de ornandis praetoribus; sed res multis querelis de re publica interponendis nulla transacta est. C. Cato legem promulgavit de imperio Lentulo abrogando. Vestitum filius mutavit. A. d. VIII Id. Febr. Milo² adfuit. Dixit Pompeius, sive voluit; nam ut surrexit, operae Clodianae clamorem sustulerunt, idque ei perpetua oratione contigit, non modo ut acclamatione, sed ut convicio et maledictis impediretur. Qui ut peroravit — nam in eo sane fortis fuit: non est deterritus; dixit omnia, atque interdum etiam silentio, cum auctoritate peregerat — sed ut peroravit, surrexit Clodius. Ei tantus clamor a nostris (placuerat enim referre gratiam) ut neque mente nec lingua neque ore consisteret. Ea method of procedure before the comitia tributa, cf. Momm. St. R. III. 354-357. — advocatus: the advocatus appeared to give advice and to lend the defendant the benefit of his moral support; M. Marcellus was the patronus, or legal adviser and advocate. — honeste discessimus, we came out of it with flying colors. — producta dies: a trial before the comitia tributa ran through four meetings of that assembly. In this case the days of the trial were Feb. 2, Feb. 6, Feb. 17 (2, end), and May 7 (cf. Q. fr. 2. 5. 4). — de ornandis praetoribus: i.e. supplying the praetors with the troops necessary for their provinces. — querelis . . . interponendis: abl. cause; cf. recitando, Ep. XV. 6 n. — C. Cato: a tribune and enemy of Pompey (Fam. 1. 5 B. 1); not to be confused with M. Cato. — de abro-

gando: so as to checkmate the plans of Lentulus with reference to Egypt. — vestitum filius mutavit: the son put on mourning in order to excite sympathy for his father and prevent the passage of the bill, as did Cicero's friends in 58 B.C., when the law threatening him with banishment was proposed; cf. Att. 3. 15. 5.

2. sive: like sive potius to correct a statement. — sane: with adjectives and adverbs, a common colloquialism in Cicero's letters for the more formal valde; cf. sane plenum, Att. 7. 4. 1; sane commode, Att. 7. 14. 2, etc. Cf. also Intr. 90. — peregerat: the change of tense is strange. The text is probably corrupt. — a nostris: especially the 'operae' of Milo. — referre gratiam, to return the compliment (Tyrell). — ut . . . consisteret, so that he lost his res acta est, cum hora sexta vix Pompeius perorasset, usque ad horam VIII, cum omnia maledicta, versus denique obscenissimi in Clodium et Clodiam dicerentur. Ille furens et exsanguis interrogabat suos in clamore ipso quis esset qui plebem fame necaret. Respondebant operae: 'Pompeius.' Quis Alexandream ire cuperet. Respondebant: 'Pompeius.' Quem ire vellent. Respondebant: 'Crassum.' Is aderat tum Miloni animo non amico. Hora fere nona quasi signo dato Clodiani nostros consputare coeperunt. Exarsit dolor. Vrgere illi ut loco nos moverent. Factus est a nostris impetus; fuga operarum; eiectus de rostris Clodius, ac nos quoque tum fugimus, ne quid in turba. Senatus vocatus in curiam. Pompeius domum. Neque ego tamen in senatum, ne aut de tantis rebus tacerem aut in Pompeio defendendo (nam is carpebatur a Bibulo, Curione, Favonio, Servilio filio) animos bonorum virorum self-possession, his tongue, and control of his countenance.—ea res . . . ad horam VIII, this scene, although it was nearly noon when Pompey had finished speaking, continued clear up to 2 o'clock.—versus . . . dicerentur: serious charges were freely made concerning the relations existing between Clodius and his sister. On Clodia, cf. Ep. VIII. 5 n.—qui plebem fame necaret: by failing in his duties as corn commissioner. Cf. Ep. XV. 6 f.—Alexandream: cf. res, 1 n.—consputare: see Intr. 79.—fuga operarum: sc. facta est.—de rostris: the trial of Milo took place in the Forum, where the comitia tributa commonly met.—ne quid in turba (sc. accideret nobis): the frequent ellipses, the historical infinitive urgere, the condensed expressions, and the rapid transition from one idea to another in this whole passage give a panoramic effect to the description, and illustrate Cicero's skill in narrative.—in curiam: the Curia Hostilia, or original senate-house, faced the comitium, an open space at the north corner of the Forum.—Bibulo: cf. Ep. VII. 2, 5 nn.—Curione: cf. Ep. V. 1 n.—Favonio: cf. Ep. XV. 7 n.—Servilio filio: P. Servilius Vatia Isauricus was, like Favonius, an admirer and imitator of Cato. These four men with M. Cato were leaders of the ultra-conservative element of the aristocratic party.—bonorum virorum: here evidently used strictly as the name of a political party, opposed to mali or improbi.—in posterum: sc. diem.—Quirinalia: this festival was held Feb. 17.

offenderem. Res in posterum dilata est. Clodius in Quirinalia prodixit diem. A. d. VII Id. Febr. senatus 3 ad Apollinis fuit, ut Pompeius adesset. Acta res est graviter a Pompeio. Eo die nihil perfectum est. A. d. VI Id. Febr. ad Apollinis senatus consultum factum est: EA QVAE FACTA ESSENT A. D. VIII ID. FEBR. CONTRA REM PVBLICAM ESSE FACTA. Eo die Cato vehementer est in Pompeium invectus et eum oratione perpetua tamquam reum accusavit, de me multa me invito cum mea summa laude dixit; cum illius in me perfidiam increparet auditus est magno silentio malevolorum. Respondit ei vehementer Pompeius, Crassumque descripsit, dixitque aperte se munitiorem ad custodiendam vitam suam fore quam Africanus fuisset, quem C. Carbo interemisisset. Itaque magnae mihi res iam moveri vide- 4 bantur; nam Pompeius haec intellegit nobiscumque communicat, insidias vitae suae fieri, C. Catonem a Crasso sustentari, Clodio pecuniam suppeditari, utrumque et ab eo et a Curione, Bibulo ceterisque suis obtrektoribus confirmari, vehementer esse providendum ne opprimatur, contionario illo populo a se prope alie-

3. ad Apollinis: cf. a Vestae, Ep. XIII. 2 n. — ut Pompeius adesset: since Pompey's house was probably near the Circus Flaminius, this arrangement enabled him to avoid the danger of coming through the city to the Curia. — Cato: the tribune; cf. I n. — me invito: Cicero did not wish to be drawn into the dispute. — illius in me perfidiam: in allowing Cicero to be banished. — magno silentio malevolorum: a speech in which Pompey was censured and Cicero praised would tend to make them enemies, and would therefore please the democrats. — Crassum descripsit: i.e. without mentioning his name. — quem C. Carbo interemisisset: Scipio Africanus Minor was found dead in his bed, and probably died a natural death; but the statement of Pompey was the explanation of his decease which the aristocrats gave for party purposes. In this case Pompey is the Africanus, and C. Cato, secretly supported by Crassus, the Carbo.

4. contionario illo populo: cf. contionalis hirudo aerari, Ep. V. I I n. — populo . . . alienato, etc.:

nato, nobilitate inimica, non aequo senatu, iuventute improba. Itaque se comparat, homines ex agris arcescit; operas autem suas Clodius confirmat; manus ad Quirinalia paratur. In eo multo sumus superiores ipsius copiis; et magna manus ex Piceno et Gallia expectatur, ut etiam Catonis rogationibus de Milone et 5 Lentulo resistamus. A. d. III Idus Febr. Sestius ab indice Cn. Nerio Pupinia de ambitu est postulatus et eodem die a quodam M. Tullio de vi. Is erat aeger. Domum, ut debuimus, ad eum statim venimus eique nos totos tradidimus, idque fecimus praeter hominum opinionem, qui nos ei iure suscensere putabant, ut humanissimi gratissimique et ipsi et omnibus videmur, itaque faciemus. Sed idem Nerius index edidit ad adligatos Cn. Lentulum Vatiam et C. Cornelium Bestiam. Eodem die senatus consultum factum est, VT SODALITATES DECURIATIQUE DISCEDERENT LEXQUE

a striking commentary upon Pompey's weakness as a political leader and upon his present isolation. The populace was controlled by Clodius, who had quarreled with Pompey; the aristocracy and senate regarded Pompey as the leading member of the Triumvirate, which threatened their supremacy; the coming generation of young politicians (iuventute) were extreme democrats.—improba: with a political rather than a moral significance. Cf. note on bonorum virorum above.—in eo, in this respect.—ipsius: i.e. Pompey.—ex Piceno: which was filled with Pompey's followers; cf. Vell. Pat. 2. 29.—Gallia: Gallic recruits would be furnished by Caesar.—Lentulo: cf. note above on de abrogando.

5. Sestius: as tribune in 58–57

B.C., he had worked earnestly for Cicero's recall.—Pupinia: sc. tribu.—nos ei iure suscensere: Cicero may have well been offended at Sestius's method of advocating his cause, which showed more zeal than judgment and was likely to injure his prospects. Of the bill which Sestius offered in his interest Cicero writes (Att. 3. 20. 3): rogatio Sesti neque dignitatis satis habet nec cautionis.—sed idem Nerius, etc., in addition to the others implicated, Nerius has lodged information against Vatia and Bestia also. The charge made was evidently that of bribery; cf. ambitus above.—sodalitates decuriatique: the former were originally social, religious, or semi-religious societies; cf. Cic. de Sen. 45. It was soon found convenient, however, to use such organizations for political purposes; cf. de Pet. Cons. 19 nam hoc biennio quattuor sodalitates hominum ad ambitionem gratiosissimorum tibi obligasti . . . qua re hoc tibi faciendum est, hoc tempore ut ab iis quod debent exigas saepe commonendo rogando confirmando curando ut intellegant nullum se umquam aliud tempus habituros referendae gratiae. Clodius saw the advantage to be derived from such bodies, and reorganized them in 58 B.C. Under his control they played a part in politics not unlike that of the political clubs in France before the Revolution. The decuriati were men organized into decuriae or groups, in this case for political purposes; cf. pro Sest. 34. — que is explanatory; 'political clubs, i.e. definite organizations.' — discederent, should disband. — lex . . . ferretur: i.e. in the comitia. Cf. Ep. V. 2 n. Such organizations were not effectually controlled until under Julius Caesar's constitution the permission of the senate was required before permanent societies with fixed times of meeting and standing deposits could be organized.

DE IIS FERRETVR VT QVI NON DISCESSISSENT EA POENA QVAE EST DE VI TENERENTVR. A. d. III Idus Febr. 6 dixi pro Bestia de ambitu apud praetorem Cn. Domitium in foro medio maximo conventu, incidique in eum locum in dicendo, cum Sestius multis in templo Castoris vulneribus acceptis subsidio Bestiae servatus esset. Hic προφκονομησάμην quiddam εὐκαίρως de his, quae in Sestium apparabantur crimina, et eum ornavi veris laudibus magno adsensu omnium. Res homini fuit

6. pro Bestia: L. Calpurnius Piso Bestia, the tribune who in 63 B.C. by a speech against Cicero was to give the signal to the conspirators for active operations (Sall. Cat. 43. 1). The oration for Bestia has not been preserved. — Cn. Domitium (Calvinum): he supported in later years the cause of Caesar in the Civil War. The last reference to him is in connection with an unsuccessful campaign against Pharnaces in 47 B.C. (Bell. Alex. 65). — cum Sestius, etc.: in Jan., 57 B.C., after many delays a proposition to recall Cicero from exile was laid before the people; but as Clodius had already filled the comitium and the curia with armed men, a riot followed, in which Sestius was seriously wounded. The forces of Cicero's friends had taken up their position at the temple of Castor, on the south side of the Forum; cf. pro Sest. 75 f. — προφκονομησάμην, brought out in advance. By eulogistic references to Sestius, Cicero wished to pave the way for the oration in his behalf, which was delivered a month later and brought about his acquittal (Q. fr. 2. 4. 1). — homini: here, as elsewhere in the Letters, almost equivalent to a pronoun. This use may be colloquial, as it is unusually frequent in comedy, e.g. Ter. Ad. 536 Sv. Facio te apud illum deum? virtutes narro. Ct. Meas? Sv. Tuas; homini ilico lacrumae cadunt.

vehementer grata. Quae tibi eo scribo quod me de 7 retinenda Sesti gratia litteris saepe monuisti. Pridie Idus Febr. haec scripsi ante lucem. Eo die apud Pomponium in eius nuptiis eram cenaturus. Cetera sunt in rebus nostris huiusmodi ut tu mihi fere diffi-denti praedicabas, plena dignitatis et gratiae; quae quidem tua, mi frater, patientia virtute pietate sua-vitate etiam tibi mihi que sunt restituta. Domus tibi ad lucum Pisonis Luciniana conducta est; sed, ut spero, paucis mensibus post K. Quinctilis in tuam commi-grabis. Tuam in Carinis mundi habitatores Lamiae conduxerunt. A te post illam Olbiensem epistulam nullas litteras accepi. Quid agas et ut te oblectes scire cupio, maximeque te ipsum videre quam primum.
 Cura, mi frater, ut valeas et, quamquam est hiems, tamen Sardiniam istam esse cogites. xv K. Martias.

7. pridie Idus Febr.: this remark fixes the date of the letter proper. What follows is a post-script written, as we see from the last sentence, Feb. 15. — ante lucem: cf. haec dictavi ambulans, Ep. IX. 1 n. See also Q. fr. 2. 5. 4. — in eius nuptiis: sc. with Pilia. A daughter was born to them, Caecilia, who married M. Agrippa, and their daughter Vipsania Agrippa was the first wife of Tiberius. — patientia: Quintus could scarcely lay claim to patientia or suavitas; cf., e.g., Q. fr. 1. 1. 37. — domus . . . conducta est, the house which belonged to Lucinius near Piso's park has been hired for you. Tyrrell would change lucum to lacum, as lucus is elsewhere regularly applied to a grove sacred to a god. — K. Quinctilis: July 1 was 'moving day' in Rome (Böckel); see Suet. Tib. 35. — in tuam commigrabis: the house of Quintus on the Palatine adjoining his brother's was being rebuilt under the direction of the celebrated architect Cyrus; cf. Q. fr. 2. 2. 2. — in Carinis: between the Forum and the Esquiline. — mundi habitatores Lamiae, respectable tenants, the Lamiae. — Olbiensem, from Olbia, in the northeastern part of Sardinia. — tamen Sardiniam, etc.: the climate of Sardinia where Quintus was stationed (cf. Intr. 55) was dangerous, even in the winter; see also Pomp. Mela, 2. 123.

XVII. (Att. 4. 4 B.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Perbelle feceris si ad nos veneris. Offendes dis-signationem Tyrannionis mirificam librorum meorum, quorum reliquiae multo meliores sunt quam putaram.
 Etiam velim mihi mittas de tuis librariolis duos aliquos, quibus Tyrannio utatur glutinatoribus, ad cetera admi-nistris, iisque imperes ut sumant membranulam ex qua indices fiant, quos vos Graeci, ut opinor, σιλλύβους appellatis. Sed haec, si tibi erit commodum. Ipse vero utique fac venias, si potes in his locis adhaerescere

XVII. Antium, June, 56 B.C.

1. perbelle: upon per in compounds, cf. Intr. 77. Belle facis, bene facis, etc., are colloquial phrases to express gratitude. Cf. bene benigneque arbitror te facere, Plaut. Most. 816; bene hercule factum et habeo vobis gratiam, Rud. 835.—Tyrannionis: a grammarian and teacher who was brought to Rome as a prisoner by L. Lucullus. He was at one time tutor of the young Cicero. His services in arranging Cicero's books are mentioned in Att. 4. 8 A; Q. fr. 3. 4. 5, and Ep. XXIII. 6 also. The place in which this letter was written is determined by comparing it with Att. 4. 8 A.—tuis librariolis: cf. Intr. 58. Some of Cicero's works were probably published by Atticus; cf. Att. 2. 1. 2 tu, si tibi placuerit liber, curabis ut et Athenis sit et in ceteris oppidis Graeciae.—duos aliquos: an indefinite small number; cf. Cic. de Fin. 2. 62 tres aliqui aut quattuor.—glutinatoribus: strips of papyrus from 8 to 14 inches long and 3 to 12 inches wide were pasted together (glutinare) at the sides in the proper order after they had been written upon. A stick was fastened to the last sheet, and on this the book was rolled into a volumen. The ends of the stick were furnished with knobs (cornua); to the upper one was attached a strip of parchment containing the title (index). Cf. Birt, Das antike Buchwesen, 242.—glutinatoribus . . . ministris: for the asyndeton, cf. Intr. 94, and Draeg. Hist. Syn. II. 193 f.

2. si potes, etc.: for the quiet and isolation of Antium, cf. Att. 2. 6 sic enim sum complexus otium, ut ab eo divelli non queam. Itaque aut libris me delecto, quorum habeo Anti festivam copiam, aut fluctus numero, nam ad lacertas captandas tempestates non sunt idoneae; . . . mihi quaevis satis iusta causa cessandi est, qui etiam dubitem an hic Anti considam et hoc tempus omne consumam, ubi quidem ego mallem duum virum quam Romae me fuisse. . . . Esse [to think that there is]

et Piliam adducere; ita enim et aequum est et cupit Tullia. Medius fidius ne tu emisti ludum praeclarum; gladiatores audio pugnare mirifice. Si locare voluisses, duobus his muneribus liberasses. Sed haec posterius. Tu fac venias et de librariis, si me amas, diligenter.

XVIII. (Fam. 5. 12.)

M. CICERO S. D. L. LVCCEIO Q. F.

1 Coram me tecum eadem haec agere saepe conantem deterruit pudor quidam paene subrusticus, quae nunc locum tam prope Romam ubi multi sint qui Vatinius numquam viderint! ubi nemo sit praeter me qui quemquam ex vigintiviris vivum et salvum velit. Cf., however, Intr. 50. — Piliam: cf. in eius nuptiis, Ep. XVI. 7 n. — medius fidius: for ita me deus fidius adiuvet. — ne: the emphatic particle. — tu emisti ludum praeclarum, you have bought a splendid band (of gladiators). Atticus would seem to have bought a troop of gladiators, whom he was at present having trained, that he might let them out (locare) to the aediles for the public games. — pugnare: of practice contests. — duobus his muneribus liberasses: if we accept this reading, the meaning perhaps is: 'from the results of the two spectacles this year you might have set (them) free.' For distinguished bravery and skill gladiators at the request of the people were sometimes presented with a rudis, or wooden sword, and allowed to retire from service. Cicero writes to Atticus a few days later: tu scribas ad me velim de gladiatoribus, sed ita, bene si rem gerunt; non quaero, male si se gesserunt, Att. 4. 8 A. 2. Boot believes that the gladiators have turned out badly, and that the passage is ironical: 'if you had been willing to let them out, you might have set them free (from slavery, for they would have been killed by their opponents).' — diligenter: sc. cura or facias.

XVIII. Arpinum, June, 56 B.C. A thorough analysis of this letter to Luceius, as Böckel points out, will reveal the fact that it is as carefully constructed as any of Cicero's orations: 1, prooemium; 2, 3, hortatio; 4-8, probatio; 9, 10, conclusio. Yet, while the earnestness of his purpose is apparent throughout, by the light conversational tone which he gives the letter Cicero glosses over the 'impudence' of his request, puts the seriousness of the offense against historical truth in the background, and strives to secure the consent of Luceius on the score of friendship. For Cicero's own judgment of the epistle, cf. Att. 4. 6. 4 epistulam, Luceio nunc quam misi, qua meas res ut scribat rogo, fac ut ab eo sumas — valde bella est. L. Luceius was an orator and a man of some literary note. In politics and military affairs he was less successful; he was a candidate with Caesar for expromam absens audacius; epistula enim non erubescit. Ardeo cupiditate incredibili neque, ut ego arbitror, reprehendenda, nomen ut nostrum scriptis inlustretur et celebretur tuis. Quod etsi mihi saepe ostendis te esse facturum, tamen ignoscas velim huic festinationi meae. Genus enim scriptorum tuorum etsi erat semper a me vehementer expectatum, tamen vicit opinionem meam, meque ita vel cepit vel incendit, ut cuperem quam celerrime res nostras monumentis commendari tuis. Neque enim me solum commemoratio posteritatis ad spem quandam immortalitatis rapit, sed etiam illa cupiditas, ut vel auctoritate testimoni tui vel indicio benevolentiae vel suavitate ingeni vivi perfruamur. Neque tamen, haec cum scribebam, eram nescius quantis oneribus premerere susceptarum rerum et iam institutarum; sed quia videbam Italici belli et civilis historiam iam a te paene esse perfectam, dixeras autem mihi te reliquas res ordiri, desse mihi nolui quin te admonerem ut cogitares, coniunctene malles cum reliquis rebus nostra contexere an, ut multi Graeci fecerunt, Callisthenes Phocicum bellum, Timaeus Pyrrhi, Polybius Nu-the consulship in 60 B.C. (cf. Ep. VI. 11 n), but was defeated, and in the Civil War was one of the intemperate leaders in Pompey's camp.

1. subrusticus: cf. Intr. 77. The opposite idea to pudor subrusticus is conveyed by frons urbana (Hor. Ep. 1. 9. 11). — ardeo . . . commendari tuis: Böckel notes that the orator and the historian adopt the periodic form of construction with the verb at the end of the clause, as the one best fitted to impart dignity and force to what they say, while often in letters, as in this passage, a writer affects an apparent carelessness upon this point in order to convey the impression of spontaneity and sincerity.— genus scriptorum tuorum: we know very little more of the historical work of Lucceius than this letter tells us. Cf. Asconius, pp. 91–93, ed. Orelli.

2. Italici belli et civilis: the Social War and the struggle between Sulla and the Marian party. — Callisthenes, etc.: subjects of some verb like scripserunt suggested by fecerunt. Callisthenes wrote not only a general history of Greece (Ἑλληνικά), but a special treatise on the Phocian War. Timaeus published a history of his mantinum, qui omnes a perpetuis suis historiis ea quae dixi bella separaverunt, tu quoque item civilem coniurationem ab hostilibus externisque bellis seiungeres. Equidem ad nostram laudem non multum video interesse, sed ad properationem meam quiddam interest, non te exspectare dum ad locum venias, ac statim causam illam totam et tempus arripere, et simul, si uno in argumento unaque in persona mens tua tota versabitur, cerno iam animo quanto omnia uberiora atque ornatiore futura sint. Neque tamen ignoro quam impudenter faciam, qui primum tibi tantum oneris imponam — potest enim mihi denegare occupatio tua — deinde etiam ut ornes me postulem. Quid si illa tibi non 3 tanto opere videntur ornanda? Sed tamen, qui semel verecundiae finis transierit, eum bene et naviter oportet esse impudentem. Itaque te plane etiam atque etiam rogo ut et ornes ea vehementius etiam quam fortasse sentis, et in eo leges historiae neglegas, gratiamque native land, Sicily, and also a sketch of the campaigns of Pyrrhus. Polybius wrote, besides his universal history, an account of the war of Numantia. The last illustration is especially in point, for as Polybius was led to write a separate history of the Numantine War by his friendship for its hero Scipio, Cicero hopes that Lucceius may be induced by a similar sentiment to compose a special treatise. — primum . . . deinde: Cicero makes two requests of Lucceius: (1) that he shall write a separate treatise, (2) that he shall emphasize his achievements.

3. bene et naviter: archaic and colloquial. The use of bene with the force of valde to intensify adjectives and adverbs came into vogue in Cicero's time. Only two instances of this use occur in Latin comedy, but having once found a foothold in the language, it became quickly a favorite colloquialism. Cf. Ital. bene and Fr. bien. Cf. also sane, Ep. XVI. 2 n., and see Intr. 90. — te plane etiam atque etiam rogo: cf. hoc te vehementer etiam atque etiam rogo, Cic. Fam. 13. 5. 3. — leges historiae neglegas: cf. Cic. de Or. 2. 62 nam quis nescit primam esse historiae legem, ne quid falsi dicere audeat? deinde ne quid veri non audeat? ne quae suspicio gratiae sit in scribendo? ne quae similitates? haec scilicet fundamenta nota sunt omnibus. See also Pliny, Ep.

illam de qua suavissime quodam in prooemio scripsisti, a qua te flecti non magis potuisse demonstras quam Herculem Xenophontium illum a Voluptate, eam, si me tibi vehementius commendabit, ne aspernere, amonique nostro plusculum etiam quam concedet veritas largiare. Quod si te adducemus ut hoc suscipias, erit, ut mihi persuadeo, materies digna facultate et copia tua. A principio enim coniurationis usque ad reditum ⁴ nostrum videtur mihi modicum quoddam corpus confici posse, in quo et illa poteris uti civilium commutationum scientia vel in explicandis causis rerum novarum vel in remediis incommodorum, cum et reprehendes ea quae vituperanda duces, et quae placebunt exponendis rationibus comprobabis, et si liberius, ut consuisti, agendum putabis, multorum in nos perfidiam insidias proditionem notabis. Multam etiam casus nostri varietatem tibi in scribendo suppeditabunt plenam cuiusdam voluptatis, quae vehementer animos hominum in legendo, te scriptore, tenere possit; nihil est enim aptius ad delectationem lectoris quam temporum varietates fortunaeque vicissitudines. Quae etsi nobis optabiles in experiendo non fuerunt, in legendo tamen erunt iucundae; habet enim praeteriti doloris segura recordatio delectationem. Ceteris vero nulla perfunctis propria molestia, ⁵

7. 33. 10 nam nec historia debet egredi veritatem et honeste factis veritas sufficit. But the prevailing ancient conception of history was a low one; see Quint. 10. 1. 31; Sen. N. Q. 7. 16. 1, 2. Both Atticus and Cicero wrote an account of Cicero's consulship in Greek; cf. Att. 2. 1. 1, 2. — a qua: the use of the preposition shows that gratia is personified.

— Herculem Xenophontium: cf. Xen. Mem. 2. 1. 21. — plusculum: cf. pulchellus, Ep. V. 10 n.

4. modicum quoddam corpus: corpus is an entire 'work'; liber a part complete in itself. — habet . . . delectationem: this recalls Verg. Aen. 1. 203 forsan et haec olim meminisse iuvabit.

5. ceteris . . . iucunda: for the sentiment, cf. Lucr. 2. 1-4. — casus autem alienos sine ullo dolore intuentibus etiam ipsa misericordia est iucunda. Quem enim nostrum ille moriens apud Mantineam Epaminondas non cum quadam miseratione delectat? Qui tum denique sibi evelli iubet spiculum, postea quam ei percontanti dictum est clipeum esse salvum, ut etiam in vulneris dolore aequo animo cum laude moreretur. Cuius studium in legendo non erectum Themistocli fuga exituque retinetur? Etenim ordo ipse annalium mediocriter nos retinet, quasi enumeratione fastorum; at viri saepe excellentis ancipites variique casus habent admirationem expectationem, laetitiam molestiam, spem timorem; si vero exitu notabili concluduntur, expletur animus iucundissima lectionis voluptate. Quo mihi acciderit optatius, si in hac sententia fueris, ut a continentibus tuis scriptis, in quibus perpetuam rerum gestarum historiam complecteris, secernas hanc quasi fabulam rerum eventorumque nostrorum — habet enim varios actus multasque actiones et consiliorum et temporum. Ac non vereor ne adsentatiuncula quadam aucupari tuam gratiam videar, cum hoc demonstram, me a te potissimum ornari celebrarique velle. Neque enim tu is es qui Epaminondas: cf. de Fin. 2. 97; Tusc. Disp. 2. 59. The career of Epaminondas was a favorite theme in the schools of the rhetoricians (de Fin. 2. 67). Cicero confesses to a similar feeling (Tusc. Disp. 1. 96) on reading the account of Theramenes's death. — fuga exituque: the MSS. read fuga redituque, but Themistocles died in exile, so that some change is necessary. See Crit. Append.

6. fabulam: the technical word for a drama. The comparison suggested by it is only partially carried out in the following clause. — actus: the main divisions in the play; actiones: the subdivisions of the actus. Cf. Krebs, Antibarbarus, on actus and scaena. — adsentatiuncula quadam, by a bit of flattery, as it were; cf. pulchellus, Ep. V. 10 n. — neque enim tu is es, etc., for neither are you the man not to know what you are, and not to think that the people are envious who do not admire you rather than that quid sis nescias et qui non eos magis, qui te non admirentur, invidos quam eos, qui laudent, adsentatores arbitrere; neque autem ego sum ita demens ut me sempiternae gloriae per eum commendari velim, qui non ipse quoque in me commendando propriam ingenii gloriam consequatur. Neque enim Alexander ille gratiae causa ab Apelle potissimum pingi et a Lysippo fingi volebat, sed quod illorum artem cum ipsis, tum etiam sibi gloriae fore putabat. Atque illi artifices corporis simulacra ignotis nota faciebant; quae vel si nulla sint, nihilo sint tamen obscuriores clari viri. Nec minus est superstes Agesilaus ille pernibendus, qui neque pictam neque fictam imaginem suam passus est esse, quam qui in eo genere laborarunt; unus enim Xenophontis libellus in eo rege laudando facile omnes imagines omnium statuasque superavit. Atque hoc praestantius mihi fuerit et ad laetitiam animi et ad memoriae dignitatem, si in tua scripta pervenero quam si in ceterorum, quod non ingenium mihi solum suppeditatum fuerit tuum, sicut Timoleonti a Timaeo aut ab Herodoto Themistocli, sed etiam auctoritas clarissimi et spectatissimi viri et in rei publicae maximis gravissimisque causis cogniti atque in primis probati, ut mihi non solum praeconium, those persons are sycophants who praise you.

7. Alexander, etc.: cf. Pliny, N. H. 7. 125 idem hic imperator edixit nequis ipsum alius quam Apelles pingeret, quam Pyrgoteles sculperet, quam Lysippus ex aere duceret. Cf. also Hor. Ep. 2. 1. 239. — vel si nulla, etc.: cf. Tac. Agr. 46. — qui neque, etc.: cf. Nep. Ages. 8. — qui . . . laborarunt, who have exerted themselves along that line, i.e. of commemorating their names by having likenesses of themselves made by painters or sculptors. — Xenophontis libellus: the Agesilaus. — Timaeo: as historian of Sicily, he recorded with praise the distinguished services which Timoleon of Corinth rendered the Sicilians in their struggles for independence. — ab Herodoto: in his account of the Persian wars. —

quod, cum in Sigeum venisset, Alexander ab Homero Achilli tributum esse dixit, sed etiam grave testimonium impertitum clari hominis magnique videatur. Placet enim Hector ille mihi Naevianus qui non tantum 'laudari' se laetatur, sed addit etiam 'a laudato viro.' Quod si a te non impetro, hoc est, si quae te res impederit — neque enim fas esse arbitror quicquam me rogantem abs te non impetrare, — cogar fortasse facere quod nonnulli saepe reprehendunt: scribam ipse de me, multorum tamen exemplo et clarorum virorum. Sed, quod te non fugit, haec sunt in hoc genere vitia: et verecundius ipsi de sese scribant necesse est, si quid est laudandum, et praetereant, si quid reprehendendum est. Accedit etiam ut minor sit fides, minor auctoritas, multi denique reprehendant et dicant verecundiores esse praecones ludorum gymnycorum, qui cum ceteris coronas imposuerint victoribus eorumque nomina magna voce pronuntiarint, cum ipsi ante ludorum missionem corona donentur, alium praeconem adhibeant, ne sua voce se ipsi victores esse praedicent. Haec nos vitare cupimus et, si recipis causam nostram, vitabimus, idque ut facias rogamus. Ac ne forte mirere cur, cum mihi saepe ostenderis te accuratissime nostrorum temporum consilia atque eventus litteris mandaturum, a te id nunc cum in Sigeum venisset: cf. Cic. pro Arch. 24. — Hector Naevianus: i.e. Hector in the tragedy (Hector proficiscens) of Naevius. Writing to his literary friend Lucceius, Cicero cites the exact authority (Hector Naevianus) without hesitation. In a letter to Cato (Ep. XXXVIII.), making the same quotation, he adds, inquit Hector, OPINOR apud Naevium.

8. scribam ipse de me: Cicero had already written a 'Memoir' of his consulship in Greek (Att. 2. 1. 1; 1. 20. 6), and two years later he composed a poem in three books upon the same subject (Fam. 1. 9. 23). — multorum: e.g. Sulla and M. Scaurus. — praecones: after the other contests the heralds contended with one another, and the victor received a wreath.

tanto opere et tam multis verbis petamus, illa nos cupiditas incendit, de qua initio scripsi, festinationis, quod alacres animo sumus ut et ceteri viventibus nobis ex libris tuis nos cognoscant et nosmet ipsi vivi gloriola nostra perfruamur. His de rebus quid acturus sis, si tibi non est molestum, rescribas mihi velim. Si enim suscipis causam, conficiam commentarios rerum omnium; sin autem differs me in tempus aliud, coram tecum loquar. Tu interea non cessabis et ea quae habes instituta perpolies nosque diliges.

XIX. (Fam. 7. 1.)

M. CICERO S. D. M. MARIO.

Si te dolor aliqui corporis aut infirmitas valetudinis tuae tenuit quo minus ad ludos venires, fortunae magis

9. gloriola: cf. note on adsentiantuncula above.

10. si . . . molestum: a polite colloquial formula; cf. Catull. 55. 1 si forte non molestum est; Martial 1. 96. 1 si non molestum est teque non piget; Plaut. Rud. 120 sed nisi molestumst, paucis percontarier volo ego ex te; Ter. Ad. 806 ausculta paucis, nisi molestumst, Demea; Cic. Cluent. 168. Cf. also Intr. 100. — rescribas: no reply is preserved or mentioned elsewhere. It is quite possible, however, that Luceius complied with Cicero's request; cf. Att. 4. 11. 2. — commentarios: perhaps Cicero refers to these notes when he writes to Atticus a year later: tu Luceio nostrum librum dabis, Att. 4. 11. 2. — cessabis: for the tense, cf. Intr. 84 b. — nos diliges: most of Cicero's letters end abruptly, but when a polite formula is used, it is commonly, (1) an admonition concerning the health of the recipient, as in most of the letters to Atticus, e.g. cura ut valeas; (2) an expression of esteem: te valde amamus nosque a te amari cum volumus, tum etiam confidimus (Fam. 7. 14); (3) both (1) and (2) cura ut valeas et me, ut amas, ama (Fam. 7. 5); bene vale et me dilige; or (4) a reference to the family of the recipient: Piliae et puellae Caeciliae bellissimae salutem dices (Att. 6. 4). Cf. also Intr. 62.

XIX. Rome, Oct., 55 B.C. Cicero's friend, M. Marius, to whom Fam. 7. 1-4 are addressed, was confined to his villa at Stabiae by an attack of the gout (Fam. 7. 4), and was therefore unable to witness the games at Rome which Pompey gave in honor of the dedication of his theatre and the temple of Venus Victrix. This theatre, which was erected on the Campus Martius, and would accommodate 40,000 people (Plin.

tribuo quam sapientiae tuae; sin haec, quae ceteri mirantur, contemnenda duxisti et, cum per valetudinem posses, venire tamen noluisti, utrumque laetor, et sine dolore corporis te fuisse et animo valuisse, cum ea quae sine causa mirantur alii neglexeris, modo ut tibi constiterit fructus otii tui, quo quidem tibi perfrui mirifice licuit, cum esses in ista amoenitate paene solus relictus. Neque tamen dubito quin tu in illo cubiculo tuo, ex quo tibi Stabianum perforasti et patefecisti sinum, per eos dies matutina tempora lectiunculis consumpseris, cum illi interea, qui te istic reliquerunt, spectarent communis mimos semisomni. Reliquas vero partis diei tu consu-

N. H. 36. 115), was the first permanent theatre constructed in Rome, and its opening was celebrated by gorgeous pageants and by combats between men and wild beasts, in which, according to Pliny, 20 elephants and 500 lions were killed. The distaste which Cicero shows for the vulgar display, and the pity which the slaughter of the unfortunate beasts excited in him, honorably distinguish him from his contemporaries. These particular venationes were so bloodthirsty that even the Roman populace was moved to pity when the elephants, seeing their escape cut off, seemed to beg for mercy: amissa fugae spe, misericordiam vulgi inenarrabili habitu quaerentes supplicavere, quadam sese lamentatione complorantes, tanto populi dolore ut oblitus imperatoris ac munificentiae honori suo exquisitae flens universus consurgeret dirasque Pompeio poenas imprecaretur, Plin. N. H. 8. 21.

1. Stabianum . . . sinum: the Italians of the present day who have villas on the lakes or seashore, often cut down the trees in front of their houses, that they may obtain an unobstructed view across the water; so Marius would seem to have cut the trees down in a line through his Stabian estate (lit. 'he bored through') to the shore, and thus brought the bay into view. — lectiunculis, by reading a bit here and a bit there. mimos: the mimus, which was introduced into Rome from Tarentum in the third century B.C., was at the outset a character presentation by dancers, but, in the second century probably, dialogue and songs were introduced. Facial expression always played an important part in it, so that the performers did not wear masks. In Cicero's time mimi were put on the stage only as afterpieces (cf. Ep. LXI. 7). The degraded taste of imperial times, however, preferred them to the drama proper, so that they practically drove the latter from the stage. Cf. also Ribbeck, Römische Dichtung, I. 217, 218. — semisomni: at this period dramatic performances began early in the day, and those for whom seats were not reserved mebas iis delectationibus, quas tibi ipsi ad arbitrium tuum compararas, nobis autem erant ea perpetienda quae Sp. Maecius probavisset. Omnino, si quaeris, ludi ² apparatusissimi, sed non tui stomachi; coniecturam enim facio de meo. Nam primum honoris causa in scaenam redierant ii quos ego honoris causa de scaena decesse arbitrabar; deliciae vero tuae noster Aesopus eiusmodi fuit ut ei desinere per omnis homines liceret. Is iurare cum coepisset, vox eum defecit in illo loco: 'Si sciens fallo.' Quid tibi ego alia narrem? Nosti enim reliquos ludos, qui ne id quidem leporis habuerunt quod solent mediocres ludi; apparatus enim spectatio tollebat omnem hilaritatem, quo quidem apparatu non dubito quin animo aequissimo carueris. Quid enim delectationis habent sescenti muli in Clytaemestra, aut in Equo Troiano creterrarum tria milia, aut armatura varia peditatus et found it necessary to be in their places several hours before the performance began. Physical fatigue, therefore, and the stupidity of the performances made the audience listless.—Sp. Maecius (Tarpa): he had charge of the plays. In Hor. Sat. 1. 10. 38 and A. P. 387 he is mentioned as an authorized critic.

2. honoris causa . . . honoris causa, to honor the occasion . . . to save their reputation (Tyrrell). Cf. Intr. 103.—decesse: for decessisse. A rare case of syncopation, like successes (?) for successisse (Ep. XC. 2). Similar syncopated forms occur elsewhere in colloquial Latin, e.g. destraxe, Plaut. Trin. 743; despexi, M. G. 553; iussu, Ter. Heaut. 1001; divisse, Hor. Sat. 2. 3. 169. See also Intr. 82.—deliciae tuae: cf. nostri amores, Ep. VII. 2, and mea lux, Ep. XIII. 2 n.—Aesopus: elsewhere praised highly as an actor by Cicero; cf. pro Sest. 120, de Div. 1. 80, etc., but in his old age his voice has failed. Cf. also Ribbeck, Römische Tragödie, 674–676.—si sciens fallo: the first words of an oath. Cf. Liv. 1. 24. Ribbeck (Röm. Trag. p. 49) suggests that perhaps Aesopus played the part of Sinon in the Equus Troianus of Naevius (or of Andronicus) and that this oath was introduced in some such speech as that put into the mouth of Sinon by Vergil in Aen. 2. 154.—sescenti: for an indefinitely large number; cf. miliens, Ep. V. 4.—Clytaemestra: one of the plays of L. Accius.—creterrarum tria milia: supposed to refer to the spoils of Troy (crateresque auro solidi, Verg. Aen. 2. 765), which were represented in a realistic way upon the equitatus in aliqua pugna? Quae popularem admirationem habuerunt, delectationem tibi nullam attulissent.

3 Quod si tu per eos dies operam dedisti Protogeni tuo, dummodo is tibi quidvis potius quam orationes meas legerit, ne tu haud paulo plus quam quisquam nostrum delectationis habuisti; non enim te puto Graecos aut Oscos ludos desiderasse, praesertim cum Oscos vel in senatu vestro spectare possis, Graecos ita non ames ut ne ad villam quidem tuam via Graeca ire soleas. Nam quid ego te athletas putem desiderare, qui gladiatores contempseris? In quibus ipse Pompeius confitetur se et operam et oleum perdidisse. Reliquae sunt vena-stage. Compare with this whole passage the trenchant criticism which Horace passes upon the taste for realism and vulgar display upon the stage in his day (Ep. 2. 1. 189-207).

3. Protogeni: the slave who read aloud to Marius. — ne tu: cf. ne, Ep. XVII. 2 n. — Graecos aut Oscos ludos: comedy and tragedy were essentially of Greek origin, and Cicero speaks of them therefore as ludi Graeci in distinction from the fabulae Atellanae (ludi Osci), which were indigenous to Italian soil. These Atellan farces were comic representations of life with fixed characters. They were cast in dialogue form, varied by occasional songs. The action was lively, and the language the vulgar Latin. After the conquest of Campania, in 211 B.C., these farces were introduced into Rome, given in course of time a more distinctly dramatic form, and used as afterpieces on the stage. Cf. Ep. LXI. 7; also Ribbeck, Röm. Dichtung, I. 207-217. — in senatu vestro: Marius would seem to have been a decurio, or member of the town council, probably in Pompeii, and in the deliberations of his Oscan colleagues upon petty matters of town government, he could find all the elements of an 'Oscan burlesque' without taking the trouble to come to Rome for them. — via Graeca: perhaps a road leading to his villa which Marius did not use; but the point of the jest is obscure to us. — athletas: a term applied properly to those who took part in the five contests — running, wrestling, boxing, the pentathlon (made up of five distinct games), the pancratium (boxing and wrestling). As we may infer from the text, in quibus, etc., the Roman people showed little enthusiasm for these Greek games, and this continued to be the case until they gained an artificial stimulus by receiving the approval of certain emperors. Nero in particular was very fond of them (Tac. Ann. 14. 20). — gladiatores: on Cicero's own distaste for gladiatorial contests, cf. Att. 2. 1. 1 Kal. Iunius eunti mihi Antium et gladiatores M. Metelli cupide relinquenti, etc. — operam et oleum perdidisse:

tiones binae per dies quinque, magnificae — nemo negat, — sed quae potest homini esse polito delectatio, cum aut homo imbecillus a valentissima bestia laniatur aut praeclara bestia venabulo transverberatur? Quae tamen, si videnda sunt, saepe vidisti; neque nos qui haec spectamus quicquam novi vidimus. Extremus elephantorum dies fuit. In quo admiratio magna vulgi atque turbae, delectatio nulla exstitit; quin etiam misericordia quaedam consecutast atque opinio eiusmodi, esse quandam illi beluae cum genere humano societatem. His 4 ego tamen diebus, ludis scaenicis, ne forte videar tibi non modo beatus, sed liber omnino fuisse, dirupi me paene in iudicio Galli Canini familiaris tui. Quod si tam facilem populum haberem quam Aesopus habuit, libenter mercule artem desinerem tecumque et cum similibus nostri viverem. Nam me cum antea taedebat, cum et aetas et ambitio me hortabatur et licebat

a proverbial expression probably applied originally to an article spoiled in cooking; cf. tum pol ego et oleum et operam perdidit, Plaut. Poen. 332. The use of alliteration in such everyday expressions in all languages is well known. Cf. Intr. 93, 102. — venationes: from the introduction of the venatio at Rome in 186 B.C., it was a favorite form of amusement with the people, and was carried to an almost incredible pitch of extravagance and barbarism by the later emperors. — venabulo: the elephants were attacked with javelins by the Gaetulians (Plin. N.H. 8. 20). — misericordia: cf. introd. note.

4. Galli Canini: L. Caninius Gallus, as tribune in 56 B.C., proposed that the restoration of King Ptolemy should be entrusted to Pompey (Q. fr. 2. 2. 3). In the year following his tribuneship (55 B.C.) he was attacked on some political charge by the enemies of Pompey, and Cicero defended him, doubtless at Pompey's request. With some two or three exceptions (e.g. Cic. de Or. 2. 253) the cognomen is never placed before the nomen in formal Latin in the Ciceronian period, but this order is common enough in colloquial Latin, e.g. Bassus Caecilius, Ep. LXXXVI. 4; Pollio Asinius, Ep. XCVII. 1; Cimber autem Tilius, Fam. 6. 12. 2; Balbi quoque Corneli, Fam. 8. 11. 2; in Horace we read Fuscus Aristius, Musa Antonius, etc.; in Livy, Geminus Servilius, Antias Valerius, etc. In the writers of the Silver Age this innovation, like many others, was accepted without question. — ambitio: e.g. in his purpose to denique quem nolebam non defendere, tum vero hoc tempore vita nullast. Neque enim fructum ullum laboris exspecto, et cogor nonnumquam homines non optime de me meritos, rogatu eorum qui bene meriti sunt, defendere. Itaque quaero causas omnis aliquando vivendi arbitrato meo, teque et istam rationem oti tui et laudo vehementer et probo, quodque nos minus intervisis, hoc fero animo aequiore, quod, si Romae esses, tamen neque nos lepore tuo neque te — si qui est in me — meo frui liceret propter molestissimas occupationes meas. Quibus si me relaxaro — nam ut plane exsolvam non postulo, — te ipsum, qui multos annos nihil aliud commentaris, docebo profecto quid sit humaniter vivere. Tu modo istam imbecillitatem valetudinis tuae sustenta et tuere, ut facis, ut nostras villas obire et mecum simul 6 lecticula concursare possis. Haec ad te pluribus verbis scripsi quam soleo, non oti abundantia, sed amoris erga te, quod me quadam epistula subinvitaras, si memoria tenes, ut ad te aliquid eiusmodi scriberem quo minus te praetermisse ludos paeniteret. Quod si adsecutus sum, gaudeo; sin minus, hoc me tamen consolor, quod defend Catiline in 65 B.C.; cf. Ep. II. 1. — rogatu eorum: as when he defended Vatinius in 54 B.C. at the request of Caesar (Fam. 1.9.19), although he had bitterly attacked him in an oration delivered only two years before.

5. humaniter: adverbs in -iter from adjectives in -us are peculiar in this period to colloquial Latin. In Cicero of these formations we find only naviter (Ep. XVIII. 3), firmiter, humaniter and its compounds; and these forms occur only in the Letters and in those writings to which Cicero intentionally gives an archaic coloring, i.e. the de Re Publica and the Oeconomicus. This ending became so common in ecclesiastical Latin as to crowd out -e.

6. haec . . . scripsi: apologies at the end of a letter for its length are so common as to indicate that the etiquette of letter-writing approved of them, regardless of the length of the epistle. Cf. close of Ep. XXXVII. — subinvitaras, you had hinted. Cf. subrusticus, Ep. XVIII. 1 n. — ut . . . scriberem, etc.: Cicero may therefore have exaggerated his distaste for posthac ad ludos venies nosque vises neque in epistulis relinques meis spem aliquam delectationis tuae.

XX. (Q. fr. 2. 9 [11].)

MARCUS QUINTO FRATRI SALVTEM.

Epistulam hanc convicio efflagitarunt codicilli tui. 1
 Nam res quidem ipsa et is dies quo tu es profectus nihil mihi ad scribendum argumenti sane dabat. Sed quemadmodum, coram cum sumus, sermo nobis deesse non solet, sic epistulae nostrae debent interdum alucinari. Tenediorum igitur libertas securi Tenedia praecisa est, cum eos praeter me et Bibulum et Calidium et Favonium nemo defenderet. De te a Magnetibus ab Sipylo mentio est honorifica facta, cum te unum dicerent postulationi L. Sesti Pansae restitisse. Reliquis diebus si quid erit quod te scire opus sit, aut etiam si nihil erit, tamen scribam cotidie aliquid. Pridie Idus neque tibi neque Pomponio deero. Lucreti poëmata, the games. — praetermisisse: for praetermisisse. Cf. decesse, 2 n.

XX. Rome, Feb., 54 B.C.

1. codicilli: cf. Intr. 59. Quintus had apparently sent his brother a message written upon waxen tablets, expecting him to erase the writing and send back an answer upon the same tablets. — res ipsa: perhaps the fact that certain foreign affairs in which Quintus was interested (cf. 3) had not then been discussed.

2. Tenediorum: the people of Tenedos petitioned the senate for home rule, but were refused. — securi Tenedia: tradition states that Tenos, the first king of Tenedos, among other severe regulations, established one punishing adultery with immediate death by the ax, so that securis Tenedia was a proverbial expression for an immediate and severe sentence. In this case of course the phrase effects a word-play with Tenediorum. — Bibulum: cf. Ep. VII. 2. — Calidium: M. Calidius as praetor in 57 B.C. had worked for Cicero's recall. — Favonium: cf. Ep. XV. 7 n.

3. postulationi: evidently Q. Cicero, when propraetor in Asia, had opposed some exorbitant demand made on the Magnetes by Pansa. Magnesia in Lydia was called Magnesia ab Sipylo to distinguish it from the city of the same name in Caria (Magnesia ad Mazandrum). — Pomponio: i.e.

ut scribis, ita sunt: multis luminibus ingeni, multae tamen artis. Sed cum veneris * . Virum te putabo, si Sallusti Empedoclea legeris, hominem non putabo.

XXI. (Fam. 7. 5.)

CICERO CAESARI IMP. S. D.

1 Vide quam mihi persuaserim te me esse alterum, non modo in iis rebus quae ad me ipsum, sed etiam in iis

Atticus, Quintus's brother-in-law; the business in question was evidently some family matter. — Lucreti poemata: St. Jerome in his Chronicle says: T. Lucretius poeta . . . cum aliquot libros per intervalla insaniae conscripsisset, quos postea Cicero emendavit, etc. This statement that Cicero edited the poem de Rerum Natura has given rise to a deal of discussion. It is certainly true that Cicero and Lucretius exerted an influence upon each other. Lucretius borrowed freely from Cicero's Aratea, while several passages in the philosophical writings of Cicero closely resemble verses of Lucretius (cf. Martha, Le Poème de Lucrèce, 351, Munro on Lucr. 5. 619, and Merrill in Class. Rev. for 1896, 19). — ita: cf. sic, Ep. V. 3 n. — multis . . . artis: Lucretius probably died in 55 B.C., so that this criticism was written within a few months of his death. It is commonly supposed that in ingeni Cicero sums up the main characteristics of the earlier school of Latin poetry, while artis represents the tendencies of the μετέπειτα; '(a poem) with many indications of brilliant genius and yet with much of artistic excellence.' With this estimate of Lucretius, cf. Aul. Gell. 1. 21 poeta ingenio et facundia prae- cellens. — virum te putabo . . . hominem non putabo, if you go through the Empedoclea of Sallust, I shall regard you as a man of mettle, not as an ordinary mortal. See Crit. Append. — Sallusti Empedoclea: evidently a book upon the philosophy of Empedocles.

XXI. Rome, April, 54 B.C. C. Trebatius Testa, the date of whose birth is uncertain, came as a boy to Rome to study law. He became attached to Cicero, and pleased the latter by both his wit and good-fellowship, and also assisted him by his knowledge of jurisprudence. Being anxious, however, to see something of the world, to win his spurs, and to make a fortune, perhaps, in the provinces, Trebatius set out for the Roman camp in Gaul, carrying with him this letter of recommendation. Cicero's relations with Trebatius were of a most intimate nature, as his seventeen letters to him (Fam. 7. 6–22) prove. Like most of the young men who served upon Caesar's staff in Gaul, Trebatius became his devoted admirer, and followed his fortunes in the Civil War. He was one of the few members of that coterie of young men about Caesar who survived the Civil War and lived to see Rome at peace under August-quae ad meos pertinent. C. Trebatium cogitaram, quocumque exirem, mecum ducere, ut eum meis omnibus studiis beneficiis quam ornatissimum domum reducerem; sed postea quam et Pompei commoratio diuturnior erat quam putaram, et mea quaedam tibi non ignota dubitatio aut impedire profectionem meam videbatur aut certe tardare, (vide quid mihi sumpserim!) coepi velle ea Trebatium exspectare a te quae sperasset a me, neque mercule minus ei prolixè de tua voluntate promisi quam eram solitus de mea polliceri. Casus vero mirificus quidam intervenit, quasi vel testis opinionis meae vel sponsor humanitatis tuae. Nam cum de hoc ipso Trebatio cum Balbo nostro loquerer accuratius

tus. Horace introduces him as a speaker in Sat. 2. 1.

1. me alterum: cf. Ep. XV. 7 n. — quocumque exirem: Pompey had named Cicero as one of his 15 legati on the corn commission in 57 B.C. (Ep. XV. 7), and Cicero would naturally have gone to some province in connection with that matter, but as he preferred to stay at Rome, his place was taken by Quintus, who went to Sardinia (Ep. XVI. 7); or perhaps reference is made to the fact that the province of Spain was assigned to Pompey at the close of his consulship in 55 B.C., and Cicero may have been invited to accompany him as his legatus, but, as we know, Pompey remained at Rome. — dubitatio: Cicero's hesitation to leave Rome was due perhaps partly to a fear that Clodius might attack him during his absence, and partly to a fondness for Rome. Cf. si potes, etc., Ep. XVII. 2 n. — exspectare . . . sperasset: in the contrast between these two words lies a delicate compliment to Caesar. The favor of the successful governor of the Gauls would insure to Trebatium what the friendship of a legatus to Spain could only make probable. — prolixè: not infrequently in the Letters with verbs of hoping, thinking, and promising, adverbs are used instead of the neut. acc. plur. of the adj. used substantively, e.g. ut ipse facile animadverterem male (for mala) eum de me cogitare, Fam. 8, 12. 1; non licuit diutius bene de eo sperare, Fam. 10. 21. 1; si humaniter et sapienter et amabiliter in me cogitare vis, Att. 14. 13 A. 2. This is a colloquial usage. — promisi: used of a formal agreement, while polliceri implies a voluntary promise.

2. Balbo: L. Cornelius Balbus, a native of Gades, who had received Roman citizenship for his services against Sertorius; cf. Cic. pro Balbo, 5 f. He attached himself closely to Caesar, and was often Caesar's confidential agent in Rome. We have three of his letters to Cicero, Att. 9. 7 A, 7 B, domi meae, litterae mihi dantur a te, quibus in extremis scriptum erat: 'M. Iteium, quem mihi commendas, vel regem Galliae faciam, vel hunc Leptae delega, si vis. Tu ad me alium mitte quem ornem.' Sustulimus manus et ego et Balbus. Tanta fuit opportunitas, ut illud nescio quid non fortuitum sed divinum videretur. Mitto igitur ad te Trebatium, atque ita mitto ut initio mea sponte, post autem invitatu tuo mittendum duxerim. Hunc, mi Caesar, sic velim omni tua comitate complectare ut omnia, quae per me possis adduci ut in meos conferre velis, in unum hunc conferas. De quo tibi homine haec spondeo, non illo veteri verbo meo, quod, cum ad te de Milone scripsissem, iure lussisti, sed more Romano, quomodo homines non inepti loquuntur, probiorem hominem, meliorem virum, prudentiorem esse neminem; accedit etiam quod familiam ducit in iure civili singulari memoria, summa scientia. Huic ego neque tribunatum neque praefecturam neque and 13 A. — M. Iteium: nothing is known of him. See Crit. Append. — Leptae: Q. Lepta held some minor position under Caesar at this time. Fam. 6. 18 and 19 are addressed to him. — sustulimus manus: a gesture of surprise. — invitatu: apparently used nowhere else. Parallel forms, however, as Tyrrell remarks, are involutus (Ep. LXV. 7), reflatus (Att. 12. 2. 1), itus (Att. 15. 5. 3).

3. mi Caesar: cf. mi Pomponi, Ep. X. n. — non illo . . . Romano, not with that overworked phrase of mine, . . . but in the (hearty) Roman fashion. What the 'overworked phrase' was, or for what purpose Cicero wrote to Caesar concerning Milo, is unknown. Milo wished to be a candidate for the consulship for 52 B.C., and Cicero may have tried to secure for him Caesar's support, or at least his neutrality. For more Romano, cf. ego te Balbo, cum ad vos proficiscetur, more Romano commendabo, Ep. XXVI. 3. See also Ep. XXIV. 3. — familiam ducit, he leads the profession, sc. as concerns memory and knowledge of jurisprudence. Trebatius was a special legal adviser of Augustus; cf. Justin. Inst. 2. 25. — tribunatum: it was the fashion for young men of good family at Rome to go out to the provinces with the title of tribunus militum. Such men often had neither a taste for a military career nor the intention of adopting it, but desired the political and social presullius benefici certum nomen peto, benevolentiam tuam et liberalitatem peto, neque impedio quo minus, si tibi ita placuerit, etiam hisce eum ornes gloriolae insignibus. Totum denique hominem tibi ita trado, 'de manu,' ut aiunt, 'in manum' tuam istam et victoria et fide praestantem. Simus enim putidiusculi, quamquam per te vix licet; verum, ut video, licebit. Cura ut valeas et me, ut amas, ama.

XXII. (Q. fr. 2. 15 [16].)

MARCUS QUINTO FRATRI SALVTEM.

Cum a me litteras librari manu acceperis, ne paulum quidem me oti habuisse iudicato, cum autem mea, pau-tige which such an experience would give them on their return to Rome (cf. Tac. Agr. 5). Caesar has these military tyros in mind when he says: hic (timor) primum ortus est a tribunis militum praefectis reliquisque, qui ex urbe amicitiae causa Caesarem secuti non magnum in re militari usum habebant, B. G. I. 39. 2. Trebatius received the position of tribune from Caesar. — gloriolae: such positions, being purely honorary, indicated little with regard to a man's real merits, but carried a certain distinction along with them. Hence gloriola, not gloria. — de manu . . . in manum: a characteristic of colloquial language is its fondness for concrete phrases in expressing a thought which formal language conveys in abstract phrases. In such phrases manus is of frequent occurrence. Thus, in the language of everyday life 'generously' is often manu plena (Att. 2. 25. 1), 'to be present' prae manu esse, i.e. to be 'on hand' (Plaut.

Bacch. 623), 'to assist' manum dare, i.e. 'to lend a hand,' etc. Cf. also Otto, Sprichwörter der Römer, p. 210. 6, Landgraf, 329, Krebs, Antibarbarus under manus. — putidiusculi, something of a bore; cf. pulchellus, Ep. V. 10 n. — quamquam . . . licebit: i.e. although it is scarcely pardonable to take advantage of one who is so generous, by laying upon him such a task as I do in turning Trebatius over completely to your care, yet I feel you will pardon the liberty. — cura . . . ama: cf. Ep. XVIII. (end) n. The generous spirit in which Caesar responded to the request of Cicero is indicated by his reply, the substance of which Cicero quotes in a letter to Quintus (2. 13. 3): Trebatium quod ad se (i.e. Caesarem) miserim, persalse et humaniter etiam gratias mihi agit; negat enim in tanta multitudine eorum qui una essent quemquam fuisse, qui vadimonium concipere posset.

XXII. Rome, August, 54 B.C.

lum. Sic enim habeto, numquam me a causis et iudiciis districtiorem fuisse, atque id anni tempore gravissimo et caloribus maximis. Sed haec, quoniam tu ita praescribis, ferenda sunt, neque committendum ut aut spei aut cogitationi vestrae ego videar defuisse, praesertim cum, si id difficilius fuerit, tamen ex hoc labore magnam gratiam magnamque dignitatem sim conlecturus. Itaque, ut tibi placet, damus operam ne cuius animum offendamus atque ut etiam ab iis ipsis qui nos cum Caesare tam coniunctos dolent diligamur, ab aequis vero aut etiam propensis in hanc partem 2 vehementer et colamur et amemur. De ambitu cum atrocissime ageretur in senatu multos dies, quod ita erant progressi candidati consulares ut non esset ferendum, in senatu non fui. Statui ad nullam medici- 3 nam rei publicae sine magno praesidio accedere. Quo die haec scripsi, Drusus erat de praevaricatione a tribunis aeriariis absolutus, in summa quattuor sententiis,

1. sic habeto: cf. sic habeto, Ep. XXVI. 1 n. — anni tempore: August, the weather being hot even for that month; cf. Q. fr. 3. 1. 1. — vestrae: sc. of you and Caesar. — ex hoc labore: Cicero is probably referring to his support of the Triumvirate. During the year 54, he delivered orations in behalf of Gabinius (cf. pro Rabirio Post. 32), Vatinius, and Messius (cf. Att. 4. 15. 9), all of whom were tools of the triumvirs, and the first two had been former enemies of Cicero. Cf. note to Vatinius below. — ab iis ipsis qui . . . dolent: the oration which Cicero delivered in the same year in defense of M. Aemilius Scaurus (cf. Att. 4. 15. 9) son of the Scaurus who so earnestly championed the cause of the aristocracy, would naturally please the Optimates. — aequis, fairminded, i.e. toward Caesar. — propensis, etc.: Caesar's supporters.

2. de ambitu: cf. Q. fr. 3. 2. 3 (written two months later) de ambitu postulati sunt omnes qui consulatum petunt: a Memmio Domitius, a Q. Acutio, bono et erudito adulescente, Memmius, a Q. Pompeio Messalla, a Triario Scaurus. Cf. also Att. 4. 17. 2.

3. Drusus: probably Livius Drusus Claudianus, grandfather of the emperor Tiberius. — absolutus, etc.: each of the three decuriae, composed respectively of senators, knights, and tribuni aeriarii, voted separately (cf. Madvig, Verf. u. Verw. II. 328). In this case a ma-cum senatores et equites damnassent. Ego eodem die post meridiem Vatinius eram defensurus. Ea res facilis est. Comitia in mensem Septembrem reiecta sunt. Scauri iudicium statim exercebitur, cui nos non deerimus. Συνδελφίνοὺς Σοφοκλέους, quamquam a te factam fabellam video esse festive, nullo modo probavi. Venio nunc ad id quod nescio an primum esse debuerit. O iucundas mihi tuas de Britannia litteras! Timebam Oceanum, timebam litus insulae; reliqua non equidem contemno, sed plus habent tamen spei quam timoris, magisque sum sollicitus expectatione ea quam majority of the senators and a majority of the knights voted for conviction, a majority of the tribuni aerarii for acquittal. The guilt or innocence of the accused party was, however, decided by a majority of all the iudices, and in this instance there was a majority of four for acquittal. The number of jurors sitting in a trial was determined by the statute under which the charge was brought; the lowest number mentioned is 32, the highest 75 (cf. Madvig, Verf. u. Verw. II. 308). — Vatinius: P. Vatinius had made himself notorious during his tribuneship as Caesar's agent, but escaped punishment for his misdeeds. In 57 B.C. he failed as a candidate for the aedileship. In 56 he appeared as a witness against Sestius, whom Cicero was defending, and Cicero attacked him mercilessly. (Cf. e.g. pro Sest. 132 ff.; in Vat. Interr.; Fam. I. 9. 7; Q. fr. 2. 4. 1.) The trial here referred to was on an accusation of sodaliciis in 54 B.C. Cicero undertook the defense at Caesar's request. For Cicero's explanation of his conduct, cf. Fam. I. 9. 19. It is a significant fact that in his letters to Atticus he nowhere mentions the matter. Fam. 5. 9, 10 A and 10 B are letters written to Cicero in 45-44 B.C. by Vatinius. — comitia . . . reiecta sunt: the bribery scandals and the disturbances in Rome actually caused the postponement of the consular elections until July, 53. Cf. Dio Cassius, 40. 17. — Scauri iudicium: the charge of misgovernment in Sardinia had been brought against Scaurus in July, but the trial had been postponed for 30 days. — Συνδελφίνοὺς Σοφοκλέους: perhaps a translation of the Σύνδελφίνοι of Sophocles; cf. Ribbeck, Röm. Tragödie, 620. During the summer and autumn of 54 B.C. Quintus devoted some time to the translation and adaptation of various Greek plays, especially those of Sophocles; cf. Q. fr. 3. 1. 13 and Ep. XXIII. 7.

4. o iucundas . . . litteras: Cicero had written in July (Att. 4. 15. 10): ex Q. fratris litteris suspicor iam eum esse in Britannia: suspensio animo exspecto quid agat. Caesar was at this time making his second expedition to Britain. Quintus had transferred his ser-metu. Te vero ὑπόθεσιν scribendi egregiam habere video. Quos tu situs, quas naturas rerum et locorum, quos mores, quas gentes, quas pugnas, quem vero ipsum imperatorem habes! Ego te libenter, ut rogas, quibus rebus vis adiuvabo, et tibi versus quos rogas, hoc est 5 'Athenas noctuam,' mittam. Sed heus tu! celari videor a te. Quomodonam, mi frater, de nostris versibus Caesar? Nam primum librum se legisse scripsit ad me ante, et prima sic ut neget se ne Graeca quidem meliora legisse; reliqua ad quendam locum ῥαθυμότερα — hoc enim utimur verbo. Dic mihi verum: num aut res eum aut χαρακτήρ non delectat? Nihil est quod vereare; ego enim ne pilo quidem minus me amabo. Hac de re φιλαληθῶς et, ut soles scribere, fraterne.

XXIII. (Q. fr. 3. 5, 6.)

MARCVS QVINTO FRATRI SALVTEM.

1 Quod quaeris quid de illis libris egerim quos, cum essem in Cumano, scribere institui, non cessavi neque

vices from Pompey to Caesar at the beginning of the year.—versus . . . rogas: Quintus is evidently writing a poem on Caesar's achievements in Britain, and requests some verses from his brother. The poem is not extant. — Athenas noctuam: the proverb, 'coals to Newcastle,' as we say, appears in its Greek form, γλαυκ' εἰς Ἀθήνας, Fam. 9. 3. 2; 6. 3. 4.

5. heus tu: cf. Ep. XXXV. 25 n. — celari, to be kept in the dark. — de nostris versibus: Cicero's poem, de Temporibus Meis. Cf. also Fam. 1. 9. 23; Q. fr. 3. 1. 24. — ῥαθυμότερα, a trifle careless.—

hoc . . . verbo: the word ῥαθυμότερα had not been used by Caesar, but Cicero believes that it expresses Caesar's opinion of the latter part of the poem. — ne pilo quidem minus, not a whit the less. Cf. the similar proverbial expressions, nec . . . flocci facio, Att. 13. 50. 3; non nauci facio, Plaut. Bacch. 1102.

XXIII. Tusculum, Oct., 54 B.C.
 1. de illis libris: the books of the de Re Publica. — novendialibus iis feriis: cf. Cic. de Re Pub. 1. 14 nam cum P. Africanus hic, Pauli filius, feriis Lotinis Tuditano et Aquilio cos. constituisset

cesso, sed saepe iam scribendi totum consilium rationemque mutavi. Nam iam duobus factis libris, in quibus novendialibus iis feriis, quae fuerunt Tuditano et Aquilio consulibus, sermo est a me institutus Africani (paulo ante mortem) et Laeli, Phili, Manili, P. Rutili, Q. Tuberonis, et Laeli generorum, Fanni et Scaevolae, sermo autem in novem et dies et libros distributus de optimo statu civitatis et de optimo cive (sane texebatur opus luculente, hominumque dignitas aliquantum orationi ponderis adferebat), ii libri cum in Tusculano mihi legerentur audiente Sallustio, admonitus sum ab illo multo maiore auctoritate illis de rebus dici posse, si ipse loquerer de re publica, praesertim cum essem non Heraclides Ponticus, sed consularis, et is qui in maximis versatus in re publica rebus essem; quae tam antiquis hominibus attribuerem, ea visum iri ficta esse; oratorum sermonem in illis nostris libris qui essent de ratione dicendi belle a me removisse, ad eos tamen rettulisse, quos ipse vidissem; Aristotelem denique, quae de re publica et praestanti viro scribat, ipsum loqui. Commovit me, et eo magis quod maximos motus nostrae civitatis attingere non poteram, quod erant inferiores quam illorum aetas qui loquebantur. Ego autem id ipsum tum eram secutus, ne in nostra tem-

in hortis esse. — Tuditano et Aquilio consulibus: i.e. 129 B.C. — sermo est, etc.: cf. Att. 4. 16. 2 (written in July of this year) — in novem . . . libros: the finished work actually contained but six books (cf. de Div. 2. 3). About one-third of it is extant. — hominum: i.e. Africanus, Laelius, and the others. — Sallustio: probably the man to whom Fam. 2. 17 is addressed, and who relates Cicero's dream in de Div. 1. 59. — consularis: and therefore a man of much experience in managing the affairs of a great commonwealth, and not a mere publicist like Heraclides. — de ratione dicendi: the de Oratore, which purports to be a discussion that took place in Cicero's youth (B.C. 91).

2. inferiores, more recent. —

pora incurrens offenderem quempiam. Nunc et id vitabo et loquar ipse tecum, et tamen illa quae institueram ad te, si Romam venero, mittam. Puto enim te existimaturum a me illos libros non sine aliquo meo
 3 stomacho esse relictos. Caesaris amore, quem ad me perscripsti, unice delector; promissis iis quae ostendit non valde pendeo. Nec sitio honores nec desidero gloriam, magisque eius voluntatis perpetuitatem quam promissorum exitum exspecto; vivo tamen in ea ambitione et labore, tamquam id quod non postulo exspec-
 4 tem. Quod me de versibus faciendis rogas, incredibile est, mi frater, quam egeam tempore, nec sane satis commoveor animo ad ea quae vis canenda. Διατυπώσεις vero ad ea quae ipse ego ne cogitando quidem consequor, tu, qui omnes isto eloquendi et exprimendi genere superasti, a me petis? Facerem tamen ut possem, sed, quod te minime fugit, opus est ad poemam quadam animi alacritate, quam plane mihi tempora eripiunt. Abduco me equidem ab omni rei publicae cura dedoque litteris, sed tamen indicabo tibi quod mehercule in primis te celatum volebam. Angor, mi suavissime frater, angor nullam esse rem publicam, nulla iudicia, nostrumque hoc tempus aetatis, quod loquar ipse tecum: this purpose Cicero abandoned, returning to his original plan. His letters of this period contain many references to the de Re Pub., e.g. Q. fr. 2. 12 (14). 1; Att. 4. 16. 2; Att. 6. 1. 8.—relictos: see Crit. Append. Tyrrell suggests refictos ('remodeled').

4. versibus: cf. versus rogas, Ep. XXII. 4 n. Cf. also Q. fr. 3. 4. 4. Cicero apparently yielded at last to his brother's request; cf. Q. fr. 3. 9. 6 habeo absolu- tum suave, mihi quidem uti videtur, eros ad Caesarem.—Διατυπώσεις: perhaps with reference to the descriptive portions of the poem; cf. quos tu situs, etc., Ep. XXII. 4.—superasti: cf. Q. fr. 3. 4. 4 tibi istius generis in scribendo priores partes tribuo quam mihi.—quod (mehercule): for the acc., cf. Ter. Hec. 645 nosne hoc celatos tamdiu! Elsewhere Cicero uses de (or in) with the abl. of the thing, e.g. debes existimare te maxi-

in illa auctoritate senatoria florere debebat, aut forensi labore iactari aut domesticis litteris sustentari, illud vero, quod a puero adamaram, πολλὸν ἀριστεύειν καὶ ὑπείροχος ἔμμεναι ἄλλων, totum occidisse, inimicos a me partim non oppugnatos, partim etiam esse defensos, meum non modo animum, sed ne odium quidem esse liberum, unumque ex omnibus Caesarem esse inventum qui me tantum quantum ego vellem amaret, aut etiam, sicut alii putant, hunc unum esse qui vellet. Quorum tamen nihil est eiusmodi ut ego me non multa consolatione cotidie leniam; sed illa erit consolatio maxima, si una erimus. Nunc ad illa vel gravissimum accedit desiderium tui. Gabi- 5 nium si, ut Pansa putat oportuisse, defendissem, concidissem. Qui illum oderunt — ii sunt toti ordines —, propter quem oderunt, me ipsum odisse coepissent. Tenui me, ut puto, egregie, tantum ut facerem quantum omnes viderunt; et in omni summa, ut mones, valde me ad otium pacemque converto. De libris 6 mis de rebus a fratre esse celatum, Fam. 5. 2. 9. — πολλὸν . . . ἄλλων: Hom. Il. 6. 208. — defensos: cf. ex hoc labore, Ep. XXII. 1 n, and Vatinius, Ep. XXII. 3 n.

5. Gabinium si . . . defendissem: Gabinius was accused de maiestate, de repetundis, and de ambitu (cf. Q. fr. 3. 1. 15; 3. 3. 2). On the first charge he was acquitted (Q. fr. 3. 4. 1) through the efforts of Pompey, his political master. Cicero was induced by Pompey and Caesar to defend him when he came up for trial under the second charge, but he was convicted (pro Rabir. Post. 20, 32 f.). Gabinius had assisted Clodius in securing Cicero's exile, for which action Cicero attacked him fiercely; cf. pro Sest. 17 ff. In the text Cicero is speaking of the first trial. — Pansa: C. Vibius Pansa, a supporter of Caesar, and picked out by him for the consulship for 43. With his colleague Hirtius he was killed in the bellum Mutinense in the spring of that year. Pansa had probably urged Cicero in Caesar's name to undertake the defense of Gabinius. — tantum ut facerem: Cicero appeared as a witness against Gabinius in the first trial; cf. Q. fr. 3. 4. 3.

6. de libris: cf. Q. fr. 3. 4. 5 de bibliotheca tua Graeca supplenda,

Tyrannio est cessator. Chrysippo dicam; sed res operosa est et hominis perdiligentis. Sentio ipse, qui in summo studio nihil adsequor. De Latinis vero quomae vertam nescio; ita mendose exscribuntur et veniunt, sed tamen quod fieri poterit non neglegam. C. Rebilus, ut ante ad te scripsi, Romae est, et qui omnia adiurat, debere tibi valde renuntiant. De aerario puto confectum esse, dum absum.

- 7 Quattuor tragoedias sedecim diebus absolvisse cum scribas, tu quicquam ab alio mutuaris? et πάθος quaeris, cum Electram et Aëropam scripseris? Cessator esse noli et illud γνώθι σεαυτὸν noli putare ad adrogantiam minuendam solum esse dictum, verum etiam ut bona nostra norimus. Sed et istas et Erigonam mihi velim mittas. Habes ad duas epistulas proximas.

XXIV. (Fam. 7. 16.)

M. CICERO S. D. TREBATIO.

- 1 In Equo Troiano scis esse in extremo: 'sero sapient.' Tu tamen, mi vetule, non sero. Primas illas libris commutandis, Latinis comparandis, valde velim ista confici . . . , sed ego mihi ipsi ista per quem agam non habeo. — Tyrannio, Chrysippo: expert librarii; cf. Ep. XVII. 1. — ita mendose exscribuntur: an interesting bit of information in regard to the untrustworthiness of copyists. Cf. also Birt, Das antike Buchwesen, 222. — C. Rebilus: probably a centurion in Quintus's legion on furlough in Rome (Tyrrell). — qui omnia, etc.: see Crit. Append. — de aerario: the reference is unknown. Cf. Q. fr. 3. 4. 5.

7. Electram et Aëropam: the Electra and Erigona were probably translations of plays of the same name by Sophocles. The original of the Aëropa is not known with certainty. Cf. Ribbeck, Röm. Trag. pp. 619-621, and Bücheler, Quinti Ciceronis Reliquiae, 18. — γνώθι σεαυτὸν: the inscription over the entrance to the temple of Apollo at Delphi. — Erigonam: Cicero first refers to this work in Sept. (cf. Q. fr. 3. 1. 13). It had not reached him, however, in Dec. (cf. Q. fr. 3. 9. 6), and he fears that it has been lost on the way. — habes sc. responsum.

XXIV. Rome, Nov., 54 B.C.

rabiosulas sat fatuas dedisti; deinde quod τῶν Βρεττανῶν minus φιλοθέωρον te praeuisti, plane non reprehendo. Nunc vero in hibernis iniectus mihi videris, itaque te commovere non curas.

Vsquequaque sapere oportet; id erit telum acerrimum.

Ego si foris cenitarem, Cn. Octavio familiari tuo non defuissem; cui tamen dixi, cum me aliquotiens invi-

1. Equo Troiano: cf. Ep. XIX. 2 n. — sero sapiunt: Cicero quotes here, as he did in Ep. XIX. 2 (si sciens fallo), the first words of a familiar passage, which had passed into a proverb. The expression is thus explained by Festus, I. 510, de Pon.: 'sero sapiunt Phryges' proverbium est natum a Troianis qui decimo denique anno velle coeperunt Helenam quaeque cum ea erant rapta reddere. Cf. also Ribbeck, Röm. Trag. 49. — non sero: Trebatius had gone to Caesar with such rose-colored ideas of a soldier's life and of the immediate wealth and distinction to be won in it, that the inevitable hardships and monotony made him discontented and homesick, so that Cicero had written him reprovingly: primorum mensum litteris tuis vehementer commovebar, quod mihi interdum — pace tua dixerim — levis in urbis urbanitatisque desiderio, interdum piger, interdum timidus in labore militari, saepe autem etiam, quod a te alienissimum est, subimpudens videbare; tamquam enim syngrapham ad imperatorem, non epistulam attulisses, etc., Fam. 7. 17. 1. This letter evidently had the effect intended, for Cicero's words, non sero, as well as mi vetule, indicate that Trebatius had repented of his discontent. — primas illas: sc. tuas epistulas. — rabiosulas, a trifle crazy. Cf. pulchellus, Ep. V. 10 n. The phrase, rabiosulas sat fatuas, is probably quoted from some comic poet. Cf., however, Ribbeck, Com. Rom. Frag. p. xlv. — τῶν Βρεττανῶν minus φιλοθέωρον, not very fond of seeing the sights in Britain. In the summer of 55 B.C. Caesar made his first expedition to Britain, in which Trebatius did not care to join. — in hibernis iniectus: Cicero is writing toward the end of November. — te commovere, to stir; as of one crawling out from under a blanket in cold weather. — usquequaque, etc.: probably the words of Ulysses in the same play from which the quotation sero sapiunt was taken. Cf. Ribbeck, Röm. Trag. p. 49, and Trag. Rom. Frag. p. 246. — sapere: perhaps with a double meaning, to be wise and to be learned in the law. Cf. Ep. XXV. 1 n. — id erit telum acerrimum: Mezger quotes Falstaff's words, 'Discretion is the better part of valor.'

2. cenitarem: this frequentative is not found in Cicero outside of the Letters. — Cn. Octavio: evidently a pushing fellow, who wanted the distinction of entertaining Cicero. Cf. Fam. 7. 9. 3 Cn. Octavius est an Cn. Cornelius quidam, tuus familiaris, summo genere natus, terrae filius. Is me, quia scit tuum familiarem esse, taret: 'Oro te, quis tu es?' Sed mercurus, extra iocum, homo bellus est; vellem eum tecum abduxisses. 3 Quid agatis et ecquid in Italiam venturi sitis hac hieme fac plane sciam. Balbus mihi confirmavit te divitem futurum. Id utrum Romano more locutus sit, bene nummatum te futurum, an quomodo Stoici dicunt, omnes esse divites qui caelo et terra frui possint, postea videbo. Qui istinc veniunt superbiam tuam accusant, quod negent te percontantibus respondere. Sed tamen est quod gaudeas; constat enim inter omnis neminem te uno Samarobrivae iuris peritiorem esse.

XXV. (Fam. 7. 10.)

M. CICERO S. D. TREBATIO.

1 Legi tuas litteras, ex quibus intellexi te Caesari nostro valde iure consultum videri. Est quod gaudeas te in ista loca venisse ubi aliquid sapere viderere. Quod si in Britanniam quoque profectus esses, profecto crebro ad cenam invitat. — mercurus: cf. mercule, Ep. XXV. 3 n. — homo bellus, a good fellow. See Martial, 3. 63. Bellus, the diminutive of bonus, is used familiarly in the Letters with the peculiar force which colloquial Latin often gave to the diminutive (cf. pulchellus, Ep. V. 10 n), e.g. puellae Caeciliae bellissimae salutem dices, Att. 6. 4. 3; illum pueris locum esse bellissimum duximus, Att. 5. 17. 3; so belle se habere ('to be in first-rate health'), Att. 12. 37. 1.

3. in Italiam: i.e. to Luca. — Romano more: cf. more Romano, Ep. XXI. 3 n, and more maiorum, Ep. I. 1 n. — bene nummatum: a colloquial expression which Horace adopts for comic effect (Epp. 1. 6. 38) perhaps from this passage. Cf. also Cic. de leg. Agr. 2. 59. — quod negent: cf. diceret, Ep. I. 3 n. — respondere: here with a double meaning, viz., to reply to and to give legal advice to. Cf. cautior, Ep. XXV. 2 n. — constat . . . peritiorem esse: Trebatius could at least congratulate himself upon discovering a place where he was the most learned lawyer — because he was the only one. Cf. quotation, Ep. XXI. (end).

XXV. Rome, December, 54 B.C.

1. te Caesari . . . videri: cf. quotation, Ep. XXI. (end). — sapere: with special reference to technical legal knowledge. — in nemo in illa tanta insula peritior te fuisset. Verum tamen — rideamus licet ; sum enim a te invitatus — subinvideo tibi, ultro etiam accersitum ab eo ad quem ceteri non propter superbiam eius sed propter occupationem adspirare non possunt. Sed tu in ista epistula nihil mihi scripsisti de tuis rebus, quae mercule mihi non minori curae sunt quam meae. Valde metuo ne frigeas in hibernis. Quamobrem camino luculento utendum censeo (idem Mucio et Manilio placebat), praesertim qui sagis non abundares. Quamquam vos nunc istic satis calere audio; quo quidem nuntio valde mercule de te timueram. Sed tu in re militari multo es

Britanniam: cf. τῶν Βρεττανῶν, Ep. XXIV. 1 n. — in . . . insula peritior: where all were savages. A similar jest at end of Ep. XXIV. — sum . . . invitatus: the letters of Trebatius were apparently written in a personal and humorous vein. — subinvideo tibi, I envy you a trifle. Cf. Intr. 77. — accersitum: sc. to give advice.

2. minori curae: colloquial Latin showed a fondness for the predicate dative after esse; and curae, often with an adjective, magnae, minori, summae, etc., is very frequently found in this construction. — valde metuo, etc., I am very much afraid that you are suffering from cold in your winter quarters; so I advise you to keep a bright fire going on the hearth (Mucius and Manilius hold the same opinion), especially as you are not well supplied with clothing for a campaign, and yet I understand that you find it hot enough over there just at present. The humor of the passage consists in the rapid transition from the literal to the metaphorical meaning of certain words, and in the citation of learned authorities in support of self-evident conclusions. frigeas in hibernis is perhaps best taken literally, sagis non abundares with a double meaning, and calere figuratively. — Mucio: Q. Mucius Scaevola, pontifex maximus, consul in 95 B.C., an eminent jurist and Cicero's preceptor; cf. Lael. 1. — Manilio: M'. Manilius, consul in 149 B.C.; an authority upon civil law often mentioned with Scaevola. — placebat: like censeo a technical legal word. — sagis non abundares: inasmuch as Trebatius is not well supplied with heavy garments, and the weather is cold, his only protection lies in keeping a good fire; but the sagum was the typical garment of a soldier, as the toga was the main article in the dress of a civilian (thus sagati, Non. II. 202, Müll., is opposed to togati), and to say that Trebatius was not well supplied with saga implied that he avoided the dangers of the campaign. — calere: used metaphorically of the 'warm work' which the insurrection of the Gauls under Ambiorix (Caes. B. G. 5. 23-53) gave the cautior quam in advocationibus, qui neque in Oceano natare volueris, studiosissimus homo natandi, neque spectare essedarios, quem antea ne andabata quidem defraudare poteramus. Sed iam satis iocati sumus.

3 Ego de te ad Caesarem quam diligenter scripserim, tute scis, quam saepe, ego; sed mercule iam intermiseram, ne viderer liberalissimi hominis meique amantissimi voluntati erga me diffidere. Sed tamen iis litteris quas proxime dedi putavi esse hominem commonendum. Id feci; quid profecerim facias me velim certiore, et simul de toto statu tuo consiliisque omnibus; scire enim cupio quid agas, quid exspectes, quam longum istum

Romans. See Intr. 99.—cautior, more discreet. Cavere as a legal term means, 'to provide for a person,' as his counsel. Cicero suggests that Trebatius showed more discretion as a soldier, in keeping out of range, than he did as a lawyer. The same pun occurs in another letter to Trebatius (Fam. 7. 6. 2) tu, qui ceteris cavere didicisti, in Britannia ne ab essedariis decipiaris caveto. One of the main sources of humor in Cicero's letters to Trebatius lies in the double meaning which he gives to judicial terms,—a form of wit which would appeal forcibly to the legal mind of Trebatius; cf. placebat and respondeo above and respondere in the foregoing letter. Cf. also Cic. Philipp. 2. 7 quam multa ioca solent esse in epistulis quae, prolata si sint, inepta videantur!—qui . . . volueris: a humorous way of saying that Trebatius avoided the dangers and hardships of the British campaign by staying in Gaul. See in Britanniam, 1 n.—studiosissimus homo natandi: Trebatius's fondness for swimming

Horace wittily uses for his own purposes in Sat. 2. 1. 8.—spectare: cf. τῶν Ἰππευμάτων, Ep. XXIV. 1 n.—andabata: Trebatius had been so fond of combats in Rome that his friends had not been able to keep him away, even from the shows where blindfolded warriors fought on horseback. It is strange, therefore, that he feels so little interest in seeing similar contests in Britain. The essedarii were especially dreaded by the Roman soldiers.—defraudare: a colloquial word, which, though common enough in Plautus and Terence, Cicero uses elsewhere perhaps only in a proverbial expression, Or. 221.

3. mercule: this oath is found in Cicero's correspondence in the forms, hercules, mehercules (or mercules), and mehercule (or mercule). Cicero himself writes (Or. 157) mehercule libentius dixerim quam mehercules, and the more polished letter-writers of this period seem to have agreed with him.—hominem: cf. homini, Ep. XVI. 6 n.

tuum discessum a nobis futurum putes. Sic enim tibi ⁴ persuadeas velim, unum mihi esse solacium quare facilius possim pati te esse sine nobis, si tibi esse id emolumento sciam; sin autem id non est, nihil duobus nobis est stultius, me qui te non Romam attraham, te qui non huc advoles. Vna mercule nostra vel severa vel iocosa congressio pluris erit quam non modo hostes, sed etiam fratres nostri Aedui. Quare omnibus de rebus fac ut quam primum sciam:

Aut consolando aut consilio aut re iuero.

XXVI. (Fam. 7. 18.)

CICERO TREBATIO S.

Accepi a te aliquot epistulas uno tempore, quas tu ¹ diversis temporibus dederas. In quibus me cetera delectarunt; significabant enim te istam militiam iam firmo animo ferre et esse fortem virum et constantem; quae ego paulisper in te ita desideravi, non imbecillitate animi tui, sed magis ut desiderio nostri te aestuare putarem. Quare perge, ut coepisti; forti animo istam tolera militiam. Multa, mihi crede, adsequere; ego enim renovabo commendationem, sed tempore. Sic

4. nihil: stronger than nemo. — advoles: Lorenz, on Plaut. Pseud. 535, says: The Roman sermo cotidianus had a host of substitutes for ire and abire, e.g. ambulare, se agere, se penetrare, se adferre, se dare, se immergere, se ducere, se abripere, etc. Such substitutes as advolare and convolare are especial favorites, because of their exaggerative character. Cf. Att. 1. 14. 5; Ep. LXIX. 1. — fratres nostri Aedui: a thrust at the absurdity of bestowing such complimentary titles upon remote barbarians, whose 'brotherhood' did not keep them from frequent treachery and insubordination. The grant of the title is mentioned in Caes. B. G. 1. 33. With the sentiment, cf. Fam. 7. 11. 2 una mercule conlocutio nostra pluris erit quam omnes Samarobrivaë. — aut, etc.: Ter. Heaut. 86.

XXVI. A villa near Ulubrae, April 8, 53 B.C.

1. sic habeto: like scito (cf. Intr.

habeto, non tibi maiori esse curae ut iste tuus a me discessus quam fructuosissimus tibi sit quam mihi. Itaque, quoniam vestrae cautiones infirmae sunt, Graeculam tibi misi cautionem chirographi mei. Tu me velim de ratione Gallici belli certiore facias; ego enim
 2 ignavissimo cuique maximam fidem habeo. Sed ut ad epistulas tuas redeam, cetera belle; illud miror: quis solet eodem exemplo plures dare qui sua manu scribit? Nam quod in palimpsesto, laudo equidem parsimoniam; sed miror quid in illa chartula fuerit quod delere malueris quam haec in nova scribere, nisi forte tuas formu-

89), a lively colloquial expression which is used frequently in the Letters. Sic takes the place of an object. Cf. Fam. 1. 7. 4; 16. 4. 4; Ep. I.XI. 2. The construction is indicated in Fam. 2. 6. 5 unum hoc sic habeto, etc. Habere with the force of scire or audivisse, though found most frequently in the imperative, is not confined to that mode. Cf. habes omnia, Att. 5. 20. 7; habes consilia nostra, nunc cognosce de Bruto, Att. 5. 21. 10. Cf. the English colloquial expression, 'you have it,' i.e. you have the idea. — maiori curae: cf. Ep. XXV. 2 n. — vestrae cautiones . . . chirographi mei: 'the guaranty-bonds drawn up by you lawyers for your clients are so poor that I am afraid your position will not be a stable one if you depend upon your own support. This letter, therefore, is a guaranty, with a Greek coloring to it, to be sure, of my support.' Graeculam is very obscure, but in the diminutive force the key to the explanation seems to lie. Cf. Tusc. Disp. 1. 86, where Cicero characterizes the extravagant congratulations which the Neapolitans offered to Pompey on his recovery after a dangerous illness as ineptum sane negotium et Graeculum; and pro Flacc. 23 motus quidam temerarius Graeculae contentio-nis. The assembly showed the instability so characteristic of the Greeks. The congratulations for Pompey were marked by that extravagance or lack of dignity which one is accustomed to look for in the Greeks. With this explanation of Graeculam the meaning is: 'I send you therefore in this letter, lacking as it may seem in seriousness, because of its light tone of raillery, a promise of my support.' — ignavissimo cuique: Cicero cannot mean, as many suppose, that he would like the evidence of a spectator concerning the Gallic war, because Caesar's Commentaries were thought to put matters in too rose-colored a light. The Commentaries were published two years later.

2. cetera belle: sc. fuerunt. Cf. sic, Ep. V. 3 n, and bellus, Ep. XXIV. 2 n. — eodem exemplo, with identical contents. — sed miror, etc.: the matter must have been very poor which Trebatius erased to make room for such a letter as the one was which took its place. — tuas formulas: at las; non enim puto te meas epistulas delere ut reponas tuas. An hoc significas, nihil fieri, frigere te, ne chartam quidem tibi suppeditare? Iam ista tua culpa est, qui verecundiam tecum extuleris et non hic nobiscum reliqueris. Ego te Balbo, cum ad vos proficiscetur, 3 more Romano commendabo. Tu, si intervallum longius erit mearum litterarum, ne sis admiratus; eram enim afuturus mense Aprili. Has litteras scripsi in Pompino, cum ad villam M. Aemili Philemonis devertissem, ex qua iam audieram fremitum clientium meorum, quos quidem tu mihi conciliasti; nam Ulubris honoris mei causa vim maximam ranuncolorum se commosse constabat. Cura ut valeas. VI Idus April. de Pomptino.

Epistulam tuam, quam accepi ab L. Arruntio, con- 4 scidi innocentem; nihil enim habebat quod non vel in contione recte legi posset. Sed et Arruntius ita te mandasse aiebat et tu adscripseras. Verum illud esto. Nihil te ad me postea scripsisse demirror, praesertim tam novis rebus.

tracted by haec into the acc. — non enim puto, etc., you are not scratching out my letters, are you, to make room for yours? — frigere te: cf. Intr. 99. — chartam: cf. Intr. 59. — verecundiam: in Ep. XXI. 3 Cicero recommends Trebatius to Caesar on the score of modesty.

3. Balbo: cf. Ep. XXI. 2 n. — more Romano: cf. Ep. XXI. 3 n. — eram afuturus: cf. Intr. 84 c. — M. Aemili Philemonis: freedman of M. Lepidus. — devertissem, had put up at. — fremitum clientium meorum: Trebatius was the patron of Ulubrae, a little town near the Pomptine marshes, and on leaving Rome for Caesar's camp had entrusted the interests of the town to Cicero. The latter, upon passing through the district, is saluted by Trebatius's clients the frogs, for the marshes were full of them, as we know also from Hor. Sat. 1. 5. 14.

4. legi: cf. Ep. V. 8 n. — ita: referring back to conscidi. — demirror (for mirror): a tendency to exaggerate has already been noticed as a characteristic of colloquial language (Intr. 96). Like the frequentative (cf. Intr. 79), the verb compounded with a prep. takes the place of the simple verb, because it is stronger; but from frequent use it ultimately loses its characteristic meaning, and does not differ in sense from the simple verb. Cf. also Intr. 76, 78.

XXVII. (Fam. 16. 16.)

QVINTVS MARCO FRATRI S.

1 De Tirone, mi Marce, ita te meumque Ciceronem et meam Tulliolam tuumque filium videam, ut mihi gratissimum fecisti, cum eum indignum illa fortuna iudicasti ac nobis amicum quam servum esse maluisti. Mihi crede, tuis et illius litteris perlectis exsilii gaudio
 2 et tibi et ago gratias et gratulor. Si enim mihi Stati fidelitas est tantae voluptati, quanti esse in isto haec eadem bona debent additis litteris, sermonibus, humanitate, quae sunt his ipsis commodis potiora! Amo te omnibus equidem de maximis causis, verum etiam propter hanc, vel quod mihi sic ut debuisti nuntiasti. Te totum in litteris vidi. Sabini pueris et promisi omnia et faciam.

XXVIII. (Fam. 7. 15.)

CICERO TREBATIO.

1 Quam sint morosi qui amant vel ex hoc intellegi potest: moleste ferebam antea te invitum istic esse; pungit me rursus quod scribis esse te istic libenter.

XXVII. Transalpine Gaul, May, 53 B.C.

1. mi Marce: cf. mi Pomponi, Ep. X. n. — meam: (not tuam) to indicate his affection for Tullia. — Tulliolam: cf. pulchellus, Ep. V. 10 n. and Intr. 76. — amicum . . . maluisti: with reference to Tiro's manumission. Cicero seems to refer to the same event in nostra . . . fient, Fam. 16. 10. 2, and dies promissorum adest, quem etiam repraesentabo, si adveneris, Fam. 16. 14. 2. — mihi crede: this phrase and crede mihi are common in the correspondence. The latter seems to be the colloquial, and mihi crede the more formal order. — exsilii gaudio: in harmony with the familiar tone of the letter.

2. Stati: cf. Ep. VII. 1 n. — sic . . . nuntiasti: for the absolute use of nuntio, cf. Ter. Hec. 642. bene, ita me di ament, nuntias. — Sabini: unknown.

XXVIII. Rome, June, 53 B.C.

1. quam sint morosi qui amant: Böckel considers this a

Neque enim mea commendatione te non delectari facile patiebar et nunc angor quicquam tibi sine me esse iucundum. Sed hoc tamen malo ferre nos desiderium quam te non ea quae spero consequi. Quod vero in C. ² Mati, suavissimi doctissimique hominis, familiaritatem venisti, non dici potest quam valde gaudeam. Qui fac ut te quam maxime diligat. Mihi crede, nihil ex ista provincia potes quod iucundius sit deportare. Cura ut valeas.

XXIX. (Fam. 3. 2.)

M. CICERO PROCOS. S. D. APPIO PVLCHRO IMP.

Cum et contra voluntatem meam et praeter opinio- ¹
nem accidisset ut mihi cum imperio in provinciam

quotation from some poet, and compares for the sentiment Plaut. Trin. 668: Itast amor, ballista ut iacitur, nil sic celerest neque volat: | Atque is mores hominum moros et morosos efficit.

2. C. Mati: cf. Ep. XCI., introd. note, and XCII. — suavissimi: Ep. XCII. affords excellent proof of the correctness of this characterization. — doctissimi: Matius not only wrote a book upon gastronomy, but Cicero found the impulse to some of his best philosophical work in the lively sympathy of Matius. Cf. φιλοσοφούμενα, Ep. XCI. 5 n. — familiaritatem: the friendship formed between Matius and Trebatius in Gaul continued unshaken through all the vicissitudes of the Civil War. Cf. Ep. XCI. 1, Att. 9. 15 A. — mihi crede: cf. Ep. XXVII. 1 n.

XXIX. After leaving Rome, about Mar., 51 B.C. Cicero's request, embodied in this letter, that Appius Claudius Pulcher, his predecessor in the proconsulship of Cilicia, should turn over the province to him in as satisfactory a condition as possible, was far from being fulfilled; and Cicero found himself under the necessity of changing many of the corrupt and tyrannous practices of the late governor, — a course which brought upon him the enmity of Appius. Upon his return to Rome, Appius was charged with misgovernment by Dolabella, Cicero's son-in-law, but escaped punishment with the help of Pompey. For the limits of Cicero's province, cf. Intr. 23.

The possession of the title proconsul (procos.), carrying along with it the imperium, indicates that Cicero wrote this letter at some point outside of Rome. Appius received the title of imperator (imp.) from his troops, because of a successful campaign against the mountaineers of his province.

1. contra voluntatem . . . et praeter opinionem: Cicero had proficisci necesse esset, in multis et variis molestiis cogitationibusque meis haec una consolatio occurrebat, quod neque tibi amior quam ego sum quisquam posset succedere, neque ego ab ullo provinciam accipere qui mallet eam quam maxime mihi aptam explicatamque tradere. Quod si tu quoque eandem de mea voluntate erga te spem habes, ea te profecto numquam fallat. At te maximo opere pro nostra summa coniunctione tuaque singulari humanitate etiam atque etiam quaeso et peto ut, quibuscumque rebus poteris — poteris autem plurimis, — prospicias et consulas rationibus 2 meis. Vides ex senatus consulto provinciam esse habendam. Si eam, quod eius facere potueris, quam expeditissimam mihi tradideris, facilius erit mihi quasi decursus mei temporis. Quid in eo genere efficere possis, tui consili est; ego te quod tibi veniet in mentem mea interesse valde rogo. Pluribus verbis ad te scriberem, si aut tua humanitas longiorem orationem exspectaret aut id fieri nostra amicitia pateretur aut res verba desideraret ac non pro se ipsa loqueretur. Hoc declined a province both at the close of his praetorship and of his consulship. The words contra voluntatem indicate that in declining Macedonia in favor of C. Antonius in 63 B.C. he did not show so much self-abnegation as he would lead us elsewhere to infer. Cf. Ep. XXXIV. 13 si quisquam, etc. His assignment to a province in this case was one of the results of a law passed rather unexpectedly; cf. Intr. 22. — amior: cf. Appium, Ep. VIII. 2 n. — summa coniunctione: both were augurs. See also amior above. — quaeso: here (with peto) followed by an object clause, — a rare use. In classical prose quaeso is used parenthetically either alone or with a single word for an object, especially deos or a personal pronoun (cf. Phil. 7. 8). — consulas, etc.: instead of complying with this request, Appius proposed a decrease in the scanty military force in the province (cf. Fam. 3. 3. 2), and treated Cicero with marked disrespect (cf. Fam. 3. 8. 6). The letters of the two men are full of mutual recriminations and explanations; cf. Fam. 3. 7. 2; 3. 9. 1; 3. 11. 5.

2. eius: neuter, partitive genitive; cf. Fam. 5. 8. 5; Att. 11. 12. 4. — si . . . intellexero: cf. si . . . videro, Ep. VIII. 5 n.

velim tibi persuadeas, si rationibus meis provisum a te esse intellexero, magnam te ex eo et perpetuam voluptatem esse capturum. Vale.

XXX. (Att. 5. 1.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Ego vero et tuum in discessu vidi animum et meo sum ipse testis; quo magis erit tibi videndum ne quid novi decernatur, ut hoc nostrum desiderium ne plus sit annuum. De Annio Saturnino curasti probe. De sa-tisdando vero te rogo, quoad eris Romae, tu ut satisfies, et sunt aliquot satisfactiones secundum mancipium,

XXX. Minturnae, about May 7, 51 B.C. Cicero apparently left Rome May 1, spent a day at his Tusculan villa with Philotimus, his business agent, and Atticus (3), and went thence to Minturnae by the way of Arpinum and Aquinum (3). He reached his destination, Laodicea in Phrygia, July 31 (Att. 5. 15. 1). With 3-5 of this letter, cf. Ep. VI.

1. ego vero: these words imply that Cicero has in mind a remark in the letter of Atticus. Cf. Fam. 16. 10. 1. — ut . . . ne: ut ne is frequent in Latin comedy in clauses both of result and of purpose, and the explanation would seem to be that originally ne had purely a negative force in the combination, e.g. faciemus ut, quod viderit, ne viderit, Plaut. M. G. 149; merito ut ne dicant, id est (mi in manu), Plaut. Trin. 105. Colloquial language, being conservative of old usages, retained this archaism and others after they had disappeared from general use in formal language. The separation of ut and ne is remarkable, but finds parallels, especially in Latin comedy: cf. ut quom opus sit ne in mora nobis siet, Ter. Ad. 354, and Plaut. M. G. 149 (above); in fact, the use of ut ne instead of ne makes it possible to put ne in the middle or near the end of the sentence, and thus secure the desired emphasis upon the negation. According to Seyffert-Müller (on Laelius, 305), ut ne frequently appears in the language of the laws where we should expect ne. This coincidence between the legal and colloquial style is due to the conservatism of each form of speech, and is especially noticeable in the letter from the jurist Sulpicius (Ep. LXXV).

2. Annio Saturnino: probably a freedman of T. Annius Milo. — aliquot satisfactiones secundum mancipium, some satisfactory evidence with reference to ownership. Cicero was apparently about to sell some property, and advises Atticus to give such proof of the validity of his title as was veluti Mennianorum praediorum vel Atilianorum. De Oppio factum est ut volui, et maxime quod DCCC aperuisti; quae quidem ego utique vel versura facta solvi volo, ne extrema exactio nostrorum nominum expectetur. Nunc venio ad transversum illum extremae epistulae tuae versiculum, in quo me admones de sorore. Quae res se sic habet. Vt veni in Arpinas, cum ad me frater venisset, in primis nobis sermo, isque multus, de te fuit, ex quo ego veni ad ea quae fueramus ego et tu inter nos de sorore in Tusculano locuti. Nihil tam vidi mite, nihil tam placatum quam tum meus frater erat in sororem tuam, ut etiam si qua fuerat ex ratione sumptus offensio, non appareret. Illo sic die; postridie ex Arpinati profecti sumus. Vt in Arcano Quintus maneret dies fecit, ego Aquini, sed prandimus in Arcano. Nosti hunc fundum. Quo ut venimus, humanissime Quintus 'Pomponia' inquit, 'tu invita mulieres, given in the case of the Mennian estate — or the Atilian (as I had better call it). — de Oppio: C. Oppius, Caesar's agent in Rome, belonged to that little group of young men who followed Caesar's cause faithfully. His biography of Caesar probably formed the basis of Plutarch's sketch. — quod DCCC (sc. sestertia) aperuisti, because you have expressed a readiness to pay the 800,000 sesterces. The meaning of aperuisti is, however, doubtful. This debt to Caesar, which was still outstanding in Dec., 50 B.C. (Att. 7. 3. 11), was evidently expected to block Cicero's opposition to the triumvirs. The plan accomplished its object; cf. Att. 7. 3. 11 'But you know how much is still due him. Do you think, pray, that I have reason to fear lest some Pompeian may twit me with it, if my opposition to Caesar is rather half-hearted, or lest Caesar may call in the loan, if I oppose him somewhat vigorously? I fancy that, if I ever speak boldly in the senate in behalf of the commonwealth, I fancy, I say, that your Tarshish friend Balbus will meet me at the door and say, "Pray let me have a cheque for that money." — vel versura facta, even if a (new) loan has to be made.

3. transversum . . . versiculum: the line written lengthwise along the margin. — sorore: Pomponia, the wife of Quintus. — Arpinas: sc. praedium. — in Tusculano: see intr. to letter. — mite: cf. patientia, Ep. XVI. 7 n. — nihil: cf. Ep. XXV. 4 n. — dies fecit: the day being a holiday, it was incumbent upon Quintus to spend it upon his estate with his ego accivero pueros.' Nihil potuit, mihi quidem ut visum est, dulcius, idque cum verbis tum etiam animo ac vultu. At illa audientibus nobis: 'Ego sum,' inquit, 'hic hospita' — id autem ex eo, ut opinor, quod antecesserat Staius ut prandium nobis videret. Tum Quintus 'En,' inquit mihi, 'haec ego patior cotidie.' Dices: 'Quid, quaeso, istuc erat?' Magnum; itaque me ipsum commoverat: sic absurde et aspere verbis vultuque responderat. Dissimulavi dolens. Discubuimus omnes praeter illam, cui tamen Quintus de mensa misit; illa reiecit. Quid multa? nihil meo fratre lenius, nihil asperius tua sorore mihi visum est, et multa praetereo quae tum mihi maiori stomacho quam ipsi Quinto fuerunt. Ego inde Aquinum; Quintus in Arcano remansit et Aquinum ad me postridie mane venit mihi que narravit nec secum illam dormire voluisse et, cum discessura esset, fuisse eiusmodi qualem ego vidissem. Quid quaeris? vel ipsi hoc dicas licet, humanitatem ei meo iudicio illo die defuisse. Haec ad te scripsi fortasse pluribus quam necesse fuit, ut videres tuas quoque esse partes instituendi et monendi. Reliquum est, ut 5 tenants and slaves. — accivero: the fut. perf. indicates sometimes what will happen while something else takes place. Cf. dimisero, Ep. XV. 2 n. — pueros: probably young Marcus and young Quintus, who accompanied the orator to Cilicia. — ego . . . hospita, I am a stranger here. — Staius: Ponia was annoyed at what she regarded as the officiousness of Staius. Cf. Ep. VII. 1 n. — ut . . . videret, to see to: a colloquial use of videre. Cf. talaria videamus, Att. 14. 21. 4 and Ter. Heaut. 459. — en, see that; a common interjection in lively conversation, as Latin comedy abundantly proves. Cf. Brix, Plaut. Trin. 3.

4. sic absurde: this use of sic to express intensity with verbs and adjectives is found chiefly in Cicero and the comic writers (Tyrrell). Similar cases, perhaps, are Hor. Sat. 1. 5. 69; 2. 3. 1. — stomacho, annoyance; common in this sense only in the Letters. — quid quaeris: cf. Ep. V. 4 n. — tuas . . . monendi: Atticus is requested to reprove his sister, just as he had apparently asked Cicero to reprove Quintus; cf. 3. Quintus and antequam proficiscare mandata nostra exhaurias, scribas ad me omnia, Pomptinum extrudas, cum profectus eris, cures ut sciam, sic habeas, nihil mehercule te mihi nec carius esse nec suavius. A. Torquatum amantissime dimisi Minturnis, optimum virum, cui me ad te scripsisse aliquid in sermone significes velim.

XXXI. (Fam. 8. 1.)

CAELIVS CICERONI S.

1 Quod tibi discedens pollicitus sum me omnes res urbanas diligentissime tibi perscripturum, data opera

Pomponia were divorced about seven years later.

5. Pomptinum: C. Pomptinus, who was praetor in 63 B.C., was Cicero's able assistant in the suppression of the Catilinarian conspiracy; cf. in Cat. 3. 5. He was a man of military experience, and Cicero, appreciating his own ignorance in military affairs, and the danger which threatened his province from the Parthians, had made him one of his four legati. — sic habeas: cf. sic habeto, Ep. XXVI. 1 n. — cui . . . velim: 'I wish that you would tell him that I have written to you about him.' The reference is to the complimentary remarks just made.

XXXI. Rome, about May 24, 51 B.C. M. Caelius Rufus was born about 85 B.C., and came to Rome when fifteen or sixteen years of age to study law and politics. He sympathized with Catiline, but took no active part in the conspiracy. In 52 B.C. as tribune he vigorously supported the aristocratic cause, but in later life he went over to Caesar. In 51 B.C., when his letters to Cicero begin, Caelius was a candidate for the curule aedileship. In January, 49, he opposed the senate, and fled with Curio to Caesar's camp. Disappointed with the 'spoils' which fell to his share, he joined Milo in an uprising in southern Italy, and was put to death by Caesar's troops in 48. In the social world his intimacy with Clodia (Ep. VIII. 5) gave him great notoriety. The wit and beauty of Caelius attracted this 'Palatine Medea,' and the banquets and revels at Rome and Baiae, in which Caelius and Clodia were the central figures, were the talk of Rome. At last they quarrelled, and many of the difficulties in which Caelius was subsequently involved could be traced directly to her, in one of which, a charge of murder, Cicero delivered in his defense the Or. pro Caelio.

It was natural that Cicero, when setting out for a distant province at so critical a moment, should choose in preference to all others

paravi qui sic omnia persequeretur, ut verear ne tibi nimium arguta haec sedulitas videatur; tametsi tu scio quam sis curiosus et quam omnibus peregrinantibus gratum sit minimarum quoque rerum, quae domi gerantur, fieri certiores. Tamen in hoc te deprecor ne meum hoc officium adrogantiae condemnes, quod hunc laborem alteri delegavi, non quin mihi suavissimum sit et occupato et ad litteras scribendas, ut tu nosti, pigerrimo tuae memoriae dare operam, sed ipsum volumen quod tibi misi facile, ut ego arbitror, me excusat. Nescio quovis oti esset non modo perscribere haec, sed omnino animadvertere; omnia enim sunt ibi s. c. edicta fabulae rumores. Quod exemplum si forte minus te delectarit, ne molestiam tibi cum impensa mea exhibeam fac me certiozem. Si quid in re p. maius actum erit quod 2

a man so familiar with the ins and outs of politics and society, to keep him informed of the course of events at Rome. The letters of Bk. 8, ad Fam. are not only of great interest on account of their intrinsic literary and historical value, but they offer sufficient material upon which to base a comparison between the epistolary style of Cicero and that of one of his contemporaries.

1. discedens: Caelius accompanied Cicero part of the way from Rome to Brundisium. See Cumarum tenus, 2 n. — diligentissime perscripturum: cf. Intr. 77. — paravi qui . . . persequeretur: Caelius had evidently employed a reporter to collect news, probably a certain Chrestus. Cf. Ep. XXXIII. 1. — peregrinantibus gratum: so eager for news were the Romans in the provinces that certain persons in Rome drove a thriving trade by sending them reports of the news of the day. In 59 B.C. their task was lightened by the law of Caesar requiring the doings in the senate and the courts and in the field, together with some events of a private character, to be published officially in the Acta diurna, which were copied and sent in great numbers to the provinces. Cf. Fam. 12. 23. 2 rerum urbanarum acta tibi mitti certo scio. Cf. also Att. 3. 15. 6; 6. 2. 6; Mommsen, St. R. III. 1017 f. — meum hoc officium, this method of keeping my promise. — volumen: the document of Chrestus apparently took the form of a diary of political happenings. Cf. senatus consulta edicta, etc., below. In 8. 11. 4 Caelius calls it a commentarium rerum urbanarum. — edicta: sc consulum et praetorum (Manutius). — delectarit: cf. Intr. 82.

isti operarii minus commode persequi possint, et quemadmodum actum sit et quae existimatio secuta quaeque de eo spes sit diligenter tibi perscribemus. Vt nunc est, nulla magnopere exspectatio est. Nam et illi rumores de comitiis Transpadanorum Cumarum tenus caluerunt; Romam cum venissem, ne tenuissimam quidem auditionem de ea re accepi; praeterea Marcellus, quod adhuc nihil rettulit de successione provinciarum Galliarum et in K. Iun., ut mihi ipse dixit, eam distulit relationem, sane quam eos sermones expressit qui de 3 eo tum fuerant, cum Romae nos essemus. Tu si Pompeium, ut volebas, offendisti, qui tibi visus sit et quam orationem habuerit tecum quamque ostenderit voluntatem — solet enim aliud sentire et loqui, neque tantum valere ingenio, ut non appareat quid cupiat —, fac

2. existimatio: in this one paragraph there are five substantives in -io. Cf. Infr. 75. — ut nunc est: a colloquial expression. Cf. Fam. 8. 4. 2 and Hor. Sat. 1. 9. 5. — nulla magnopere exspectatio, there is nothing in particular expected. Magnopere with an adj. (here nulla) is rare in classical usage. Cf. magnopere nemo, Ep. XI. 4. — de comitiis Transpadanorum: it was said that Caesar had ordered the Transpadanes to elect quattuorviri (Att. 5. 2. 3). By such action their towns would become municipia. The rumor anticipated Caesar's action by a year and a half. Cf. Marq. Röm. Staatsverwaltung, I. 62, n. 3. — Cumarum tenus: Caelius found the rumor common until he passed Cumae on his return, but on reaching Rome the report was heard nowhere. — caluerunt: on the metaphor, cf. Infr. 99. — de successione . . . Galliarum: M. Marcellus, the consul, proposed to bring in a bill appointing a successor to Caesar. — sane quam: this expression occurs five times in the 17 letters of Caelius, and but four times in the other 853 letters of Cicero's correspondence. Brix, in his note upon nimis quam cupio (Plaut. Capt. 102), says: 'nimis quam cupio, the fusion of two expressions, nimis cupio and quam cupio.' In a similar way sane quam, valde quam and perquam are to be explained. — eos sermones expressit, he has revived that gossip; reference is made to the dilatory course of Marcellus. If we read eos sermones repressit, he has put an end to the stories, as some prefer, the reference is to the proposal to displace Caesar; but cf. nuntii varios sermones excitarunt, Fam. 8. 10. 2.

3. Pompeium: Cicero met Pompey near Tarentum. Cf. Att. 5. 7.

mihī perscribas. Quod ad Caesarem, crebri et non 4 belli de eo rumores, sed susurratores dumtaxat veniunt. Alius equitem perdidisse, quod, opinor, certe factum est; alius septimam legionem vapulasse, ipsum apud Beluacos circumsederi interclusum ab reliquo exercitu. Neque adhuc certi quicquam est, neque haec incerta tamen vulgo iactantur, sed inter paucos quos tu nosti palam secreto narrantur; at Domitius, cum manus ad os apposuit. Te a. d. ix K. Iun. subrostrani (quod illorum capiti sit!) dissiparant perisse; urbe ac foro toto maximus rumor fuit te a Q. Pompeio in itinere occisum. Ego, qui scirem Q. Pompeium

4. quod ad Caesarem: sc. attinet; a favorite phrase with Caelius, who uses it five times in his letters, while de with abl. (cf. Intr. 91) occurs four times. — belli: cf. Ep. XXIV. 2 n. — susurratores: probably coined by Caelius. It is apparently found elsewhere only in the Vulgate translation of the Bible. Cf. also Intr. 74. — equitem: for equites. — opinor: this unusual parenthetical use of opinor, like that of puto (e.g. in theatrum Curionis Hortensius introit, puto, ut suum gaudium gauderemus, Fam. 8. 2. 1), belongs to the language of conversation. Cf. Intr. 86. — septimam . . . vapulasse: this rumor was apparently without foundation; cf. B. G. 8. 8. — vapulasse, has been whipped. For a similar metaphorical use, cf. Ep. XCIII. 1 verberavi te, etc. Vapulare and verberare are frequent in comedy, both in a literal and in a metaphorical sense. Cf. Plaut. Stich. 751; Pseud. 15. In a literal sense they are used of the flogging of slaves. Their use in other connections, therefore, carries with it, as here, a comic force. — apud

Beluacos: Caesar in 51 B.C. engaged in a war with these people; cf. B. G. 8. 6 ff. His position was in point of fact at this time a perilous one; cf. B. G. 8. 11 f. — quos tu nosti: sc. Caesar's enemies. — palam secreto: cf. Intr. 94. — Domitius: sc. haec narrat. On Domitius, cf. Ep. I. 3 n. — cum manus ad os apposuit: probably a proverbial expression signifying, 'with the greatest air of mystery'; or does it mean that he uses his hands for a trumpet — 'from the house-tops,' as we say? — subrostrani: the loungers about the rostra. The word occurs only here. Plautus calls the same class of people subbasilicani, Capt. 815. — quod illorum capiti sit, may it be the death of the rascals themselves. Perhaps capiti is the locative or dative of the end; cf. Draeg. Hist. Syn. I. 2 427. So Ter. Phor. 491 metuo lenonem nequid . . . (Ge.) suo suat capiti? See also Cic. Att. 8. 5. 1. For the phrase, cf. Otto, Die Sprichwörter der Römer, p. 75. — dissiparant: sc. sermones. — Q. Pompeio: a friend of Clodius and enemy of Cicero, living now Baulis embaeneticam facere et usque eo, ut ego miserer eius, esurire, non sum commotus, et hoc mendacio, si qua pericula tibi impenderent, ut defungeremur optavi. Plancus quidem tuus Ravennaest, et magno congiario donatus a Caesare nec beatus nec bene instructus est. Tui politici libri omnibus videntur.

XXXII. (Fam. 13. 1.)

M. CICERO S. D. C. MEMMIO.

1 Etsi non satis mihi constiterat cum aliquane animi mei molestia an potius libenter te Athenis visurus in exile. — embaeneticam: the word which Caelius used is hopelessly lost. The meaning is that Q. Pompeius has been reduced to such a degree that he has been obliged to take up with some mean employment. See Crit. Append. — defungeremur: sc. iis periculis. — Plancus tuus, your friend Plancus. Cf. noster, Ep. VII. 4 n. T. Munatius Plancus, an enemy of Cicero, also living in banishment. — Ravennaest: the MSS. of Cicero's Letters offer several undoubted instances of crasis, e.g. Ravennaest (= Ravennae est) here, neglegentiaest (Fam. 8. 3. 1), commentariost (Fam. 8. 11. 4), stomachost (Fam. 8. 13. 2). All the instances cited here are in the letters of Caelius, and harmonize perfectly with the Plautine tone of his correspondence. Cf. also benest (Balbus, Att. 9. 7 B. 1 and Fam. 14. 15 = Ep. LVIII.). — tui politici libri omnibus videntur, your work on civil government is well received on all sides. The de Re Publica is meant. Cf. Ep. XXIII.

XXXII. Athens, between June 25 and July 6, 51 B.C. Gaius

Memmius was praetor in 58 B.C., and in 57 went out as governor of Bithynia, where the poets Catullus and Helvius Cinna were members of his staff (cf. Cat. ec. 10 and 28, and for a sketch of Memmius as an orator, Cic. Brut. 247.) He belonged at that time to the party of the Optimates, but later he became a democrat, and in 54 was supported by Caesar for the consulship, but having made a disgraceful political bargain with the consuls of that year (Att. 4. 15. 7), was banished. At this time he was living in Athens, and having become the owner of the garden and of the ruins of the house which had belonged to Epicurus, he proposed to pull the house down in order to put up a dwelling of his own. The Epicureans, greatly distressed, applied to Cicero through Atticus to intercede with Memmius in their behalf. Cicero, although not on the best of terms with Memmius, acceded to their request. Nothing is known of the result of his intercession.

As an example of Cicero's skill in handling a delicate subject, this essem, quod iniuria quam accepisti dolore me adficeret, sapientia tua qua fers iniuriam laetitia, tamen vidisse te mallet. Nam quod est molestiae, non sane multo levius est, cum te non video, quod esse potuit voluptatis certe, si vidissem te, plus fuisset. Itaque non dubitabo dare operam ut te videam, cum id satis commode facere poterō. Interea quod per litteras et agi tecum et, ut arbitror, confici potest, agam. Nunc ² a te illud primum rogabo ne quid invitus mea causa facias, sed id quod mea intelleges multum, tua nullam in partem interesse, ita mihi des, si tibi, ut id libenter facias, ante persuaseris. Cum Patrone Epicurio mihi omnia sunt, nisi quod in philosophia vehementer ab eo dissentio. Sed et initio Romae, cum te quoque et tuos omnes observabat, me coluit in primis et nuper, cum letter may be compared with the one to Luceius (Ep. XVIII.). The case was beset with difficulties. Memmius had been banished, unjustly as he thought, at the moment when he was suing for the consulship. He was now passing a disappointed life in exile, and was so far estranged from Cicero that he had gone to Mytilene to avoid him. He had been annoyed by the importunity of the Epicureans, for whom at the best he had apparently great contempt, in spite of the fact that Lucretius had dedicated to him the de Rerum Natura, and his selfish nature brooked no interference with his plans. Finally, Patro, the leader of the Epicurean school, was personally distasteful to him.

Cicero's itinerary from Minturnae to Athens was as follows: Cumae, Beneventum, May 11; Venusia, May 14; Tarentum, May 18; Brundisium, May 22; Actium, June 14;

Athens, June 25. The longest stop on the way was a halt of three weeks at Brundisium.

1. non satis, etc.: before Cicero reached Athens. — te . . . visurus essem: Memmius had withdrawn to Mitylene, to avoid meeting Cicero (Att. 5. 11. 6), because the latter had been unwilling to defend him against the charge of ambitus. — iniuria: although the banishment of Memmius was deserved, technically it was iniuria, because, as Memmius had turned state's evidence, and had brought a charge of ambitus against Cn. Domitius Calvinus (Q. fr. 3. 2. 3), he might have reasonably expected exemption from punishment.

2. cum Patrone . . . sunt, Patro and I are quite devoted to one another. Patro was at the head of the Epicurean school in Athens. Cicero was an adherent of the Academy, and had little in common with the Epicureans. — ea quae voluit de suis commodis et praemiis consecutus est, meme habuit suorum defensorum et amicorum fere principem, et iam a Phaedro, qui nobis, cum pueri essemus, ante quam Philonem cognovimus, valde ut philosophus, postea tamen ut vir bonus et suavis et officiosus probabatur, traditus mihi commendatusque 3 est. Is igitur Patro cum ad me Romam litteras misisset, uti te sibi placarem peteremque ut nescio quid illud Epicuri parietinarum sibi concederes, nihil scripsi ad te ob eam rem, quod aedificationis tuae consilium commendatione mea nolebam impediri; idem, ut veni Athenas, cum idem ad te scriberem rogasset, ob eam causam impetravit, quod te abiecisse illam aedificatio- 4 nem constabat inter omnes amicos tuos. Quod si ita est et si iam tua plane nihil interest, velim, si qua offensiuncula facta est animi tui perversitate aliquorum — novi enim gentem illam —, des te ad lenitatem, vel propter summam humanitatem, vel etiam honoris mei causa. Equidem, si quid ipse sentiam quaeris, nec cur ille tantopere contendat video nec cur tu repugnes, nisi de suis commodis et praemiis: possibly fees due him from his students, which Cicero helped him to collect. — meme: the colloquial double form for the acc.; cf. Infr. 87 b and the double form tete, Plaut. Epid. 82, Ter. Ad. 33. — Phaedro: the Epicurean Phaedrus was one of Cicero's first teachers in philosophy. — Philonem: until he came to Rome as a fugitive in 88 B.C., Philo had been the leader of the New Academy at Athens. His teachings made a deep impression upon Cicero, and determined his philosophical attitude.

3. uti te sibi placarem: Memmius and Patro had not been on good terms for some unknown reason; cf. Att. 5. 11. 6. — illud . . . parietinarum: with a minimizing force; cf. hoc litterarum, Ep. XXXIII. 3 n. — aedificationem: for aedificandi consilium (Manutius).

4. offensiuncula: cf. pulchellus, Ep. V. 10 n. — nisi: Brix, on Plaut. Trin. 233, says: 'nisi has after negative sentences (i.e. in old Latin) the force of a weak adversative particle, however, but.' This archaic force is retained in the passage before us; cf. nihil mihi gratius facere potes, nisi tamen id erit mihi gratissimum, si quae tibi mandavi confeceris, Att. 5. 14. 3.

tamen multo minus tibi concedi potest quam illi laborare sine causa. Quamquam Patronis et orationem et causam tibi cognitam esse certo scio: honorem officium, testamentorum ius, Epicuri auctoritatem, Phaedri obstestationem, sedem domicilium vestigia summorum hominum sibi tuenda esse dicit. Totam hominis vitam rationemque quam sequitur in philosophia derideamus licet, si hanc eius contentionem volumus reprehendere; sed mehercules, quoniam illi ceterisque quos illa delectant non valde inimici sumus, nescio an ignoscendum sit huic, si tantopere laborat; in quo etiamsi peccat, magis ineptiis quam improbitate peccat. Sed 5 ne plura — dicendum enim aliquando est —, Pomponium Atticum sic amo ut alterum fratrem. Nihil est illo mihi nec carius nec iucundiùs. Is (non quo sit ex istis; est enim omni liberali doctrina politissimus, sed valde diligit Patronem, valde Phaedrum amavit) sic a me hoc contendit, homo minime ambitiosus, minime in rogando molestus, ut nihil umquam magis, nec dubitat quin ego a te nutu hoc consequi possem, etiamsi aedificaturus esses. Nunc vero si audierit te aedificationem deposuisse neque tamen me a te impetrasse, non te in me inliberalem, sed me in se neglegentem putabit. Quamobrem peto a te ut scribas ad tuos posse tua voluntate decretum illud Areopagitarum, quem ὑπομνηματι-

— honorem officium: his reputation and his duty as leader of the Epicurean sect.—testamentorum ius: Epicurus had bequeathed his garden and house to his disciples.—Phaedri obstestationem: Phaedrus had probably enjoined upon his successor Patro the necessity of recovering the property.

5. nihil: cf. Ep. XXV. 4 n. —

nec . . . nec introduce distinct phases of the general thought, and so do not destroy the negation. — non quo sit ex istis: Atticus was an Epicurean. — diligit . . . amavit: Tyrrell cites Cic. Ep. ad Brut. 1. 1. 1 Clodius trib. pleb. designatus valde me diligit, vel ut ἐμφατικώτερον dicam, valde me amat. — decretum illud: the right of Mem-

6 μὲν illi vocant, tolli. Sed redeo ad prima : prius velim tibi persuadeas ut hoc mea causa libenter facias quam ut facias ; sic tamen habeto, si feceris quod rogo, fore mihi gratissimum. Vale.

XXXIII. (Fam. 2. 8.)

M. CICERO PROCOS. S. D. M. CAELIO.

1 Quid? tu me hoc tibi mandasse existimas, ut mihi gladiatorum compositiones, ut vadimonia dilata, ut Chresti compilationem mitteres et ea quae nobis, cum Romae sumus, narrare nemo audeat? Vide quantum tibi meo iudicio tribuam — nec mercule iniuria ; πολιτικώτερον enim te adhuc neminem cognovi — : ne illa quidem curo mihi scribas quae maximis in rebus rei publicae geruntur cotidie, nisi quid ad me ipsum pertinebit. Scribent alii, multi nuntiabunt, perferet multa mius to remove the ruins of the house of Epicurus rested upon a decree of the Areopagus.

6. sic habeto: cf. Ep. XXVI. 1 n.

XXXIII. Athens, July 6, 51 B.C. This is Cicero's reply to the chronicle of events at Rome, which the agent of Caelius had prepared with such care (Ep. XXXI. 1).

1. gladiatorum compositiones: as we might say 'circus posters.' Public announcement was made upon the walls of the number of combatants, the date of the contests, etc. Such an announcement found upon the walls of Pompeii runs as follows: [C]N·ALLEI·NIGIDI·MAI·QVINQ[VEN·N]ALIS]·GL[ADIATORVM]·PAR[IA]·XXX·ET·EOR[VM]·SVPP[OSITICI]·PVGNA·

BVNT]·POMPEIIS·VIII·VII·VI·K·DEC. . . . VEN[ATIO]·ERIT' (C. I. L. IV. 1179).— Chresti compilationem, the pilfering of Chrestus, i.e. the 'hotch potch' which Chrestus, the agent of Caelius, has taken indiscriminately from the journals of the senate, the records of the courts, and the placards of the games. Perhaps, however, Chrestus was a thief whose exploits formed one of the items in the diary. Cicero really desires to know, cum formam rei publicae viderit, quale aedificium futurum sit. — narrare nemo audeat: for Cicero's distaste for gladiatorial contests, cf. Ep. XIX. introd. note. — πολιτικώτερον . . . cognovi: cf. Ep. XXXI. introd. note. — abs te: cf. Ep. I. 4 n.

etiam ipse rumor. Quare ego nec praeterita nec praesentia abs te, sed, ut ab homine longe in posterum prospiciente, futura exspecto, ut ex tuis litteris cum formam rei publicae viderim, quale aedificium futurum sit scire possim. Neque tamen adhuc habeo quod te ² accusem; neque enim fuit quod tu plus providere posses quam quis nostrum, in primisque ego, qui cum Pompeio complures dies nullis in aliis nisi de re publica sermonibus versatus sum; quae nec possunt scribi nec scribenda sunt. Tantum habeto, civem egregium esse Pompeium et ad omnia, quae providenda sunt in re publica, et animo et consilio paratum. Quare da te homini; complectetur, mihi crede. Iam idem illi et boni et mali cives videntur qui nobis videri solent. Ego cum Athenis decem ipsos dies fuissem multum- ³ que mecum Gallus noster Caninius, proficiscebar inde pridie Nonas Quinctiles, cum hoc ad te litterarum dedi. Tibi cum omnia mea commendatissima esse cupio, tum nihil magis quam ne tempus nobis provinciae prorogetur; in eo mihi sunt omnia. Quod quando et quomodo et per quos agendum sit tu optime constitues.

2. cum Pompeio: cf. Ep. XXXI. 3 n. — tantum habeto: cf. Ep. XXVI. 1 n. — quare . . . crede: these words form a hexameter verse, which may be accidental, as Böckel thinks, but it has the appearance of being a quotation, and is ascribed by L. Müller (p. 160) to Lucilius. For similar expressions, cf. Att. 7. 12. 3; da te hodie mihi, Ter. Ad. 838. — mihi crede: cf. Ep. XXVII. 1 n. — illi: i.e. Pompeio.

3. ipsos, exactly; as often with numerals. Cf. Att. 3. 21; 6. 8. 4. — fuissem, proficiscebar, dedi: all the events mentioned here would belong to the past when the letter reached Caelius; cf. Intr. 84 c. — Gallus Caninius: cf. Ep. XIX. 4 n. — hoc litterarum, this apology for a letter. Reference is apparently made not so much to the brevity of the letter as to its trivial character. Cf. ipsum volumen, Ep. XXXI. 1.

XXXIV. (Fam. 15. 4.)

M. CICERO IMP. S. D. M. CATONI.

1 Summa tua auctoritas fecit meumque perpetuum de tua singulari virtute iudicium, ut magni mea interesse putarem et res eas quas gessissem tibi notas esse, et non ignorari a te qua aequitate et continentia tuerer socios provinciamque administrarem. Iis enim a te cognitis arbitrabar facilius me tibi quae vellem proba-2 turum. Cum in provinciam pr. K. Sext. venissem et propter anni tempus ad exercitum mihi confestim esse eundum viderem, biduum Laodiceae fui, deinde Apameae quadriduum, triduum Synnadis, totidem dies Philomeli. Quibus in oppidis cum magni conventus fuissent, multas civitates acerbissimis tributis et gravissimis

XXXIV. Cilicia, close of 51 or early part of 50 B.C. Cicero, having completed a successful campaign against the independent mountaineers of his province, wrote this letter to secure Cato's support to his request for a supplicatio. Understanding the blunt and frank nature of his correspondent, he affects a similar style, and presents the facts without comment, but with much skill in bringing his best achievements into the foreground, and in making it appear that the retreat of the Parthians was due to their dread of his prowess. The letter presents a side of Cicero's life which is brought out nowhere else. It has also many points of resemblance to Caesar's Commentaries on the Gallic War. The first part of it is essentially a military report without embellishment, addressed, it is true, to Cato, but to all intents and purposes an 'open letter.' So Caesar's Commentaries are a soldier's diary, intended for the eye of the Roman people. In these two documents, therefore, a comparison may fairly be made between the styles of the two men. Cicero's campaign is also described at some length in Att. 5. 20; Fam. 2. 10; and in two letters to the senate, Fam. 15. 1 and 2.

For Cato's reply to this letter, cf. Ep. XXXVII.

2. Laodiceae: for Cicero's itinerary to Athens, cf. Epp. XXX, XXXII., introd. notes. He set out from the Piraeus July 6, reached Ceos July 8, Gyarus July 9, Syrus July 10, Delos July 11, Ephesus July 22, and, after a halt of 4 days in that city, Tralles July 27, and Laodicea July 31. Cf. Att. 5. 12. 1; 5. 13. 1; Fam. 3. 5. 1; Att. 5. 15. 1. — acerbissimis tributis: Cicero's letters from Cilicia show the nature of these demands: e.g. the towns in Cilicia, already hope usuris et falso aere alieno liberavi. Cumque ante adventum meum seditione quadam exercitus esset dissipatus, quinque cohortes sine legato, sine tribuno militum, denique etiam sine centurione ullo, apud Philomelium consedisissent, reliquus exercitus esset in Lycaonia, M. Anneio legato imperavi ut eas quinque cohortes ad reliquum exercitum duceret, coactoque in unum locum exercitu castra in Lycaonia apud Iconium faceret. Quod cum ab illo diligenter esset actum, ego in 3 castra a. d. VII K. Sept. veni, cum interea superioribus diebus ex s. c. et evocatorum firmam manum et equitatum sane idoneum et populorum liberorum regumque sociorum auxilia voluntaria comparavissem. Interim cum exercitu lustrato iter in Ciliciam facere coepissem lessly in debt, were required at great expense to send envoys to Rome to thank the senate for the beneficent government of the monster Appius (Fam. 3. 8. 2 f). Caelius had the hardihood to ask Cicero to levy a tax upon the provincials to pay for the games which he was to give at Rome as a candidate for the aedileship (Ep. XXXV. 21). — gravissimis usuris: cf. Intr. 23. — falso aere alieno, from a debt fraudulently charged against them. Cicero relates in Att. 5. 21. 12 a flagrant instance of the kind, where a money-lender, Scaptius by name, a financial agent of M. Brutus (Att. 5. 21. 10), tried to extort 200 talents from the people of Salamis in Cyprus, who owed him only 106. — M. Anneio legato: cf. 8 n. — apud Iconium: apud with the acc. for the locative or in with the abl. is archaic; cf. e.g. apud aedem Duclonai in the senatus consultum de Bacchanalibus. The expression is here used as a set form of speech for a military report; cf. apud Issum, Fam. 2. 10. 3. It is also preserved with certain words in colloquial Latin. In this case, as in many others, colloquial Latin and official Latin preserved forms of expression after they had disappeared elsewhere, as colloquial and official (especially legal) English preserve certain otherwise obsolete phrases. Silver Latin, straining after novelties, brought this, as well as many other archaisms, into use again; cf. Nipperdey on Tac. Ann. 1. 5; Rönsch, Itala u. Vulgata, 391. See also ut ne, Ep. XXX. 1 n.

3. a. d. VII K. Sept.: Aug 24. Under the pre-Julian calendar August had 29 days. — evocatorum: veterans who had served their time, but might be called upon for volunteer service, enjoying therein certain privileges. — auxilia: usually light-armed troops. — exercitu lustrato: Cicero had 14,000 men; cf. Att. 5. 18. 2; 6.

K. Sept., legati a rege Commageno ad me missi pertumultuose, neque tamen non vere, Parthos in Syriam
 4 transisse nuntiaverunt. Quo audito vehementer sum commotus cum de Syria, tum de mea provincia, de reliqua denique Asia. Itaque exercitum mihi ducendum per Cappadociae regionem eam, quae Ciliciam attingeret, putavi. Nam si me in Ciliciam demissem, Ciliciam quidem ipsam propter montis Amani naturam facile tenuissem; duo sunt enim aditus in Ciliciam ex Syria, quorum uterque parvis praesidiis propter angustias intercludi potest, nec est quicquam Cilicia contra Syriam munitius. Sed me Cappadocia movebat, quae patet a Syria regesque habet finitimos, qui etiamsi sunt clam amici nobis, tamen aperte Parthis inimici esse non audent. Itaque in Cappadocia extrema non longe a Tauro apud oppidum Cybistra castra feci, ut et Ciliciam tuerer et Cappadociam tenens nova finitimo-
 5 rum consilia impedirem. Interea in hoc tanto motu tantaque exspectatione maximi belli rex Deiotarus, cui non sine causa plurimum semper et meo et tuo et senatus iudicio tributum est, vir cum benevolentia et fide erga populum R. singulari, tum praesentia magni-

1. 14. — rege Commageno: Antiochus, king of Commagene, a district on the northern border of Syria.—pertumultuose: although the regular superlative form tumultuosissime is used in his orations, e.g. in Verr. ii. 2. 37, here Cicero prefers the colloquial form with per-. Similarly in the Letters Cicero uses the intensive forms peracer, peramans, and perlubens, while in his other writings only the regular superlative forms are used to indicate the possession of a quality in a very high degree. Cf.

also Intr. 77. — neque non vere, and not without justification.

4. nec . . . quicquam: cf. similar use of nihil for nemo, Ep. XXV. 4. — apud oppidum: cf. apud Iconium, 2 n. — nova finitimorum consilia: the intentions of Artavasdes, the king of Armenia, were a matter of doubt; cf. Fam. 15. 2. 2.

5. rex Deiotarus: Cicero defended him in 45 B.C. against the charge of planning to murder Caesar. — fide, etc.: cf. Cic. Phil. 11. 34 quid de Cn. Pompeio lo- tudine et animi et consili, legatos ad me misit, se cum omnibus suis copiis in mea castra esse venturum. Cuius ego studio officioque commotus egi ei per litteras gratias, idque ut maturaret hortatus sum. Cum autem 6 ad Cybistra propter rationem belli quinque dies essem moratus, regem Ariobarzanem, cuius salutem a senatu te auctore commendatam habebam, praesentibus insidiis necopinantem liberavi, neque solum ei saluti fui, sed etiam curavi ut cum auctoritate regnaret. Metram et eum quem tu mihi diligenter commendaras, Athenaeum, importunitate Athenaidis exsilio multatos, in maxima apud regem auctoritate gratiaque constitui, cumque magnum bellum in Cappadocia concitaretur, si sacerdos armis se, quod facturus putabatur, defenderet, adulescens et equitatu et peditatu et pecunia paratus et totus iis qui novari aliquid volebant, perfeci ut e regno ille discederet rexque sine tumultu ac sine armis omni auctoritate aulae communita regnum cum dignitate obtineret. Interea cognovi multorum litteris 7 quar? qui unum Deiotarum in toto orbe terrarum ex animo amicum vereque benevolum, unum fidem populo Romano iudicavit. — se . . . venturum: upon the omission of the verb of saying, cf. Intr. 95.

6. cuius salutem, etc.: the disclosure in this letter of the relations which existed between Rome and Ariobarzanes, throws a sidelight upon the attitude which the Roman Republic assumed toward her provinces. Ariobarzanes, being harassed by plots within and wars without his kingdom, sought protection from Rome, and became thereby deeply involved in debt to Pompey and M. Brutus (cf. Att. 6. 1. 3). Knowing that the deposition of Ariobarzanes would mean the loss of their money, Pompey and Brutus secured a decree of the senate through the influence of Cato, the uncle of Brutus (te auctore), to the effect that Cicero should maintain him upon his throne. — praesentibus insidiis: Athenais, the mother of Ariobarzanes, had plotted with Archelaus, the priest of the temple of Bellona at Comana, to depose her son. In pursuance of their plans, Metras and Athenaeus, the ministers of the king, had been banished; cf. also Fam. 15. 2. 4, 8. — adulescens: in apposition with sacerdos. — et totus iis: cf. tota tibi est puella, Tib. 4. 6. 3.

atque nuntiis magnas Parthorum copias et Arabum ad oppidum Antiocheam accessisse magnumque eorum equitatum, qui in Ciliciam transisset, ab equitum meorum turmis et a cohorte praetoria, quae erat Epiphaneae praesidi causa, occidione occisum. Quare, cum viderem a Cappadocia Parthorum copias aversas non longe a finibus esse Ciliciae, quam potui maximis itineribus ad Amanum exercitum duxi. Quo ut veni, hostem ab Antiochea recessisse, Bibulum Antiocheae esse cognovi. Deiotarum confestim iam ad me venientem cum magno et firmo equitatu et peditatu et cum omnibus suis copiis certiolem feci non videri esse causam cur abesset a regno, meque ad eum, si quid novi forte accidisset, statim litteras nuntiosque missurum esse. Cumque eo animo venissem ut utrique provinciae, si ita tempus ferret, subvenirem, tum id quod iam ante statueram vehementer interesse utriusque provinciae, pacare perusal of the letter, indeed, fails to reveal the fact that any one else than Cicero was acting against the Parthians. In reality the scene of the struggle lay entirely outside of Cicero's province. The Parthians, emboldened by the defeat of Crassus, began just before this time to threaten Syria. The proquaestor C. Cassius checked their advance upon Antioch, defeated them in a pitched battle, and forced them to retreat in disorder. In a similar vein Cicero writes to Atticus: rumore adventus nostri et Cassio, qui Antiochia tenebatur, animus accessit et Parthis timor iniectus est. Itaque eos cedentes ab oppido Cassius insecutus rem bene gessit, Att. 5. 20. 3. — Bibulum: Bibulus, who had been consul in 59 B.C., was proconsul of Syria.

7. occidione occisum: the figura etymologica, i.e. the bringing together of two words from the same stem, which are closely connected logically and grammatically, was a favorite device in colloquial Latin. Cf. e.g. from Plaut. Pseud.: miser miser, 13; ludo ludere, 24; cursim currere, 358; condimentis condire, 820. The same figure is common in the Letters, e.g. solacio consolamur, Att. 4. 6. 1; facile facies, Fam. 3. 9. 1; amavi amorem tuum, Ep. LXI. 1; ut suum gaudium gauderemus, Cael., Fam. 8. 2. 1. See also copias occidione occiderit, Phil. 14. 36. — quo . . . recessisse: the writer skilfully conveys the impression that the retreat of the Parthians was the result of his own action. Cf. also the first part of this section. A

Amanum et perpetuum hostem ex eo monte tollere, agere perrexi. Cumque me discedere ab eo monte simulassem et alias partis Ciliciae petere, abessemque ab Amano iter unius diei et castra apud Epiphaneam fecissem, a. d. IIII Id. Oct., cum advesperasceret, expedito exercitu ita noctu iter feci ut a. d. III Id. Oct., cum lucisceret, in Amanum ascenderem, distributisque cohortibus et auxiliis, cum aliis Quintus frater legatus mecum simul, aliis C. Pomptinus legatus, reliquis M. Anneius et L. Tullius legati praecessent, plerosque necopinantis oppressimus, qui occisi captique sunt, interclusi fuga. Eranam autem, quae fuit non vici instar, sed urbis, quod erat Amani caput, itemque Sepyram et Commorim, acriter et diu repugnantibus Pomptino illam partem Amani tenenti, ex antelucano tempore usque ad horam diei x, magna multitudine hostium occisa cepimus, castellaque vi capta complura incendimus. His rebus ita gestis castra in radicibus 9 Amani habuimus apud Aras Alexandri quadriduum, et in reliquiis Amani delendis agrisque vastandis, quae pars eius montis meae provinciae est, id tempus omne consumpsimus. Confectis his rebus ad oppidum Eleu- 10 therocilicum Pindenissum exercitum adduxi, quod cum esset altissimo et munitissimo loco, ab iisque incoletur qui ne regibus quidem umquam paruissent, cum et fugitivos reciperent et Parthorum adventum acerrime exspectarent, ad existimationem imperi pertinere arbi-

8. apud Epiphaneam: cf. apud Iconium, 2 n. — Quintus . . . legati: usually there was one legatus to a legion, but Cicero had four for his two legions. — repugnantibus: sc. iis. The omission of the subject is so remarkable that Baiter and Wesenberg would read repugnantes or insert hostibus.

9. Aras Alexandri: the place took its name from the three altars which Alexander had consecrated to Jupiter, Hercules, and Minerva; cf. Q. Curt. 3. 33.

tratus sum comprimere eorum audaciam, quo facilius etiam ceterorum animi, qui alieni essent ab imperio nostro, frangerentur. Vallo et fossa circumdedi; sex castellis castrisque maximis saepsi; aggere viniis turribus oppugnavi, ususque tormentis multis, multis sagittariis magno labore meo, sine ulla molestia sumpstive sociorum septimo quinquagesimo die rem confeci, ut omnibus partibus urbis disturbatis aut incensis compulsi in potestatem meam pervenirent. His erant finitimi pari scelere et audacia Tebarani; ab iis Pindenisso capto obsides accepti; exercitum in hiberna dimisi; Quintum fratrem negotio praeposui ut in vicis aut captis aut male pacatis exercitus conlocaretur.

11 Nunc velim sic tibi persuadeas, si de iis rebus ad senatum relatum sit, me existimaturum summam mihi laudem tributam, si tu honorem meum sententia tua comprobabis, idque, etsi talibus de rebus gravissimos homines et rogare solere et rogari scio, tamen admonendum potius te a me quam rogandum puto. Tu es enim is qui me tuis sententiis saepissime ornasti, qui oratione, qui praedicatione, qui summis laudibus in senatu, in contionibus ad caelum extulisti, cuius ego semper tanta esse verborum pondera putavi ut uno verbo tuo cum mea laude coniuncto omnia adsequi me

10. viniis: a parallel form for vineis. — quinquagesimo: cf. quadragesimum, Ep. XC. 1 n. — pari scelere: their crime would seem to have been their independence. No other charge is made against them. — Pindenisso capto: Cicero understands how his metropolitan friends will take the news of his victory over these petty mountaineers, whose name, even, was not known to the average

Roman; cf. Att. 5. 20. 1 Saturnalibus mane se mihi Pindenissitae dediderunt septimo et quinquagesimo die postquam oppugnare eos coepimus. 'Qui, malum! isti Pindenissitae, qui sunt?' inquires, 'nomen audivi numquam.' Quid ego faciam? num potui Ciliciam Aetoliam aut Macedoniam reddere?

11. a me: for mihī, to secure the contrast with te. — ad caelum extulisti: it was Cato who be-arbitrarer; te denique memini, cum cuidam clarissimo atque optimo viro supplicationem non decerneres, dicere te decreturum, si referretur ob eas res quas is consul in urbe gessisset; tu idem mihi supplicationem decrevistis togato, non, ut multis, re p. bene gesta, sed, ut nemini, re p. conservata. Mitto quod invidiam, quod ¹²pericula, quod omnis meas tempestates et subieris et multo etiam magis, si per me licuisset, subire paratissimus fueris, quod denique inimicum meum tuum inimicum putaris, cuius etiam interitum, cum facile intellegerem mihi quantum tribueres, Milonis causa in senatu defendenda adprobaris. A me autem haec sunt profecta quae non ego in benefici loco pono, sed in veri testimoni atque iudici, ut praestantissimas tuas virtutes non tacitus admirarer — quis enim id non facit? — sed in omnibus orationibus, sententiis dicendis, causis agendis, omnibus scriptis, Graecis Latinis, omni denique varietate litterarum mearum te non modo iis quos vidissemus, sed iis de quibus audissemus, omnibus anteferrem. Quaeres fortasse quid sit quod ego hoc ¹³

stowed upon Cicero the title 'pater patriae' in 63 B.C. — cuidam clarissimo: P. Cornelius Lentulus Spinther, one of Cicero's predecessors in Cilicia. He had secured a triumph in 51 B.C.; cf. Att. 5. 21. 4. — decerneres: a shorter expression for decernendam censes. — ob eas res: his efforts to secure Cicero's recall from banishment in 57 B.C. — non ut multis, etc.: cf. in Cat. 4. 20.

12. inimicum meum: with special reference to Clodius. — Milonis causa, etc.: cf. Ascon. in Mil. p. 53 fuerunt qui crederent M. Catonis sententia eum esse abso- lutum, nam . . . et studebat in petitione consulatus Miloni et reo adfuerat. — orationibus: e.g. pro Mur. 54 M. Cato, homo in omni virtute excellens; pro Sest. 12 M. Cato, fortissimus atque optimus civis; pro Mur. 61 in M. Catone, iudices, haec bona quae videmus divina et egregia, ipsius scitote esse propria. While respecting the uprightness of Cato, Cicero considered him lacking in tact and judgment; cf. e.g. Att. 1. 18. 7 curat (rem publicam) constantia magis et integritate . . . quam consilio aut ingenio Cato. — Graecis Latinis: cf. Intr. 94.

nescio quid gratulationis et honoris a senatu tanti aestimem. Agam iam tecum familiariter, ut est et studiis et officiis nostris mutuis et summa amicitia dignum et necessitudine etiam paterna. Si quisquam fuit umquam remotus et natura et magis etiam, ut mihi quidem sentire videor, ratione atque doctrina ab inani laude et sermonibus vulgi, ego profecto is sum. Testis est consulatus meus, in quo, sicut in reliqua vita, fateor ea me studiose secutum ex quibus vera gloria nasci posset, ipsam quidem gloriam per se numquam putavi expetendam. Itaque et provinciam ornatam et spem non dubiam triumphi neglexi, sacerdotium denique, cum, quemadmodum te existimare arbitrator, non difficillime consequi possem, non appetivi; idem post iniuriam acceptam quam tu rei p. calamitatem semper appellas, meam non modo non calamitatem, sed etiam gloriam, studui quam ornatissima senatus populique R. de me iudicia intercedere. Itaque et augur postea fieri volui quod antea neglexeram, et eum honorem qui a senatu tribui rebus bellicis solet, neglectum a me olim, nunc 14 mihi expetendum puto. Huic meae voluntati, in qua

13. honoris a senatu: the connection of two substantives by a preposition is especially frequent in the case of a; cf. Antibarbarus, I. p. 38. For the construction in general, see Reisig-Schmalz, Lat. Syn. note 512. — provinciam ornatam: cf. de ornandis praetoribus, Ep. XVI. 1 n. Macedonia fell to Cicero by lot, and Cisalpine Gaul to C. Antonius. To secure the support of Antonius, Cicero exchanged provinces with him, and afterward declined Cisalpine Gaul. For another statement of his feelings with reference to a province, cf. contra voluntatem, Ep. XXIX. 1 n.—sacerdotium: the augurate. But Cicero writes to Atticus, 59 B.C.: de istis rebus exspecto tuas litteras . . . cuinam auguratus deferatur, quo quidem uno ego ab istis capi possum, Att. 2. 5. 2. He was elected a member of the college of augurs in 53 B.C.—iniuriam: one of Cicero's euphemisms for exsilium. — meam calamitatem: sc. his exile.—eum honorem qui . . . solet: the nearest approach to a definite statement of his wish for a supplicatio. Such a statement he purposely avoids.

inest aliqua vis desiderii ad sanandum vulnus iniuriae, ut faveas adiutorque sis, quod paulo ante me negaram rogaturum, vehementer te rogo, sed ita, si non ieiunum hoc nescio quid quod ego gessi et contemnendum videbitur, sed tale atque tantum ut multi nequaquam paribus rebus honores summos a senatu consecuti sint. Equidem etiam illud mihi animum advertisse videor — scis enim quam attente te audire soleam — te non tam res gestas quam mores, instituta, atque vitam imperatorum spectare solere in habendis aut non habendis honoribus. Quod si in mea causa considerabis, reperies me exercitu imbecillo contra metum maximi belli firmissimum praesidium habuisse aequitatem et continentiam. His ego subsidiis ea sum consecutus quae nullis legionibus consequi potuissem, ut ex alienissimis sociis amicissimos, ex infidelissimis firmissimos redderem, animosque novarum rerum expectatione suspensos ad veteris imperi benevolentiam traducerem. Sed nimis haec multa de me, praesertim ad te, a quo uno omnium sociorum querelae audiuntur. Cognosces ex iis qui meis institutis se recreatos putant. Cumque omnes uno prope consensu de me apud te ea quae mihi optatissima sunt praedicabunt, tum duae maximae clientelae tuae, Cyprus insula et Cappadociae regnum, tecum de me loquentur; puto etiam regem Deiotarum

14. paulo ante: in 11. — hoc nescio quid: a phrase of modesty; cf. 13. — mores, instituta, atque vitam: when in Cicero three or more substantives follow one another, no connective is used, or a connective is used with each pair of substantives, or the members of the last pair only are connected,

in which case que is commonly employed.

15. Cyprus insula: Cyprus had been taken from the Ptolemies by Cato in 58 B.C., and henceforth he was its patronus. It was part of Cicero's province. — Cappadociae regnum: cf. cuius salutem, etc., 6. For Cicero's services to qui uni tibi est maxime necessarius. Quae si etiam maiora sunt, et in omnibus saeculis pauciores viri reperti sunt qui suas cupiditates quam qui hostium copias vincerent, est profecto tuum, cum ad res bellicas haec quae rariora et difficiliora sunt genera virtutis adiunxeris, ipsas etiam illas res gestas iustiores esse et 16 maiores putare. Extremum illud est, ut quasi diffidens rogationi meae philosophiam ad te adlegem, qua nec mihi carior ulla unquam res in vita fuit nec hominum generi maius a diis munus ullum est datum. Haec igitur quae mihi tecum communis est societas studiorum atque artium nostrarum, quibus a pueritia dediti ac devincti soli propemodum nos philosophiam veram illam et antiquam, quae quibusdam oti esse ac desidiaevideatur, in forum atque in rem p. atque in ipsam aciem paene deduximus, tecum agit de mea laude, cui negari a Catone fas esse non puto. Quamobrem tibi sic persuadeas velim: si mihi tua sententia tributus honos ex meis litteris fuerit, me sic existimaturum, cum auctoritate tua, tum benevolentia erga me mihi, quod maxime cupierim, contigisse.

Ariobarzanes, cf. 6; for his services to Cyprus, cf. falso, 2 n.

16. philosophiam veram: Cicero, in so far as ethics was concerned, was, like Cato, a Stoic.—quae . . . videtur: the innate prejudice of the Romans against what Cicero elsewhere (Att. 2. 16. 3) calls ὁ θεωρητικὸς βίος was very strong.—a Catone: for a similar effective use of the proper noun for the pronoun, cf. Fam. 2. 4. 1 quid est quod possit graviter a Cicerone scribi ad Curionem (instead of a me scribi ad te)?—ex meis litteris: i.e. on the basis of the facts stated in this letter and in Fam. 15. 1 and 2, addressed to the senate. For litterae of more than one letter, cf. Ep. XCIX. 1 n.

XXXV. (Att. 6. 1. 17-26.)

De statua Africani—ὦ πραγμάτων ἀσυγκλώστων! 17
 sed me id ipsum delectavit in tuis litteris—, ain tu?
 Scipio hic Metellus proavum suum nescit censorem non fuisse? Atqui nihil habuit aliud inscriptum nisi CENS. ea statua, quae ad Opis per te posita in excelso est; in illa autem, quae est ad Πολυκλέους Herculem, inscriptum est COS., quam esse eiusdem status amictus anulus imago ipsa declarat. At mehercule ego, cum in turma inauratarum equestrium quas hic Metellus in

XXXV. Laodicea, Feb. 20, 50 B.C. (The first 16 sections of this letter, dealing with provincial affairs, are omitted.)

17. de statua Africani . . . Metelli: in his de Re Pub. Cicero had made Laelius lament the fact that no statue had been erected to the memory of Scipio Nasica Serapion (cf. Macr. Comment. 1. 4). Q. Caecilius Metellus Scipio, a descendant of Nasica, called the attention of Atticus to what he considered Cicero's error, as he himself had set up a gilded equestrian statue in honor of his ancestor (cf. quas . . . posuit), to say nothing of the ancient statue of Serapion already standing near the temple of Ops. But the statue standing near the temple of Ops has CENSOR inscribed upon it, and cannot therefore represent Serapion, who never held that office. Furthermore, the two ancient statues, standing ad Opis and ad Πολυκλέους Herculem, represent the same person, as a comparison of the two shows. Now the statue ad . . . Herculem is a likeness of Africanus. Therefore the other ancient statue (ad Opis) must represent the same person, and consequently the reproduction which Metellus has had made, and upon whose base he has put the name of Serapion, is in reality a reproduction of an ancient likeness of Africanus.—ὦ πραγμάτων ἀσυγκλώστων, confusion worse confounded; a reference to the lack of arrangement in the letter of Atticus; cf. 11 sed οικονομία mea (i.e. my arrangement) si perturbatior est, tibi assignato; te enim sequor σχεδιάζοντα (i.e. who wrote whatever came into your head).—ain tu, is it possible? Ain tu, ain tandem, and ain vero are frequently used in colloquial Latin to express surprise; cf. Ter. And. 875; Plaut. Trin. 987; Cic. Fam. 9. 21. 1.—ad Opis: sc. templum; cf. a Vestae, Ep. XIII. 2 n.—per te: Atticus was an enthusiastic student of Roman history, of antiquities, and of genealogy, and his interest in these subjects led him to erect the statue. Cf. Nep. Att. 18. 1.—turma, etc.: among the statues on the Capitol were those of the kings, of Brutus, Tiberius Gracchus, and Fabius Maximus; cf. Pliny, N. H. 34. 23; 33. 10; Cic. in Cat. 3. 19. At the time of Augustus the number had grown so great that many were removed to the Campus Martius, and Caligula forbade any one to erect a statue to a living man without his permission; cf. Suet. Calig. 34. The rostra was similarly adorned with statues; cf. Cic. Phil. 9. 16.

Capitolio posuit animadvertissem in Serapionis subscriptione Africani imaginem, erratum fabrile putavi, 18 nunc video Metelli. Ο ἀνιστορησίαν turpem! Nam illud de Flavio et fastis, si secus est, commune erratum est, et tu belle ἠπόρησας, et nos publicam prope opinionem secuti sumus, ut multa apud Graecos. Quis enim non dixit Εὐπολιν, τὸν τῆς ἀρχαίας, ab Alcibiade navigante in Siciliam deiectum esse in mare? Redarguit Eratosthenes; adfert enim quas ille post id tempus fabulas docuerit. Num idcirco Duris Samius, homo in historia diligens, quod cum multis erravit, irridetur? Quis Zaleucum leges Locris scripsisse non dixit? Num igitur iacet Theophrastus, si id a Timaeo tuo familiari reprehensum est? Sed nescire proavum suum censorem non fuisse turpe est, praesertim cum post eum consulem nemo Cornelius illo vivo censor

18. illud de Flavio et fastis: in the de Re Pub. Atticus thought (cf. 8) that Cicero meant to put Cn. Flavius, who published the calendar for the benefit of the people (cf. Livy, 9. 46. 5; Cic. pro Mur. 25), before the time of the decemvirs. — tu belle ἠπόρησας, you made a good point. — ut multa (errata) apud Graecos: Cicero wishes to show that his countrymen are no more inaccurate with reference to their history than the Greeks are in their history. Cicero prided himself also upon his knowledge of nice points in Greek history and literature, which the discussion gives him an opportunity to air. — Εὐπολιν, τὸν τῆς ἀρχαίας (κωμῳδίας); Eupolis, of the fifth century B.C., was a writer of the old comedy. The story ran that Alcibiades put him to death for ridiculing him in a comedy. — redarguit Eratosthenes: sc. in his book περὶ Κωμῳδίας. — Zaleucum: as we learn from de Leg. 2. 15, Theophrastus mentions Zaleucus as the law-giver of the Locrians, while Timaeus maintained that no such man ever lived. — num . . . Theophrastus, is Theophrastus then not read? Theophrastus was a disciple of Plato, and afterwards of Aristotle. — Timaeo: cf. Ep. XVIII. 7 n. — nemo Cornelius: Cicero commonly uses nemo in preference to nullus with nouns indicating persons.

fuerit. Quod de Philotimo et de solutione HS. xx DC 19 scribis, Philotimum circiter Kal. Ianuarias in Chersonesum audio venisse. At mihi ab eo nihil adhuc. Reliqua mea Camillus scribit se accepisse: ea quae sint nescio et aveo scire. Verum haec posterius et coram fortasse commodius. Illud me, mi Attice, in extrema 20 fere parte epistolae commovit. Scribis enim sic, τί λοιπόν; deinde me obsecras amantissime ne obliviscar vigilare et ut animadvertam quae fiant. Num quid de quo inaudisti? Etsi nihil eiusmodi est — πολλοῦ γε καὶ δεῖ — nec enim me fefellisset nec falleret; sed ista admonitio tua tam accurata nescio quid mihi significare visa est. De M. Octavio iterum iam tibi rescribo 21 te illi probe respondisse; paulo vellem fidentius. Nam Caelius libertum ad me misit et litteras accurate scriptas et de pantheris et a civitatibus. Rescripsi

19. de Philotimo: in Att. 6. 4. 3; 6. 5. 2, and 6. 7. 1 Cicero gives Atticus to understand in an indirect manner that Philotimus, Terentia's freedman, has appropriated some of the money coming from the sale of Milo's effects; cf. also Fam. 8. 3. 2. In the management of his own property Cicero, upon returning from exile, questioned the honesty of the same man. — HS. xx DC: 20,600 sesterces; cf. Ep. V. 13 n. — Camillus: a friend of Cicero skilled in real-estate law and interested in the Milo affair. — haec: sc. conferemus.

20. mi Attice: cf. mi Pomponi, Ep. X n. — τί λοιπόν: cf. novi tibi quidnam scribam? quid? etiam, etc., Att. 1. 13. 6; aliud quid? etiam; quando, etc., Att. 2. 6. 2. — quae fiant: sc. by members of Cicero's retinue. — etsi, and yet;

by way of correction, as often in Cicero; cf., e.g., Att. 14. 14. 1; Phil. 2. 75. — πολλοῦ, etc., far from it; a phrase used frequently by Demosthenes. — admonitio: cf. Intr. 75.

21. de M. Octavio: Caelius, who was running for the aedileship, had urged Cicero, e.g. Fam. 8. 9. 3, to send him some panthers to exhibit in the games. Octavius, a candidate for the same office (cf. Fam. 8. 2. 2), hearing of this, inquired of Cicero if Cicero could not be prevailed upon to do the same thing for him. Atticus feared it would be impossible (Att. 5. 21. 5). — litteras . . . a civitatibus: Caelius probably wrote with reference to the panthers, and sent also by his freedmen certain letters, which purported to come from the states in Cicero's province, offering to contribute money to defray alterum me moleste ferre, si ego in tenebris laterem, nec audiretur Romae nullum in mea provincia nummum nisi in aes alienum erogari, docuique nec mihi conciliare pecuniam licere nec illi capere, monuique eum quem plane diligo ut, cum alios accusasset, cautius viveret; illud autem alterum alienum esse existimatione mea, Cibratas imperio meo publice venari.

- 22 Lepta tua epistula gaudio exsultat; etenim scripta belle est meque apud eum magna in gratia posuit. Filiola tua gratum mihi fecit quod tibi diligenter mandavit ut mihi salutem adscriberes; gratum etiam Pilia, sed illa officiosius quod mihi, quem numquam vidit. Igitur tu quoque salutem utrique adscribito. Litterarum datarum dies, pr. Kal. Ianuar., suavem habuit recordationem clarissimi iuris iurandi, quod ego non eram oblitus. Magnus enim praetextatus illo die

the expense of the games which he wished to give. These letters he desired to have the proper officials in the various states sign. Such a compulsory free-will offering would be no more remarkable than the embassy which was forced to go to Rome to thank the senate for sending them Appius as their governor (cf. Fam. 3. 8. 2). — alterum . . . alterum, the second matter . . . the first; the first alterum refers to the levying of taxes for such a purpose; the second to the proposition concerning the panthers. — nec . . . licere: Cicero had approved of the course of his brother Quintus, who, as praetor of Asia, had issued an edict directing that money should not be raised in the provinces to pay for games which the aediles gave in Rome; cf. Q. fr. 1. 1. 26. The levying of taxes or contributions in the provinces was probably governed by general or special laws, perhaps by the lex Cornelia of 85 B. C.; cf. Fam. 3. 10. 6; Tac. Ann. 3. 62. — cum alios accusasset: referring to Caelius's prosecution of C. Antonius for misgovernment in Macedonia.

22. Lepta: Cicero's praefectus fabrum; cf. Fam. 3. 7. 4. — illa: i. e. filiola. — quod mihi: sc. salutem adscripsit. — pr. Kal. Ianuar.: in apposition with dies. — iuris iurandi: on laying down the consulship, Cicero swore that he had saved the republic: cum ille (i. e. Metellus Nepos, the tribune) mihi nihil nisi ut iurarem permetteret, magna voce iuravi verissimum pulcherrimumque ius iurandum quod populus idem magna voce me vere iurasse iuravit, Fam. 5. 2. 7. Cf. Intr. 8. — Magnus praetextatus, a Pompey in praetexta.

fui. Habes ad omnia, non, ut postulasti, χρύσεια χαλκείων, sed paria paribus respondimus. Ecce autem 23 alia pusilla epistula, quam non relinquam ἀναντιφώνητον. Bene mehercule proposuit Lucecius Tusculanum, nisi forte dolet ei quod suo tibicine egebit. Velim scire qui sit status eius. Lentulum quidem nostrum omnia praeter Tusculanum proscripsisse audio. Cupio hos expeditos videre, cupio etiam Sestium, adde sis Caesium, in quibus omnibus est

Αἰδεσθεν μὲν ἀνήνασθαι, δέισαν δ' ὑποδέχθαι.

For a similar comparison of his peaceful achievements with the military successes of Pompey and others, cf. Ep. III. 3; in Cat. 4. 21 f. — χρύσεια χαλκείων and paria paribus (respondere) are proverbial expressions; cf. e.g. Il. 6. 236; Plato, Symp. 219 A; Ter. Phorm. 212. For the alliteration, cf. Intr. 93. The Latin expression occurs in a fuller form in Plaut. Pers. 223 par pari respondes dicto. This substantival use of a neuter adj. in the dat. is very unusual in Latin. The nearest parallel in Cicero is parva magnis conferuntur, Orat. 14. Cf. also a quotation from a letter written by Atticus (Att. 16. 7. 6) unde par pari respondeatur.

23. ecce: used in colloquial language to introduce a new subject, and oftentimes one which causes surprise, e.g. ecce Apollo mi ex oraculo imperat, Plaut. Men. 841; ecce postridie Cassio litterae Capua a Lucretio, Att. 7. 24. It is therefore often accompanied by subito, repente, de improviso, and the ethical dative; cf. Intr. 83 c. This use of ecce is in harmony with its use in comedy to announce an unexpected appearance, e.g. ecce autem video rure redeuntem senem, Ter. Eun. 967. For the phrases used to indicate a transition where no surprise is expressed, cf. Intr. 91. — ἀναντιφώνητον, without an answer. There are more than 70 Greek words in the Letters containing a privative. Their frequency in colloquial language is due to the fact that they enabled a writer to avoid a long Latin expression; cf. Intr. 95. — proposuit, has offered for sale. — Lucecius: not the historian. This Lucecius was so heavily in debt (Att. 5. 21. 13) that he proposed to sell his Tusculan villa. — nisi forte, etc.: see Crit. Append. — tibicine, roof-tree (lit. pillar supporting roof); cf. Festus, I. 558, ed. de Ponor; Juv. 3. 193. — Lentulum: his indebtedness is mentioned by Caesar B. C. 1. 4. He was consul in 49 B.C., accompanied Pompey to Greece, and after the battle of Pharsalus was put to death by King Ptolemy in Egypt; cf. Caes. B. C. 3. 104. 3. — cupio etiam Sestium: sc. expeditum videre. — Sestium: see Ep. XVI. 5 f. — sis: for si vis, as frequently in Latin comedy and satire. Cf. sultis for si vultis. — αἰδεσθεν, etc.: from Il. 7. 93. As the leaders of the Greeks were afraid to accept and ashamed to decline the challenge

De Memmio restituendo ut Curio cogitet te audisse puto. De Egnati Sidicini nomine nec nulla nec magna spe sumus. Pinarium, quem mihi commendas, diligentissime Deiotarus curat graviter aegrum. Respondi etiam minori. Tu velim, dum ero Laodiceae, id est ad Idus Maias, quam saepissime mecum per litteras colloquare et, cum Athenas veneris — iam enim sciemus de rebus urbanis, de provinciis, quae omnia in mensem Martium sunt collata — utique ad me tabellarios mittas. Et heus tu, iamne vos a Caesare per Herodem talenta Attica L extorsistis? In quo, ut audio, magnum odium Pompei suscepistis; putat enim suos nummos vos comedisse, Caesarem in Nemore aedificando diligentio-rem fore. Haec ego ex P. Vedio, magno nebulone, sed of Hector, so the leading Optimates were afraid to accept but loath to decline Caesar's offers of financial aid. In the one case they would be under obligation to Caesar; in the other they would miss a chance of paying long outstanding debts. Lentulus was one of the men whom in the following year Caesar sought to win over by the means indicated; cf. Att. 8. 11. 5. — Memmio: cf. Ep. XXXII. introd. note. — Curio: i.e. C. Scribonius Curio; cf. Ep. VII. 3 n. — nomine: Egnatius apparently owed money to Cicero. — Pinarium: a financial agent. — minori: sc. epistulae.

24. sunt collata, have been set down for. February was the usual month for the consideration of foreign affairs. Cf. Q. fr. 2. 13. 3; Fam. 1. 4. 1.

25. heus: confined to conversational Latin, and commonly followed or preceded by a pronoun or the name of the person addressed, with a question or a command. — Herodem: an Athenian friend of Atticus and Cicero, and afterwards in a certain sense the guardian of young Cicero while the latter was studying at Athens; cf. Att. 14. 16. 3; 14. 18. 4. — suos nummos: Pompey, for some unknown reason, thought that this money should have come to him rather than to Atticus. — Nemore: the grove of Diana, not far from Aricia, near which Caesar was building a villa (cf. Suet. Jul. 46). Why Caesar was expected to be more active in building after losing part of his capital it is difficult to understand. As for Pompey's feeling in the matter, perhaps Caesar owed him money, and the expenditure of a large sum upon the villa near Aricia would lessen the chances of payment. He would in that case look with disfavor upon Caesar's building plans. Possibly, however, we should read with Boot nec Caesarem . . . diligentio-rem (economical). — P. Vedio: Vedius Pollio is said to have Pompei tamen familiari, audivi. Hic Vedius venit mihi obviam cum duobus essedis et raeda equis iuncta et lectica et familia magna, pro qua, si Curio legem pertulerit, HS. centenos pendat necesse est. Erat praeterea cynocephalus in essedo nec deerant onagri. Numquam vidi hominem nequiores. Sed extremum audi. Deversatus est Laodiceae apud Pompeium Vindullum; ibi sua deposuit, cum ad me profectus est. Moritur interim Vindullus. Quod res ad Magnum Pompeium pertinere putabatur, C. Vennonius domum Vindulli venit; cum omnia obsignaret, in Vedianas res incidit. In his inventae sunt quinque imagunculae matronarum, in quibus una sororis amici tui, hominis 'bruti,' qui hoc utatur, et uxoris illius 'lepidi,' qui caused slaves who had offended him to be thrown to the lampreys in his fish-pond. His name became, like that of Lucullus, a synonym for extravagance; cf. Tac. Ann. 1. 10. — nebulone: a word of contempt for a worthless fellow. In general in colloquial Latin personal nouns in o carry with them a contemptuous force, and indicate one who is proficient in a questionable accomplishment; thus erro (a tramp), Hor. Sat. 2. 7. 113; popino (a glutton), Sat. 2. 7. 39, etc.; and in the Letters, combido (a crony), Fam. 9. 25. 2; salaco (a braggart), Ep. LXXXI. 2; verbero (a rascal), Att. 14. 6. 1; baro (a blockhead), 5. 11. 6. Cf. also R. Fisch, in Arch. f. lat. Lex. V. 56-89, and W. Meyer, ibid. 223-234. — cum duobus essedis: the use of the essedum by people in private life was a mark of extreme affectation. Even in the case of an official it was very repugnant to a Roman taste. Cf. Cicero's account of Antony's official progress: vehebatur in essedo tribunus plebis; lictores laureati antecedeabant, etc., Phil. 2. 58. — raeda: a light four-wheeled travelling wagon, such as Horace used during one stage of his journey to Brundisium; cf. Sat. 1. 5. 86. — legem: reference is made to some sumptuary law, the provisions of which we do not know, imposing a tax either upon familiae or the equipages of travellers. The cynocephalus and onagri had no other value than that they were rare and therefore expensive. — ad Magnum Pompeium: the cognomen, which is the distinguishing part of this name, when compared with Pompeium Vindullum, is put first for the sake of emphasis. Vindullus had died intestate and without an heir, so that his property seemed likely to come to his patron Pompey. — in his, etc.: as Vedius was a noted rake, the incident occasioned much gossip, but, strange to say, Brutus kept up his friendly relations with Vedius (qui hoc haec tam neglegenter ferat. Haec te volui παριστο- 26 ρῆσαι, sumus enim ambo belle curiosi. Vnum etiam velim cogites. Audio Appium πρόπυλον Eleusine facere. Num inepti fuerimus, si nos quoque Academiae fecerimus? 'Puto,' inquires. Ergo id ipsum scribes ad me. Equidem valde ipsas Athenas amo.

 Volo esse aliquod monumentum; odi falsas inscriptiones statuarum alienarum. Sed ut tibi placebit, faci-esque me in quem diem Romana incidant mysteria certiorum et quomodo hiemaris. Cura ut valeas. Post Leutricam pugnam die septingentesimo sexagesimo quinto.

utatur), and Lepidus treated the affair with indifference. — sumus . . . belle curiosi, we are both awfully fond of gossip. The statement is emphasized by the position of sumus. On belle, cf. Ep. XXIV. 2 n.

26. πρόπυλον: an inscription found at Eleusis in 1860, and quoted by Boot, throws light upon this passage: AP·CLAVDIVS·AP·F·PVLCHER·PROPYLVM·CERERI·ET·PROSERPINAЕ·COS·VOVIT·IMPERATOR·COEPIT·PVLCHER·CLAVDIVS·ET·REX·MARCIVS·FECERVNT (C.I.L. I.¹ 619). — num, etc.: Cicero asks Atticus the same question in Att. 6. 6. 2. — Academiae: sc. πρόπυλον. — Athenas: cf. valde me Athenae delectarunt, Att. 5. 10. 5. — monumentum: i.e. something to commemorate himself in connection with Athens, although he cannot endure the thought of having his name attached to some one of the famous statues of other men in Athens, a practice which some Romans had followed. — mysteria: the festival of the Bona Dea, which occurred in May. The mention of Bona Dea brings up to Cicero's mind the celebrated sacrilege of Clodius (cf. Ep. V.), with its long train of disasters for him, and leads him to date his letter from the day of Clodius's murder by Milo. To this event Cicero jestingly gives the name of pugna Leutrica, for, as Greece had been freed from the tyranny of the Spartans by the battle of Leuctra, so Rome was relieved of the domination of its tyrant Clodius by the street-fight in which he fell. Cf. Att. 5. 13. 1 Ephesum venimus a. d. XI Kal. Sext. sexagesimo et quingentesimo post pugnam Bovillanam (Clodius was killed at Bovillae). Clodius was murdered Jan. 18, 52 B.C., so that the date of this letter would be Feb. 20, 50 B.C. (cf. Schmidt, Briefw. p. 76).

XXXVI. (Fam. 2. 11.)

M. CICERO IMP. S. D. M. CAELIO AEDILI CVRVI.

Putaresne umquam accidere posse ut mihi verba ¹ deessent, neque solum ista vestra oratoria, sed haec etiam levia nostratia? Desunt autem propter hanc causam, quod mirifice sum sollicitus quidnam de provinciis decernatur. Mirum me desiderium tenet urbis, incredibile meorum atque in primis tui, satietas autem provinciae, vel quia videmur eam famam consecuti ut non tam accessio quaerenda quam fortuna metuenda sit, vel quia totum negotium non est dignum viribus nostris, qui maiora onera in re publica sustinere et possim et soleam, vel quia belli magni timor impendet, quod videmur effugere si ad constitutam diem decedemus. De pantheris, per eos qui venari solent agitur ²

XXXVI. Cilicia, Apr. 4, 50 B.C. Since Ep. XXXIII. was written Caelius has been elected curule aedile (cf. aedili curuli), and has entered on the duties of the office.

1. ut mihi, etc.: cf. Fam. 4. 4. 1 quem (i.e. me) tu divitias orationis habere dicis, me non esse verborum admodum inopem agnosco.—ista vestra oratoria, of you orators there in Rome. Caelius's strength as a lawyer lay in his skill in prosecution; cf. Quint. 6. 3. 69 idem (Cicero) per allegoriam M. Caelium, melius obicientem crimina quam defendentem, bonam dextram, malam sinistram habere dicebat.—levia nostratia: used of the discussion of familiar topics in familiar language, and especially of the sermo cotidianus. Thus Cicero, while recognizing the value of Greek culture, adds, ego autem —existimes licet quidlibet—miri-

fice capior facietis, maxime nostratibus, Ep. LXVII. 2; in Tusc. Disp. 5. 90, speaking of Roman philosophers as opposed to Greek, he calls the former nostrates philosophi. The passage is important, as indicating that Cicero recognized the existence of a colloquial Latin by the side of a more formal language. Cf. also Intr. 71.—decernatur: Cicero fears that his term of office may be prolonged.—desiderium urbis: cf. si potes, etc., Ep. XVII. 2 n.—fortuna: i.e. a change of fortune.—belli: sc. with the Parthians.

2. pantheris, etc.: Cicero's reply to the urgent and repeated requests of Caelius, gravely couched in official language, as if the capture of these panthers had been the most serious object of his provincial administration. Cf. also Octavio, Ep. XXXV. 21 n.—agitur mandatu meo diligenter; sed mira paucitas est et eas quae sunt valde aiunt queri, quod nihil cuiquam insidiarum in mea provincia nisi sibi fiat; itaque constituisse dicuntur in Cariam ex nostra provincia decedere. Sed tamen sedulo fit, et in primis a Patisco. Quicquid erit, tibi erit, sed quid esset plane nesciebamus. Mihi mercule magnae curae est aedilitas tua; ipse dies me admonebat, scripsi enim haec ipsis Megalensibus. Tu velim ad me de omni rei publicae statu quam diligentissime perscribas; ea enim certissima putabo quae ex te cognoro.

XXXVII. (Fam. 15. 5.)

M. CATO S. D. M. CICERONI IMP.

1 Quod et res p. me et nostra amicitia hortatur, libenter facio, ut tuam virtutem innocentiam diligentiam, mandatu meo: such a phrase as an official might use in a report to his government, while ex . . . decedere suggests the dignified retirement of those who felt aggrieved. — insidiarum: with reference on the one hand to traps for panthers, and on the other to the lying in ambush of highwaymen, or the snares laid for the provincials by the money-lenders, whose iniquitous proceedings Cicero claimed to have suppressed. — sedulo: cf. Ep. XII. 1 n. — Patisco: an official engaged in securing panthers; cf. Fam. 8. 9. 3. — nesciebamus: epistolary imperf.; cf. Intr. 84 c. — ipsis Megalensibus: the Megalensian games, lasting from Apr. 4 to 10, were managed by the curule aediles.

XXXVII. Rome, the end of April or the early part of May, 50 B.C. This is Cato's reply to

Ep. XXXIV. It is interesting as the only thing we have from his pen. The blunt manner, the brevity of the letter, and the rigidity of its style not only seem characteristic of the writer, but make the letter an excellent foil to the epistle of Cicero, which is remarkably guarded in referring to the matter at issue, is circumstantial in its statements, and varied in its style. The supplicatio was decreed by the senate, but Cato voted against it. For Cicero's opinion of Cato's course, cf. Att. 7. 2. 7 qui (i.e. Cato) quidem in me turpiter fuit malevolus: dedit integritatis iustitiae clementiae fidei mihi testimonium, quod non quaerebam; quod postulabam, id negavit.

1. quod . . . me . . . hortatur: the use of two accusatives is very common in archaic Latin after verbs of seeking, warning, etc.

cognitam in maximis rebus domi togati, armati foris pari industria administrari gaudeam. Itaque, quod pro meo iudicio facere potui, ut innocentia consilioque tuo defensam provinciam, servatum Ariobarzani cum ipso rege regnum, sociorum revocatam ad studium imperi nostri voluntatem sententia mea et decreto laudarem, feci. Supplicationem decretam, si tu, qua in re nihil 2 fortuito, sed summa tua ratione et continentia rei provisum est, dis immortalibus gratulari nos quam tibi referre acceptum mavis, gaudeo; quod si triumphi praerogativam putas supplicationem et idcirco casum potius quam te laudari mavis, neque supplicationem sequitur semper triumphus et triumpho multo clarius est sena-especially when one of the accusatives is a neuter pronoun (cf. e.g. Ter. And. 918; Heaut. 353); and this construction, which is perhaps a colloquial survival in the prose of the Ciceronian period (cf. Reisig-Schmalz, Lat. Syn. note 562), is frequent in the Letters; cf. multa deos venerati sunt, Fam. 6. 7. 2; illud te peto, Ep. LII. 2. — virtutem . . . administrari: this would be a very harsh expression for Cicero, but is perhaps not to be changed in a letter from Cato. — togati: in agreement with the genitive implied in tuam. — ut innocentia, etc.: in his summary of Cicero's achievements, Cato bluntly disregards his claim that he has barred the progress of the Parthians and driven them back (cf. Ep. XXXIV. 7), and in fact practically ignores his military exploits in general. innocentia refers to abstinence from corrupt use of power for personal gain. — Ariobarzani: cf. Ep. XXXIV. 6. — decreto: cf. Fam. 8. 11. 2 tantum Catoni (Hirrus) adsensus

est, qui (i.e. Cato) de te locutus honorifice non decreverat supplicationes.

2. nihil fortuito: sc. factum est from provisum est. — sed (nihil) . . . provisum est: used carelessly for sed omnia provisum sunt. — referre acceptum: a business expression, meaning, 'to set down to one's credit.' — praerogativam: the vote of the first century in the comitia, the centuria praerogativa, was a pretty sure indication of the result of the entire election, so that praerogativa means often, as here, 'sure indication.' — potius . . . mavis: such pleonasm is not uncommon in colloquial Latin; cf. michi magis lubet cum probis potius quam cum improbis vivere vanidicis, Plaut. Trin. 274; magis decorumst libertum potius quam patronum onus in via portare, Asin. 689; arbitror malle te quietam senectutem et honorificam potius agere quam sollicitam, Att. 14. 13 A. 3 (from Antony). Cf. also 'I preferred to go rather than to stay.'

tum iudicare potius mansuetudine et innocentia imperatoris provinciam quam vi militum aut benignitate deorum retentam atque conservatam esse, quod ego 3 mea sententia censebam. Atque haec ego idcirco ad te contra consuetudinem meam pluribus scripsi ut, quod maxime volo, existimes me laborare ut tibi persuadeam me et voluisse de tua maiestate quod amplissimum sim arbitratus, et quod tu maluisti factum esse gaudere. Vale et nos dilige et instituto itinere severitatem diligentiamque sociis et rei p. praesta.

XXXVIII. (Fam. 15. 6.)

M. CICERO S. D. M. CATONI.

1 'Laetus sum laudari me,' inquit Hector, opinor apud Naevium, 'aps te, pater, a laudato viro'; ea est enim profecto iucunda laus quae ab iis proficiscitur qui ipsi in laude vixerunt. Ego vero vel gratulatione litterarum tuarum vel testimoniis sententiae dictae nihil est quod me non adsecutum putem, idque mihi cum amplissimum, tum gratissimum est, te libenter amicitiae dedisse quod liquido veritati dares. Et si non modo omnes, verum etiam multi Catones essent in civitate nostra, in qua unum exstitisse mirabile est, quem ego currum aut quam lauream cum tua laudatione con-

3. contra consuetudinem meam: contrary to his habit as an individual, and to the teaching of his fellow-philosophers the Stoics.

XXXVIII. Tarsus, July, 50 B.C. Cicero's reply to Ep. XXXVII.

1. laetus sum: for Cicero's real opinion of Cato's course, cf. Ep.

XXXVII. introd. note. — Hector, opinor, etc.: cf. Ep. XVIII. 7 n. — aps te: archaic for abs te (= a te). — sententiae dictae: sc. in the senate. — te . . . dedisse: Cicero was gratified that Cato's statement of the case in the senate was the free-will offering of a friend. — currum, lauream: these were among the ferrem? Nam ad meum sensum et ad illud sincerum ac subtile iudicium nihil potest esse laudabilius quam ea tua oratio, quae est ad me perscripta a meis necessariis. Sed causam meae voluntatis — non enim dicam ² cupiditatis — exposui tibi superioribus litteris, quae etiamsi parum iusta tibi visa est, hanc tamen habet rationem, non ut nimis concupiscendus honos, sed tamen, si deferatur a senatu, minime aspernandus esse videatur. Spero autem illum ordinem pro meis ob rem p. susceptis laboribus me non indignum honore, usitato praesertim, existimaturum. Quod si ita erit, tantum ex te peto, quod amicissime scribis, ut, cum tuo iudicio quod amplissimum esse arbitraris mihi tribueris, si id quod maluero acciderit, gaudeas. Sic enim fecisse te et sensisse et scripsisse video, resque ipsa declarat tibi illum honorem nostrum supplicationis iucundum fuisse, quod scribendo adfuisti; haec enim senatus consulta non ignoro ab amicissimis eius, cuius de honore insignia of a triumph. — ad meum sensum, etc., as far as my feelings go and resting one's opinion upon a really honest and keen judgment.

2. superioribus litteris: cf. idem post iniuriam, etc., Ep. XXXIV. 13 (end). — honos: not the supplicatio, but the triumphus. — usitato praesertim: possibly a thrust at Cato himself, who secured a thanksgiving of twenty days for his son-in-law Bibulus (Att. 7. 2. 7), although Cicero says of him, Att. 6. 8. 5: ego, nisi Bibulus qui, dum unus hostis in Syria fuit, pedem porta non plus extulit quam domo sua (when during his consulship with Caesar he shut himself up in his own house), adniteretur de triumpho, aequo

animo essem. — ex te: the Letters have not only the regular construction aliquid abs te peto, but also aliquid ex te peto and aliquid te peto. Cf. Ep. XXXVII. 1 n.; LII. 2 n. — quod amicissime scribis: cf. existimes . . . quod . . . gaudere, Ep. XXXVII. 3. — id quod maluero: i.e. a triumph. The expression contains a thrust at Cato for his presumption in trying to secure for Cicero a resolution complimenting him upon the uprightness of his administration (cf. Ep. XXXVII. 1) for which he had not asked, instead of a thanksgiving and a possible future triumph, which he did desire. — scribendo adfuisti: i.e. when the bill was drawn up in legal form; cf. legem conscripserunt, Ep. XV.

agitur, scribi solere. Ego, ut spero, te propediem videbo, atque utinam re p. meliore quam timeo!

XXXIX. (Fam. 16. 4.)

TVLLIVS TIRONI SVO S. P. D. ET CICERO ET Q.
FRATER ET Q. F.

- 1 Varie sum adfectus tuis litteris, valde priore pagina perturbatus, paulum altera recreatus. Quare nunc quidem non dubito quin, quoad plane valeas, te neque navigationi neque viae committas. Satis te mature videro, si plane confirmatum videro. De medico et tu bene existimari scribis et ego sic audio; sed plane curationes eius non probo; ius enim dandum tibi non fuit, cum κακοστόμαχος esses; sed tamen et ad illum
2 scripsi accurate et ad Lysonem. Ad Curium vero, suavissimum hominem et summi officii summaeque humanitatis, multa scripsi, in iis etiam, ut, si tibi vide-

7 n. — re publica meliore: the violent discussions in the senate concerning a successor to Caesar were at their height.

XXXIX. Leucas, Nov. 7, 50 B.C. Cicero apparently left Tarsus July 30 (cf. Fam. 2. 17. 1), and, after a delay of several weeks in Rhodes and Ephesus, reached the Piraeus Oct. 14. Toward the end of the month he set out by land for Rome. Tiro, who was with him, was taken ill on the way, and was left behind at Patrae, while Cicero continued his journey through Alyzia and Leucas.

1. existimari: probably impersonal, although after de introducing a transition we find such loose constructions that it would be possible to consider existimari

personal with an omitted eum for its subject. Cf. de Quinto fratre, scito eum non mediocriter laborare, etc., Att. 10. 15. 4. — ius, soup. — κακοστόμαχος: as the physicians were usually Greeks, technical medical expressions were in Greek. Cf. the prescription which Cicero urges upon Tiro (Fam. 16. 18. 1): ea (i.e. valetudo) quid postulet, non ignoras; πέψιν, άκοπλαν, περίτρατον σύμμετρον, τρήψιν, εύλυσίαν κοιλίας. — Lysonem: Tiro was staying at Lyso's house.

2. Curium: M. Curius, a Roman knight carrying on a banking business in Patrae. The one letter which we have from him, Fam. 7. 29, full as it is of commercial terms, would of itself betray his calling. Fam. 7. 28, 30, and 31

retur, te ad se transferret; Lyso enim noster vereor ne neglegentior sit, primum, quia omnes Graeci, deinde quod, cum a me litteras accepisset, mihi nullas remisit. Sed eum tu laudas; tu igitur quid faciendum sit iudicabis. Illud, mi Tiro, te rogo, sumptu ne parcas ulla in re, quod ad valetudinem opus sit. Scripsi ad Curium, quod dixisses daret. Medico ipsi puto aliquid dandum esse, quo sit studiosior. Innumerabilia tua sunt in me 3 officia, domestica forensia, urbana provincialia, in re privata in publica, in studiis in litteris nostris; omnia viceris, si, ut spero, te validum videro. Ego puto te bellissime, si recte erit, cum quaestore Mescinio decursurum. Non inhumanus est teque, ut mihi visus est, diligit. Et cum valetudini tuae diligentissime consulueris, tum, mi Tiro, consulto navigationi. Nulla in re iam te festinare volo; nihil laboro nisi ut salvus sis. Sic habeto, mi Tiro, neminem esse qui me amet 4 are addressed to him.— ad se, to his house.— omnes Graeci: cf. Q. fr. 1. 2. 4 Graecorum ingenia ad fallendum parata; . . . per-taesum est (eorum) levitatis adsentationis, animorum non officii, sed temporibus servientium.— sumptu: the contracted form for the dative in the fourth decl. seems to occur most frequently in poetry and in post-Augustan prose, although it is found occasionally in the prose of both Caesar and Cicero; cf. Neue, Formenlehre, I.² 356–358.

3. domestica forensia, etc.: cf. Intr. 94.— litteris: cf. Gell. 6. 3. 8 Tiro Tullius, M. Ciceronis libertus, sane quidem fuit ingenio homo eleganti et hautquamquam rerum litterarumque veterum indoc-tus, eoque ab ineunte aetate liberaliter instituto adminiculatore et quasi administro in studiis litterarum Cicero usus est; Fam. 16. 10. 2 litterulae meae sive nostrae tui desiderio oblanguerunt. See also Intr. 57.— bellissime: cf. bellus, Ep. XXIV. 2 n.; XLI. 1.— recte erit: cf. Intr. 85 a.— Mescinio: the poor opinion which Cicero had of his quaestor L. Mescinius Rufus (Att. 6. 4. 1 nihil minus probari poterat quam quaestor Mescinius) is not out of harmony with the lukewarm expression non inhumanus est. In Fam. 13. 26, written four years later, Cicero recommends him to Servius Sulpicius, but in terms which are cold in comparison with those found in his other letters of introduction. Fam. 5. 19 and 20 are to him.— decursurum: as we say, 'make the run,' i.e. from Patrae to Leucas.

4. sic habeto: cf. Ep. XXVI. 1 n.

quin idem te amet, et cum tua et mea maxime interest te valere, tum multis est curae. Adhuc, dum mihi nullo loco deesse vis, numquam te confirmare potuisti; nunc te nihil impedit; omnia depone, corpori servi. Quantam diligentiam in valetudinem tuam contuleris, tanti me fieri a te iudicabo. Vale, mi Tiro, vale, vale et salve. Lepta tibi salutem dicit et omnes. Vale. VII Id. Nov. Leucade.

XL. (Fam. 16. 6.)

TVLLIVS ET CICERO ET QQ. TIRONI S. P. D.

- 1 Tertiam ad te hanc epistolam scripsi eodem die, magis instituti mei tenendi causa, quia nactus eram cui darem, quam quo haberem quid scriberem. Igitur illa: quantum me diligis, tantum adhibe in te diligentiae; ad tua innumerabilia in me officia adde hoc, quod mihi erit gratissimum omnium. Cum valetudinis ratio-
- 2 nem, ut spero, habueris, habeto etiam navigationis. In Italiam euntibus omnibus ad me litteras dabis, ut ego euntem Patras neminem praetermitto. Cura, cura te, mi Tiro. Quoniam non contigit ut simul navigares, nihil est quod festines, nec quicquam cures nisi ut valeas. Etiam atque etiam vale. VII Idus Nov. Actio vesperi.

— nullo loco: for nulla in re. Cf. omnibus locis, Ep. XLII. 1.—Lepta: cf. Ep. XXXV. 22.

XL. Actium, Nov. 7, 50 B.C.—QQ. (= Quinti duo): i.e. the brother and nephew of Cicero. Cf. the salutations in Ep. XXXIX. and XLII.

1. tertiam: the other two were Ep. XXXIX. and Fam. 16. 5.—cui darem: for the lack of a postal system among the Romans, see Intr. 64.

2. dabis: cf. Intr. 84 b.—simul: sc. nobiscum; cf. Ep. XLI. 2.—etiam atque etiam vale: cf. Intr. 62.

XLI. (Fam. 16. 9.)

TVLLIVS ET CICERO TIRONI SVO S. P. D.

Nos a te, ut scis, discessimus a. d. IIII Non. Nov. ¹ Leucadem venimus a. d. VIII Id. Nov., a. d. VII Actium. Ibi propter tempestatem a. d. VI Idus morati sumus. Inde a. d. V Id. Corcyram bellissime navigavimus. Corcyrae fuimus usque ad a. d. XVI K. Dec., tempestatibus retenti. A. d. XV K. in portum Corcyraeorum ad Cassiopen stadia CXX processimus. Ibi retenti ventis sumus usque ad a. d. VIII K. Interea qui cupide profecti sunt multi naufragia fecerunt. Nos ² eo die cenati solvimus; inde austro lenissimo, caelo sereno nocte illa et die postero in Italiam ad Hydruntem ludibundi pervenimus, eodemque vento postridie (id erat a. d. VII K. Dec.) hora IIII Brundisium venimus, eodemque tempore simul nobiscum in oppidum introiit Terentia, quae te facit plurimi. A. d. V K. Dec. servus Cn. Planci Brundisi tandem aliquando mihi a te expectatissimas litteras reddidit, datas Idibus Nov., quae me molestia valde levarunt; utinam omnino liberassent! Sed tamen Asclapo medicus plane confirmat propediem te valentem fore. Nunc quid ego te hortor ut omnem ³

XLI. Brundisium, Nov. 26, 50 B.C. Cicero's affection for Tiro is shown, not only by the anxiety which he feels for his health, but also by the care with which he suggests and provides all those little things which may increase his comfort. Cf. Intr. 49 (end).

1. a te discessimus: i.e. at Patrae. — a. d. XVI K. Dec.: used substantively and governed by the preposition ad; cf. a. d. VII K. Dec., below.

2. id erat, etc.: for the more common expression qui dies erat, etc., cf. Ep. XV. 5. — eodem tempore simul nobiscum: note the pleonasm; cf. tandem aliquando, below. — Terentia: she came to Brundisium at Cicero's request; cf. Fam. 14. 5. 1. Two years later, when Cicero returned to Italy after the battle of Pharsalus, he discountenanced Terentia's proposal to meet him at Brundisium; cf. Ep. LIII.

diligentiam adhibeas ad convalescendum? Tuam prudentiam temperantiam amorem erga me novi; scio te omnia facturum ut nobiscum quam primum sis; sed tamen ita velim, ut ne quid properes. Symphoniam Lysonis vellem vitasses, ne in quartam hebdomada incideres; sed quoniam pudori tuo maluisti obsequi quam valetudini, reliqua cura. Curio misi ut medico honos haberetur et tibi daret quod opus esset; me cui iussisset curaturum. Equum et mulum Brundisi tibi reliqui. Romae vereor ne ex K. Ian. magni tumultus 4 sint. Nos agemus omnia modice. Reliquum est ut te hoc rogem et a te petam, ne temere naviges. Solent nautae festinare quaestus sui causa. Cautus sis, mi Tiro; mare magnum et difficile tibi restat. Si poteris, cum Mescinio — caute is solet navigare; si minus, cum honesto aliquo homine cuius auctoritate navicularius moveatur. In hoc omnem diligentiam si adhibueris teque nobis incolumem steteris, omnia a te habebo. Etiam atque etiam, noster Tiro, vale. Medico, Curio, Lysoni de te scripsi diligentissime. Vale salve.

3. symphoniam: the singing of a chorus of slaves (symphoniaci) was a favorite entertainment with the Romans at dinner; cf. Macrob. Sat. 2. 4. 28. In earlier times the music was of a simpler sort. Cf. Quint. 1. 10. 20 sed veterum quoque Romanorum epulis fides ac tibias adhibere moris fuit. For musical entertainments on similar occasions, cf. Juv. 11. 180; Plin. Ep. 1. 15. 2; Gellius, 19. 9. 4. — in quartam hebdomada: every seventh day was regarded as a critical period in an illness. Tiro had suffered from three of these hebdomadal attacks. — honos, his fee. — me . . . curaturum: Curius as a banker would have correspondents in Rome, and Cicero proposed to pay one of these correspondents the sum which Curius might pay out in settling the bill for medical attendance. — reliqui: epistolary perfect. — ex K. Ian.: the consuls for 49 B.C. were inclined to take vigorous measures against Caesar.

4. cautus sis: cf. Intr. 84 b. — mi Tiro: cf. mi Pomponi, Ep. X. n. — cum Mescinio: sc. naviga. — noster Tiro: the other members of Cicero's family often join in the valedictory address to him. — vale salve: cf. Ep. XXXIX. 4 (end).

XLII. (Fam. 16. 11.)

TVLLIVS ET CICERO TERENTIA TVLLIA QQ. TIRONI
S. P. D.

Etsi opportunitatem operae tuae omnibus locis desidero, tamen non tam mea quam tua causa doleo te non valere; sed quoniam in quartanam conversa vis est morbi (sic enim scribit Curius), spero te diligentia adhibita iam firmiorem fore; modo fac, id quod est humanitatis tuae, ne quid aliud cures hoc tempore nisi ut quam commodissime convalescas. Non ignoro quantum ex desiderio labores; sed erunt omnia facilia, si valebis. Festinare te nolo ne nauseae molestiam

XLII. Near Rome, Jan. 12, 49 B.C. Cicero reached Rome, after his absence in Cilicia, Jan. 4, 49 B.C. (cf. 2), but, being anxious to obtain a triumph, remained outside the city. This enabled him to avoid participating in the exciting debates which took place in the senate Jan. 1-2 and 5-6, and left him free to negotiate for peace between Caesar and Pompey. On Jan. 1 Curio, Caesar's representative, laid before the senate a proposition to the effect that Caesar should be allowed to sue for the consulship while absent from the city, in accordance with the special law passed in 52 B.C. granting him that privilege (cf. Intr. 26), or if it should be considered necessary for him to give up his army and provinces, that Pompey should be required to do the same. Although this document was read in the senate, the consuls refused to allow a vote upon it, and after fiery speeches by Lentulus, Scipio, and others, it was voted uti ante certam diem (July 1, 49) Caesar exercitum dimittat; si non faciat, eum adversus rem publicam facturum videri (Caes. B. C. 1. 2). After consultations with Pompey, whose imperium, as he was still governor of Spain, did not allow him to enter the city, on Jan. 7 the senate passed the senatus consultum ultimum: dent operam consules praetores tribuni plebis quique pro consulibus sint ad urbem, ne quid res publica detrimenti capiat (Caes. B. C. 1. 5). — QQ.: cf. Ep. XL. introd. note.

1. doleo . . . valere: that while the course of political events was of such absorbing interest at Rome, Cicero's thoughts are first directed towards Tiro and Tiro's illness, affords a striking proof of his affection for his faithful freedman. — quartanam: the appearance of the febris quartana indicated convalescence. Cf. Juv. 4. 57 quartanam sperantibus aegris. — Curius: cf. Ep. XXXIX. 2 n.

2 suscipias aeger et periculose hieme naviges. Ego ad urbem accessi pr. Non. Ian. Obviam mihi sic est proditum ut nihil possit fieri ornatus; sed incidi in ipsam flammam civilis discordiae vel potius belli, cui cum cuperem mederi et, ut arbitror, possem, cupiditates certorum hominum (nam ex utraque parte sunt qui pugnare cupiant) impedimento mihi fuerunt. Omnino et ipse Caesar, amicus noster, minacis ad senatum et acerbas litteras miserat et erat adhuc impudens, qui exercitum et provinciam invito senatu teneret, et Curio meus illum incitabat; Antonius quidem noster et Q. Cassius nulla vi expulsi ad Caesarem cum Curione pro-

2. obviam mihi: cf. Cicero's account of his reception on returning from exile in Ep. XV. 5. — mederi: Cicero's absence from Italy while civil war was brewing, his absence from the senate during the stormy debates of the first week in January, as well as his well-known opportunism in politics, and his friendly relations with both Caesar and Pompey, seemed to make him the natural mediator between the opposing factions. That he hoped to effect a compromise is clear from many remarks in the Letters (cf., e.g., Ep. LXV. 5). What many condemn as cowardice in his course during the Civil War finds at least partial justification in his desire to keep a neutral attitude, which would enable him to negotiate a peace. — ex utraque parte: among others Cicero is thinking of the Pompeians Scipio and Lentulus, and the Caesarians Antony and Cassius; cf. Caes. B. C. 1. 1-4, and see Ep. LXV. 6 victa est, etc. — minacis . . . litteras: the letter read by Curio in the senate Jan. 1 (see introd. note). Caesar (B. C. 1.

5) characterizes the propositions contained in his letter as lenissima postulata. Cicero's characterization of the letter would seem to be justified, however, by Caesar's own statement of his purpose in B. C. 1. 22 ut se et populum Romanum factione paucorum oppressum in libertatem vindicaret. See also Dio Cass. 41. 1. — provinciam: Caesar was proconsul of Gallia Cisalpina, Illyricum, and Gallia Narbonensis. — Curio meus: cf. Ep. VII. 3 n. He advised Caesar to advance upon Rome at once, without waiting to offer a compromise. — nulla vi expulsi: Antonius and Q. Cassius, two of the tribunes, vetoed the senatus consultum ultimum (cf. introd. note), and although such action was strictly within the limits of their power, serious threats were made against them in the senate. Cf. Caes. B. C. 1. 2 refertur confestim de intercessione tribunorum. Dicuntur sententiae graves: ut quisque acerbissime crudelissimeque dixit, ita maxime ab inimicis Caesaris collaudatur, and according to Dio Cassius 41. 3 the consul Lentulus went so fecti erant, postea quam senatus consulibus, pr., tr. pl., et nobis qui pro cos. sumus, negotium dederat, ut curarem ne quid res p. detrimenti caperet. Numquam 3 maiore in periculo civitas fuit, numquam improbi cives habuerunt paratorem ducem. Omnino ex hac quoque parte diligentissime comparatur. Id fit auctoritate et studio Pompei nostri qui Caesarem sero coepit timere. Nobis inter has turbas senatus tamen frequens flagitavit triumphum; sed Lentulus consul, quo maius suum beneficium faceret, simul atque expedisset quae essent necessaria de re p., dixit se relaturum. Nos agimus nihil cupide, eoque est nostra plaris auctoritas. Italiae regiones discriptae sunt, quam quisque partem tuetur. Nos Capuam sumpsimus. Haec te scire volui.

far as to summon them ὑπεξελεθεῖν, πρὶν τὰς ψήφους διενεχθῆναι. The principle that the tribune could not be held responsible for his official acts seems to have been first called into question in the year 98, in the case of C. Furius, who had been tribune in the preceding year, and similar prosecutions occurred in the years 94, 86, 74, 66, and 65 B.C. (cf. Herzog, I. 1167 ff.; Madvig, Verf. u. Verw. I. 467). The case before us would seem to have been the first instance when an attempt was made to hold a tribune accountable during his term of office. As Caesar puts it, de sua salute septimo die (of the calendar year) cogitare coguntur, B. C. I. 5. Cf. also Appian, Bell. Civ. 2. 33. Cicero's words, therefore, nulla vi expulsi, while technically true, misrepresent the real state of the case. It was this infringement of the rights of the tribune which Caesar urged in justification of his advance upon Rome. — ad Caesarem: Caesar was at Ravenna. — senatus, etc.: cf. Caes. B. C. I. 5.

3. ex hac . . . parte: i.e. on the side of the Optimates. — qui . . . timere: this thought recurs frequently in the letters of the next six months; cf., e.g., Att. 8. 8. 1 (Pompeius eundem (i.e. Caesarem) repente timere coeperat, condicionem pacis nullam probarat, nihil ad bellum pararat). — senatus . . . triumphum: the right of introducing a subject rested with the presiding officer. — maius suum beneficium: a greater favor on his part, since he could arrange a triumph more worthy of Cicero after the disposal of Caesar's case. — nos Capuam sumpsimus: Cicero's principal duty was to protect Campania and raise levies there. Cf. Att. 7. 14. 2 me Pompeius Capuam venire voluit et adiuvare dilectum, in quo parum prolixè respondent Campani coloni; see also Intr. 29.

Tu etiam atque etiam cura ut valeas, litterasque ad me mittas quotienscumque habebis cui des. Etiam atque etiam vale. D. pr. Idus Ian.

XLIII. (Fam. 14. 14.)

TVLLIVS TERENCEIAE ET PATER TVLLIAE, DVABVS ANIMIS SVIS, ET CICERO MATRI OPTIMAE, SVAVISSIMAE SORORI S. P. D.

- 1 Si vos valetis, nos valemus. Vestrum iam consilium est, non solum meum, quid sit vobis faciendum. Si ille Romam modeste venturus est, recte in praesentia domi esse potestis; sin homo amens diripiendam urbem daturus est, vereor ut Dolabella ipse satis nobis prodesse possit. Etiam illud metuo, ne iam intercludamur, ut, cum velitis exire, non liceat. Reliquum est, quod ipsae optime considerabitis, vestri similes feminae sintne Romae; si enim non sunt, videndum est ut honeste vos esse possitis. Quomodo quidem nunc se res habet, modo ut haec nobis loca tenere liceat, bellissime vel mecum vel in nostris praediis esse poteritis. Etiam illud verendum est, ne brevi tempore fames in urbe sit.
- 2 His de rebus velim cum Pomponio, cum Camillo, cum quibus vobis videbitur consideretis, ad summam animo forti sitis. Labienus rem meliorem fecit; adiuvat

XLIII. Minturnae, Jan. 23, 49 B.C.

1. ille: i.e. Caesar. — ut Dolabella . . . possit: Dolabella, Tullia's husband, had joined Caesar's party, and could therefore protect Terentia and Tullia from Caesar's followers. — vestri similes: i.e. of your rank. — praediis: see Intr. 45.

2. Camillo: C. Furius Camillus, a legal friend of Cicero. — ad summam, in short; a frequent colloquial phrase. Cf. Fam. 8. 14. 4; Att. 14. 1. 1; Petron. 2, 37, 45; etc. — Labienus, etc.: cf. Fam. 16. 12. 4 (Caesar) maximam autem plagam accepit, quod is qui summam auctoritatem in illius exercitu habebat, T. Labienus, socius sceleris esse noluit;

etiam Piso, quod ab urbe discedit et sceleris condemnat generum suum. Vos, meae carissimae animae, quam saepissime ad me scribite et vos quid agatis et quid istic agatur. Quintus pater et filius et Rufus vobis s. d. Valete. VIII K. Minturnis.

XLIV. (Att. 8. 12 D.)

CN. MAGNVS PROCOS. S. D. L. DOMITIO PROCOS.

Litterae mihi a te redditae sunt a. d. XIII Kal. Martias, in quibus scribis Caesarem apud Corfinium castra posuisse. Quod putavi et praemonui fit, ut nec in praesentia committere tecum proelium velit et omnibus copiis conductis te implicet, ne ad me iter tibi reliquit illum et nobiscum est, multique idem facturi esse dicuntur; cf. also Att. 7. 13. 1 and Caes. B. G. 8. 52; B. C. 3. 13. — Piso: L. Calpurnius Piso Caesoninus, whose daughter Calpurnia was the wife of Caesar. Piso was consul in 58 B.C., and joined Cicero's enemies in helping to banish him. Cicero retaliated in the Or. in Pison. — Rufus: probably Mescinius Rufus; cf. Ep. XXXIX. 3 n.

XLIV. Luceria, Feb. 17, 49 B.C. Caesar crossed the boundary of his province Jan. 10, 49 B.C. (Nov. 22, 50 B.C., according to the Julian calendar), with a force of five cohorts, which had increased to 40,000 men by Feb. 14, when he arrived before Corfinium. In this town and its vicinity there were thirty-one cohorts (cf. Att. 8. 12 A. 1), mainly under the command of L. Domitius Ahenobarbus (cf. Ep. I. 3 n.), designated as Caesar's successor in Transalpine Gaul. Confidently expecting the arrival of Pompey, to whom he had sent letters describing his imminent danger, Domitius had neglected all preparations for defense. This letter from Pompey, declining to come to his relief, decided the fate of the town, which was delivered over to Caesar after a siege of seven days. Thus the last obstacle in the way of Caesar's advance into southern Italy was removed. The intense interest with which the Pompeians watched the course of events at Corfinium indicates the supreme importance which they attached to that struggle, and makes this letter one of the most important documents relating to the Civil War. Di immortales, qui me horror perfudit! quam sum sollicitus quidnam futurum sit, writes Cicero (Att. 8. 6. 3), upon hearing that Corfinium was besieged by Caesar. For the details of the siege, cf. Caes. B. C. 1. 19 ff.

1. implicet: the letters of Pompey contain, as we might expect, many technical military words and expeditum sit atque istas copias coniungere optimorum civium possis cum his legionibus, de quarum voluntate dubitamus; quo etiam magis tuis litteris sum commotus. Neque enim eorum militum quos mecum habeo voluntate satis confido ut de omnibus fortunis rei publicae dimicem, neque etiam, qui ex dilectibus conscripti sunt consulibus, convenerunt. Quare da operam, si ulla ratione etiam nunc efficere potes, ut te explices, huc quam primum venias, antequam omnes copiae ad adversarium conveniant. Neque enim celeriter ex dilectibus huc homines convenire possunt et, si convenirent, quantum iis committendum sit qui inter se ne noti quidem sunt contra veteranas legiones non te praeterit.

expressions. To this class implicare and explicare, which occur five times in his six letters, would seem to belong. — optimorum civium: the troops at Corfinium were made up of recruits from the Alban, Marsian, and Paelignian territory, and represented the most reliable force in Pompey's Italian army. — his legionibus: in 50 B.C. the senate required Pompey and Caesar to furnish one legion each for use in the Parthian war. Caesar obeyed, and Pompey complied by demanding of Caesar a legion which he had previously lent him. Both legions were drawn, therefore, from Caesar's army. They were not used in the Parthian war, but were stationed in Italy. Before their departure from Caesar's camp they had received the gifts of money which soldiers received in case of a triumph. This fact, coupled with their admiration for their former commander, made their devotion to the Pompeian cause doubtful. — consulibus: dat. of advantage.

2. etiam nunc: although the siege has begun. — explices: cf. implicit, 1 n. — ad adversarium: the MSS. do not contain ad, but we must either insert it or regard its omission as not unnatural in a letter from Pompey, written in haste. See Crit. Append. Pompey always speaks of Caesar as an adversarius (cf., e.g., Att. 8. 12 B. 1 (bis); 8. 12 C. 1). Probably the senate had not technically declared him an hostis (cf. Schmidt, Briefw. 112).

XLV. (Att. 8. 3.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Maximis et miserrimis rebus perturbatus, cum coram tecum mihi potestas deliberandi non esset, uti tamen tuo consilio volui. Deliberatio autem omnis haec est:
 si Pompeius Italia cedat, quod eum facturum esse suspicor, quid mihi agendum putes; et quo facilius consilium dare possis, quid in utramque partem mihi in mentem veniat explicabo brevi. Cum merita Pom-pei summa erga salutem meam familiaritasque quae mihi cum eo est, tum ipsa rei publicae causa me adducit, ut mihi vel consilium meum cum illius consilio vel fortuna mea cum illius fortuna coniungenda esse videatur. Accedit illud: si maneo et illum comitatum optimorum et clarissimorum civium desero, cadendum est in unius potestatem, qui etsi multis rebus significat se nobis esse amicum — et ut esset a me est, tute scis, propter suspicionem huius impendentis tempestatis multo ante provisum, — tamen utrumque considerandum est, et quanta fides ei sit habenda et, si maxime exploratum sit eum nobis amicum fore, sitne viri fortis

XLV. Cales, Feb. 18, 49 B.C. Cicero had received a letter from Pompey (Att. 8. 11 A) directing him to proceed to Luceria at once and join the other Pompeians. He accordingly left Formiae on Feb. 17 (cf. Att. 8. 11 D. 1) and advanced to Cales, from which place this letter was written, apparently in the night of Feb. 18. Finding his way blocked by Caesar's troops, he turned back (cf. 7) and was in Formiae again Feb. 21.

2. erga salutem meam: sc. in helping to secure his recall from exile. — unius: i.e. Caesaris. — provisum: in 56 B.C. Cicero had placated Caesar by withdrawing his opposition to certain of Caesar's agrarian laws (Q. fr. 2. 6 [8]. 2), by speaking in favor of a grant of money to Caesar's troops (de Prov. Cons. 28), by extolling Caesar's success in Gaul, and by opposing the withdrawal of a province from him (ibid. 17-35), and in 54 B.C.

et boni civis esse in ea urbe, in qua cum summis hono-ribus imperiisque usus sit, res maximas gesserit, sacerdotio sit amplissimo praeditus, non futurus sit qui fuerit, subeundumque periculum sit cum aliquo fore dedecore, si quando Pompeius rem publicam recipe-3 rarit. In hac parte haec sunt; vide nunc quae sint in altera. Nihil actum est a Pompeio nostro sapienter, nihil fortiter; addo etiam, nihil nisi contra consilium auctoritatemque meam. Omitto illa vetera, quod istum in rem publicam ille aluit, auxit, armavit, ille legibus per vim et contra auspicia ferendis auctor, ille Galliae ulterioris adiunctor, ille gener; ille in adoptando P. Clo-dio augur, ille restituendi mei quam retinendi studio-

by defending some of Caesar's friends. — summum honoribus imperiisque: i.e. as praetor and consul. The connection precludes any reference to the military imperium which he had just held as proconsul. — sacerdotio: cf. Ep. XXXIV. 13 n. The most plausible conjecture for the emendation of this passage is to insert sit qui fuerit with Lehmann. The meaning then is: 'whether it is proper for a brave man and a good citizen to remain in a city in which, after enjoying the most exalted positions of honor and power, . . . he will not be the man he was, and must undergo the risk of bringing some shame upon himself, etc.' See Crit. Append. — fore: in apposition to and explanatory of periculum. Ne with the subj. would be a more natural construction, but cf. de Or. 2. 334 cum subest ille timor, ea (utilitate) neglecta ne dignitatem quidem posse retineri. The statement of one side of the question, which began with 2, comes to an end with this sentence.

3. istum: i.e. Caesarem. — ille: i.e. Pompeius. — legibus . . . ferendis: i.e. the laws whose passage Caesar effected in his consulship in 59 B.C. For Pompey's attitude toward these laws, cf. Att. 2. 16. 2. When Caesar's agrarian law, assigning lands to Pompey's veterans, came before the people, Bibulus and Cato, the leaders of the opposition, were treated with great roughness; cf. Plut. Cat. Min. 32; Suet. Jul. 20. — contra auspicia: to the many attempts which the Optimates made to postpone the comitia on religious grounds (cf. Dio Cass. 38. 6) Caesar paid little heed. — Galliae . . . adiunctor: Caesar's third province (cf. Intr. 13) was voluntarily added by the senate, probably through the influence of Pompey. — gener: sc. by his marriage to Caesar's daughter Julia. — ille . . . augur: Pompey was present at the meeting of the comitia curiata when Clodius was adopted, and, as augur, could have prevented the adoption. Cf. Att. 2. 12. 1. — restituendi mei, etc.: the sior, ille provinciae propagator, ille absentis in omnibus adiutor, idem etiam tertio consulatu, postquam esse defensor rei publicae coepit, contendit ut decem tribuni pl. ferrent, ut absentis ratio haberetur, quod idem ipse sanxit lege quadam sua, Marcoque Marcello consuli finienti provincias Gallias Kalendarum Martiarum die restitit. Sed ut haec omittam, quid foedius, quid perturbatius hoc ab urbe discessu sive potius turpissima fuga? Quae condicio non accipienda fuit potius quam relinquenda patria? Malae condiciones erant, fateor, sed num quid hoc peius? 'At reciperebit rem publicam.' Quando? aut quid ad eam spem est parati? Non ager Picens amissus? Non patefactum iter ad urbem? Non pecunia omnis et publica et privata adversario tradita? Denique nulla causa, nullae vires, reference is to Cicero's exile. Although Pompey exerted himself personally to secure Cicero's recall, he had not interfered to prevent his banishment; cf. Att. 10. 4. 3 qui se nihil contra huius (i.e. Caesaris) voluntatem aiebat facere posse. — ille . . . propagator : through the lex Pompeia Licinia (cf. Intr. 26), passed in Pompey's consulship, and perhaps proposed by him. Upon substantives in -tor, cf. Intr. 75. See also auctor, adiunctor, adiutor, and defensor in this passage. — ut . . . haberetur : i.e. that Caesar might be accepted as a candidate without coming to Rome. Cf. Ep. XLII. introd. note, and Intr. 26. — Marco Marcello : one of the consuls in 51 B.C. — finienti : by a bill looking to the displacement of Caesar Mar. 1, 50 B.C.; cf. Fam. 8. 8. 9. — provincias : cf. Galliae adiunctor, above. — condiciones : apparently the last proposals for peace were those submitted to the Pompeians at Teanum Sidicinum, Jan. 25, to the effect that Caesar should disband his army, hand over the provinces to his successors, and sue for the consulship in the regular way, while Pompey was to depart for Spain, and Italy to disarm; cf. Fam. 16. 12. 3; Caes. B. C. 1. 8-11. — hoc, etc. : the desertion of Rome, the flight of Pompey, and the prospective abandonment of Italy.

4. pecunia omnis : cf. Caes. B. C. 1. 14 quibus rebus Romam nuntiatis tantus repente terror invasit ut, cum Lentulus consul ad aperiendum aerarium venisset ad pecuniam Pompeio ex senatus consulto proferendam, protinus aperto sanctiore aerario ex urbe profugeret. — nulla causa : Cicero recognized now the fact that the plans of Pompey were as selfish as those of Caesar; cf. Att. 8. 11. 2 dominatio quaesita ab utroque est, nulla sedes quo concurrant qui rem publicam defensam velint. Apulia delecta est, inanissima pars Italiae et ab impetu huius belli remotissima; fuga et maritima opportunitas visa quaeri desperatione. Invite cepi Capuam, non quo munus illud defugerem, sed pacis causa, in qua nullus esset ordinum, nullus apertus privatorum dolor, bonorum autem esset aliquis, sed hebes, ut solet. Sed ut ipse sensi quam esset multitudo et infimus quisque propensus in alteram partem, quam multi mutationis rerum cupidi, dixi ipsi me nihil suscepturum sine praesidio et sine pecunia. Itaque habui nihil omnino negoti, quod ab initio vidi nihil quaeri praeter fugam. Eam si nunc sequor, quonam? Cum illo non; ad quem cum essem profectus, cognovi in iis locis esse Caesarem ut tuto Luceriam venire non possem. Infero mari nobis incerto cursu, hieme non id actum, beata et honesta civitas ut esset. . . . Sed neutri o kowds est ille ut nos beati simus; uterque regnare vult. — defensam (sc. esse): cf. Cic. Cat. 2. 27 monitos etiam atque etiam volo. The perfect infinitive passive, usually as here without esse, after verbs of wishing (especially after volo) is commoner in Cicero, in whose writings it occurs at least 26 times (cf. Ziemer, Junggrammat. Streifzüge, pp. 76 ff.), than in any other author. It indicates the impatience with which the realization of a wish is awaited. — Apulia: Pompey's headquarters were at Luceria; cf. Ep. XLIV. and Intr. 29. — cepi, sensi, dixi, habui, et vidi are preterites. Cicero had already resigned his position at Capua. Cf. Intr. 29. — dolor, sympathy. — multitudo et infimus quisque: cf. Mommsen, Rom.

Hist. IV. 453: 'In fact Caesar's antecedents were anything but reassuring, and still less reassuring was the aspect of the retinue that now surrounded him. Individuals of the most broken reputation, notorious personages like Quintus Hortensius, Gaius Curio, Marcus Antonius — the latter the stepson of the Catilinarian Lentulus, who was executed by the orders of Cicero — were the most prominent actors in it; the highest posts of trust were bestowed on men who had long ceased even to reckon up their debts.' Cf. also Att. 9. 19. 1. — ipsi: i.e. Pompeio.

5. nihil . . . fugam: cf. Att. 7. 23. 3 quod quaeris hic quid agatur, tota Capua et omnis hic dilectus iacet, desperata res est, in fuga omnes sunt. — essem profectus: see introd. note. — hieme maxima, in mid-winter; cf.

maxima navigandum est. Age iam, cum fratre an sine eo cum filio? an quomodo? In utraque enim re summa difficultas erit, summus animi dolor. Qui autem impetus illius erit in nos absentes fortunasque nostras? acrior quam in ceterorum, quod putabit fortasse in nobis violandis aliquid se habere populare. Age iam, has compedes, fasces, inquam, hos laureatos efferre ex Italia quam molestum est! Qui autem locus erit nobis tutus, ut iam placatis utamur fluctibus, antequam ad illum venerimus? qua autem aut quo, nihil sciemus. At si restitero et fuerit nobis in hac parte locus, idem fecero quod in Cinnae dominatione L. Philippus, quod multa nocte. — age iam: age with or without the adverbs iam, ergo, igitur, etc., or duplicated (age, age), is common in colloquial Latin to give force to a question, concession, or command; cf. age, age ut lubet, Ter. And. 310; age, da veniam filio, Ter. Ad. 937. — cum fratre: Quintus had been Caesar's legate, and his espousal of Pompey's cause would seem an act of ingratitude, and bring down the wrath of Caesar upon both Quintus and his brother. — illius: i.e. Caesaris. — populare: Cicero, although respected by the Italian peasantry, was thoroughly unpopular with the democracy of Rome. Cf. Att. 8. 11 D. 7 ut mea persona semper ad improborum civium impetus aliquid videretur habere populare. — fasces . . . laureatos: in hopes of a triumph for his military successes in Cilicia, he still retained the insignia of an imperator, although the retention of them exposed him to ridicule. Cf. Att. 7. 10. 1 subito consilium cepi, ut ante quam lucret exirem, ne qui conspectus feret aut sermo, lictori-

bus praesertim laureatis. This picture of Cicero lends a touch of comedy to the tragedy of the Civil War. — ut . . . utamur: a hortatory clause with a concessive force. — illum: i.e. Pompeium. — qua: sc. via.

6. in hac parte: i.e. in Italy. Cicero's reference to a retreat from Italy on the part of the Pompeians is in the nature of a prophecy. In so far as official information had been given out, a stand was to be made at Luceria. Strangely enough, however, only the day before this letter was written Pompey had ordered his forces to collect at Brundisium with a view to crossing to Dyrrachium (cf. Att. 8. 12 A. 3), but Cicero did not know this. — in Cinnae dominatione: when Marius and Cinna in 87 B.C. approached Rome, many of the Optimates fled, as the same class of men did on the approach of Caesar, but Philippus, Flaccus, and Mucius remained in the city, and Mucius (Q. Mucius Scaevola) was murdered a few years

L. Flaccus, quod Q. Mucius, quoquo modo ea res huic quidem cecidit; qui tamen ita dicere solebat, se id fore videre quod factum est, sed malle quam armatum ad patriae moenia accedere. Aliter Thrasybulus, et fortasse melius; sed est certa quaedam illa Muci ratio atque sententia, est illa etiam, et, cum sit necesse, servire tempori et non amittere tempus, cum sit datum. Sed in hoc ipso habent tamen iidem fascēs molestiam. Sit enim nobis amicus, quod incertum est, sed sit, deferet triumphum: non accipere ne periculosum sit, accipere invidiosum ad bonos. 'O rem,' inquis, 'difficilem et inexplicabilem!' Atqui explicanda est; qui autem fieri potest? Ac ne me existimaris ad manendum esse propensioem, quod plura in eam partem verba fecerim, potest fieri, quod fit in multis quaestionibus, ut res verbosior haec fuerit, illa verior. Quamobrem ut maxima de re aequo animo deliberanti, ita mihi des consilium velim. Navis et in Caieta est parata
7 nobis et Brundisi. Sed ecce nuntii scribente me haec ipsa noctu in Caleno, ecce litterae, Caesarem ad Corfinium, Domitium Corfini cum firmo exercitu et pugnare cupiente. Non puto etiam hoc Gnaeum nostrum commissurum ut Domitium relinquat, etsi Brundisium Sci-

later.—quoquo modo, etc., however that decision turned out in his case.—malle: sc. perire.—Thrasylbulus (sc. fecit): he left Athens when the Thirty Tyrants came into power, but returned to drive them out; cf. Xen. Hell. 2. 3. 42; 2. 4.—sit (enim): sc. Caesar.—non accipere, (I am afraid) that not to accept (a triumph) may be a perilous thing (as far as Caesar is concerned), that to accept it may be shameful in the eyes of good citizens. Something like vereor is understood before ne, as in de Fin. 5. 8 sed ne, dum huic obsequor, vobis molestus sim. Cf. also Tac. Hist. 3. 46.—res . . . haec: i.e. the advisability of staying in Italy.—Caieta: Cicero had an estate here.

7. ecce: cf. Ep. XXXV. 23 n.—Corfinium: see introd. to Ep. XLIV.—ut . . . relinquat: Pompey's refusal to relieve Corfinium, which Ep. XLIV. contains, was pionem cum cohortibus duabus praemisera, legionem Fausto conscriptam in Siciliam sibi placere a consule duci scripserat ad consules. Sed turpe Domitium deseri implorantem eius auxilium. Est quaedam spes, mihi quidem non magna, sed in his locis firma, Afranium in Pyrenaeo cum Trebonio pugnas, pulsum Trebonium, etiam Fabium tuum transisse cum cohortibus, summa autem, Afranium cum magnis copiis advenire. Id si est, in Italia fortasse manebit. Ego autem, cum esset incertum iter Caesaris, quod vel ad Capuam vel ad Luceriam iturus putabatur, Leptam ad Pompeium misi et litteras; ipse ne quo inciderem not yet known to Cicero. Cf. in hac parte, 6 n. — Scipionem: cf. Ep. I. 3 n. — Fausto: Faustus, the son of L. Cornelius Sulla, was the son-in-law of Pompey. The dat. Fausto for a Fausto comes under the principle stated by Madvig on de Fin. I. 11 'that the dative, when thus used, contains some idea of advantage, so that the thing is thought of as having been done not only by some one but for some one, as with the verb quaero.' — Afranium: cf. Auli filium, Ep. V. 12 n. — in Pyrenaeo: the hopes of the Pompeians were fixed upon relief from Spain; cf. dilectus enim magnos habebamus putabamusque illum metuere, si ad urbem ire coepisset, ne Gallias amitteret, quas ambas habet inimicissimas praeter Transpadanos, ex Hispaniaque sex legiones et magna auxilia Afranio et Petreio ducibus habet a tergo, Fam. 16. 12. 4. — Trebonio: C. Trebonius was rewarded for the services which he rendered to Caesar during his tribunate by being appointed as Caesar's legate in Gaul, where he was still in command. Later he became praetor urbanus, and through Caesar's influence propraetor of Spain. He, however, joined the conspirators against Caesar's life in 44 B.C. He was murdered in Syria in the same year by Dolabella, being thus the first one of the liberatores to suffer for his connection with that plot. — Fabium: another of Caesar's legates in Gaul. The reports that he had deserted, and that Trebonius had been defeated, were without foundation; cf. Caes. B. C. I. 40. — transisse, has come over to our side. The desertion of Labienus, the most trusted and skilful of Caesar's lieutenants, gave the Pompeians great hopes of further defections from Caesar's forces, and the air was full of rumors of such desertions. — magnis copiis: Afranius, Petreius, and Varro had seven legions and a large number of auxiliary troops in Spain; cf. Caes. B. C. I. 38. — Leptam: see Ep. XXXV. 22 n. — litteras: the letter has not been preserved. — ne quo inciderem: cf. cognovi, etc., 5

reverti Formias. Haec te scire volui scripsique sedatione animo quam proxime scripseram, nullum meum iudicium interponens, sed exquirens tuum.

XLVI. (Att. 8. 13.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

1 Lippitudinis meae signum tibi sit librari manus et eadem causa brevitatis, etsi nunc quidem quod scriberem nihil erat. Omnis exspectatio nostra erat in nuntiis Brundisinis. Si nactus hic esset Gnaeum nostrum, spes dubia pacis, sin ille ante tramisisset, exitiosi belli metus. Sed videsne in quem hominem inciderit res publica? quam acutum, quam vigilantem, quam paratum? Si mehercule neminem occiderit nec cuiquam quicquam ademerit, ab iis qui eum maxime 2 timuerant maxime diligitur. Multum mecum municipales homines loquuntur, multum rusticani. Nihil prorsus aliud curant nisi agros, nisi villulas, nisi nummulos suos. Et vide quam conversa res est: illum quo antea confidebant metuunt, hunc amant quem

XLVI. Formiae, March 1, 49 B.C.

1. librari manus: cf. Intr. 64. — hic: i.e. Caesar. — ille: i.e. Pompey. — tramisisset: sc. the Adriatic. — quam acutum, etc.: of course descriptive of Caesar.

2. villulas, nummulos: cf. Intr. 76. — quam conversa res est: in Plautus the indicative was frequently used in what seem to be indir. questions, especially after certain imperatives and imperative questions (cf. Morris's Pseudolus, v. 262, and E. Becker, De Syntaxi Interrogationum Obliquarum, etc.). In this passage we have a survival of that usage after vide. Cf. hoc sis (= si vis) vide, ut alias res agunt, Plaut. Pseud. 152. See also Intr. 84 a and quam sollicitus sum, Ep. XLVIII. 1 n. — hunc: i.e. Caesarem. The petty landed proprietors had dreaded Caesar because of his supposed revolutionary principles, his previous extravagance and bankruptcy in Rome, his former political associates, and his present followers. Cf. multitudo, Ep. XLV. 4 n. The dread of these people had been turned into affection by the generosity with which Caesar had treated the inhabitants of the captured towns (cf. Caes. B. C. I. 21- timebant. Id quantis nostris peccatis vitiisque venerit non possum sine molestia cogitare; quæ autem impendere putarem, scripseram ad te et iam tuas litteras exspectabam.

XLVII. (Att. 9. 6 A.)

CAESAR IMP. S. D. CICERONI IMP.

Cum Furnium nostrum tantum vidissem, neque loqui neque audire meo commodo potuissem, properarem atque essem in itinere præmissis iam legionibus, præterire tamen non potui quin et scriberem ad te et illum mitterem gratiasque agerem, etsi hoc et feci sæpe et sæpius mihi facturus videor: ita de me mere ris. Imprimis a te peto, quoniam confido me celeriter ad urbem venturum, ut te ibi videam, ut tuo consilio gratia dignitate ope omnium rerum uti possim. Ad

23), by the vigor with which he protected their own lives and property, and by his policy of not confiscating the estates even of his enemies. This letter may be well compared with Ep. XLVIII. 1.

XLVII. March 2-5, 49 B.C. The phrase essem in itinere indicates that this letter was written while Caesar was hastening to Brundisium to intercept Pompey if possible, before he should escape from Italy. Caesar reached Brundisium Mar. 9 (Att. 9. 13 A. 1). Cicero sent this letter to Atticus with one of his own (cf. Att. 9. 6.6).

Furnium: an ex-tribune, and a friend of Caesar and Cicero, to whom Fam. 10. 25 and 26 are addressed. — præterire: Cicero was still at Formiæ. — tuo consilio . . . ope: Caesar made strenuous efforts to induce Cicero to return to Rome and lend him the benefit of his influence, and Cicero kept up a correspondence with him in the hope of terminating the Civil War. Three weeks later a conference took place between them (cf. Intr. 29 f.) which led Cicero to give up all hope of a peaceful settlement of the difficulty. Cf. consilio, Ep. XLIX. 1 n. The proposal which Caesar made in this letter was left unanswered, since Cicero was at this moment waiting for some decisive news from Brundisium (cf. Att. 9. 7. 5), and also distrusted Caesar's purposes; cf. Att. 9. 7. 5 noli enim putare tolerabiles horum insanias nec unius modi fore. . . . Legibus iudicis senatu sublato, libidines audacias sumptus egestates tot egentissimorum hominum nec privatas posse res nec rem publicam sustinere.

propositum revertar: festinationi meae brevitatque litterarum ignosces; reliqua ex Furnio cognosces.

XLVIII. (Fam. 8. 15.)

CAELIVS CICERONI S.

1. Ecquando tu hominem ineptiorem quam tuum Cn. Pompeium vidisti, qui tantas turbas, qui tam nugax esset, commorit? Ecquem autem Caesare nostro acriorem in rebus gerendis, eodem in victoria temperationem aut legisti aut audisti? Quid est? Nunc tibi nostri milites, qui durissimis et frigidissimis locis, taeterrima hieme bellum ambulando confecerunt, malis orbiculatis esse pasti videntur? 'Quid iam?' inquis. Gloriose omnia. Si scias quam sollicitus sum, tum XLVIII. Place of writing unknown; about March 9, 49 B.C.

1. tuum: opposed to nostro below. — nugax: adjectives in ax are found relatively much more frequently in colloquial Latin; cf., e.g., Plaut. Pers. 410, 421; Capt. 959; Petron. 43; 132. Cicero in his own letters uses only one such adjective, tagax (Att. 6. 3. 1). In the letters to Cicero we find minax (Fam. 11. 3. 1); pugnax (Fam. 8. 13. 1 and 10. 31. 5); efficax (Fam. 8. 10. 3); sagax (Fam. 10. 23. 4), and nugax here. — commorit: for syncopation in the Letters, cf. Intr. 82. The loss of v in the perfect tenses of moveo and its compounds is peculiar, since the lost letter is not the sign of the perfect system but belongs to the stem. Cf. Priscian, 10. 3. 16 (Keil, II. 508), upon this point. — temperationem: cf. hunc, Ep. XLVI. 2 n. — quid est? nunc tibi, etc., well! do our soldiers, who in the roughest and coldest sort of a country, in the most abominable winter weather, have promenaded through the war, seem to you to have dined on truffles? Caesar crossed the Rubicon Jan. 10, 49 B.C., of the old calendar, but as the time of year was really late autumn, the season was not in itself unfavorable to military operations; but his troops had been obliged to make a difficult passage over the Apennines. In this campaign of two months Caesar had invested northern Italy, and made 30,000 men prisoners of war without a serious engagement. Upon quid est, cf. Intr. 98. — ambulando confecerunt and malis orbiculatis esse pasti look like proverbial expressions. The malum orbiculatum, a fine fruit so named from its shape, was regarded as a great delicacy. — gloriose omnia: sc. facta sunt. — quam sollicitus sum: this MSS. reading need hanc meam gloriam, quae ad me nihil pertinet, derideas; quae tibi exponere nisi coram non possum, idque celeriter fore spero; nam me, cum expulisset ex Italia Pompeium, constituit ad urbem vocare; id quod iam existimo confectum, nisi si maluit Pompeius Brundisi circumsederi. Peream si minima causa est properandi 2 isto mihi, quod te videre et omnia intima conferre discupio; habeo autem quam multa. Hui vereor, quod solet fieri, ne, cum te videro, omnia obliviscar. Sed tamen quod ob scelus iter mihi necessarium retro ad Alp̄is versus incidit? Adeo, quod Intimeli in armis sunt, neque de magna causa. Bellienus, verna Demetri, qui ibi cum praesidio erat, Domitium quendam, nobilem illi, Caesaris hospitem, a contraria factione not excite surprise in so colloquial a letter; cf. quam conversa, etc., Ep. XLVI. 2 n. See also Ter. And. 650, and Spengel on Ter. And. 45. — quae . . . pertinet: the failure of Caelius to share in Caesar's glory is explained by nam me, etc. — quae (tibi): with reference to the general statements of the preceding sentence, especially the anxiety of Caelius. — expulisset: sc. Caesar. — id quod: with reference to the expulsion of Pompey from Italy. — nisi si: cf. nisi si, Ep. XIII. 1 n.

2. peream si: cf. ne vivam, Ep. IV. 4 n. — isto: archaic form; cf. Servius on Verg. Aen. 8. 423 pro huc hoc veteres dicere solebant, sicut pro illuc illo dicimus. See also Intr. 81. In isto the demonstrative particle -c(e) is lacking, as it is in illi below. — discupio, etc., I am dying to see you, etc. Verbs intensified by the addition of dis- belong exclusively to colloquial

Latin, and are similar in meaning to those compounded with per (cf. Intr. 77). Cicero allows such compounds, when not applied to physical matters, only in his more informal writings (cf. discrucio, Att. 14. 6. 1; dilaudo, Att. 4. 17. 5), but in Latin comedy a considerable list of them is found, — discaveo, discrucio, discupio, disperdo, disperco, disputet, distaedet. — quam: not to be regarded as exclamatory ('how many!'), but as intensive; cf. reiecit se in eum flens quam familiariter, Ter. And. 136. We should then consider the phrase elliptical (tam multa quam habere possum). — hui: like hem (Ep. XIII. 2) confined to colloquial Latin; cf., e.g., Plaut. Truc. 29; Rud. 154. See also Intr. 92. — ad Alp̄is versus: the combination ad . . . versus occurs in Caesar, Sallust, and Livy, but not in Cicero. Versus is to be taken adverbially with the preposition. It emphasizes the direction. — illi: for illic; see nummis acceptis comprehendit et strangulavit; civitas ad arma iit; eo nunc cum VIII cohortibus mihi per nives eundum est. 'Vsque quaque,' inquis, 'se Domitii male dant.' Vellem quidem Venere prognatus tantum animi habuisset in vestro Domitio, quantum Psacade natus in hoc habuit. Ciceroni f. s. d.

XLIX. (Att. 9. 11 A.)

CICERO IMP. S. D. CAESARI IMP.

I Vt legi tuas litteras, quas a Furnio nostro acceperam, quibus mecum agebas ut ad urbem essem, te velle

note on isto above. — se . . . dant, the Domitii are everywhere going wrong. One Domitius surrendered Corfinium, and another has now let himself be killed, so that Caelius is obliged to make a long march to the Alps in the middle of winter. On se dare, see advoules, Ep. XXV. 4 n. — Venere prognatus: i.e. Caesar, who claimed to be descended from Venus. — Psacade natus: i.e. Bellienus. Psacas (Ψακάς) means a 'crumb,' 'morsel,' or anything insignificant. Psacade natus would therefore mean 'the son of a nobody,' and is coined by Caelius to offset Venere prognatus. He wishes that Caesar had shown as much sternness in putting Domitius Ahenobarbus to death after the capture of Corfinium as Bellienus had shown in the case of the other Domitius. — f. s. d.: for filio salutem dices; cf. nos diliges, Ep. XVIII. (end) n. and Intr. 62. The admiration which Caelius felt for Caesar, and his enthusiasm for the latter's brilliant campaign, give to the letter an extravagant and unconventional tone, which naturally finds expression in the use of colloquial and archaic words and phrases. Cf. the notes on nugax, commorit, ambulando confecerunt, malis orbiculatis, etc., quam sollicitus sum, nisi si, peream si, isto, illi, discupio, quam multa, hui, and se . . . dant. The style of the letter confirms the judgment of Tacitus in regard to Caelius (Dial. 21): Sordes autem illae verborum et hians compositio et inconditi sensus redolent antiquitatem, nec quemquam adeo antiquarium puto ut Caelium ex ea parte laudet qua antiquus est.

XLIX. Formiae, March 19 (or 20), 49 B.C. Cicero's reply to Ep. XLVII. A copy of it was forwarded to Atticus with Att. 9. 11 (cf. Att. 9. 11, end). Cicero still cherishes the hope that he may be able to effect a reconciliation between Caesar and Pompey, and with that object in view, and perhaps also to present himself in a favorable light before Caesar, he emphasizes the neutrality of his course thus far, and condemns the radical steps taken by the Pompeians. Caesar's definite request that Cicero should come to Rome and assist him in restoring public order is not answered categorically. This letter was published, and called forth some unfavorable criticism. For Cicero's own interpretation of certain parts of it, cf. Att. 8. 9. 1 f.

uti consilio et dignitate mea minus sum admiratus; de gratia et de ope quid significares, mecum ipse quaerebam, spe tamen deducebar ad eam cogitationem, ut te pro tua admirabili ac singulari sapientia de otio, de pace, de concordia civium agi velle arbitrarer, et ad eam rationem existimabam satis aptam esse et naturam et personam meam. Quod si ita est et si qua de Pompeio nostro tuendo et tibi ac rei publicae reconciliando cura te attingit, magis idoneum quam ego sum ad eam causam profecto reperies neminem, qui et illi semper et senatui, cum primum potui, pacis auctor fui, nec sumptis armis belli ullam partem attigi, iudicavique eo bello te violari, contra cuius honorem populi Romani beneficio concessum inimici atque invidi niterentur.

1. consilio: in the letter to Atticus accompanying this epistle Cicero writes: huic (i.e. Matio) ego in multo sermone epistulam ad me Caesaris ostendi, eam, cuius exemplum ad te antea misi, rogavique ut interpretaretur quid esset quod ille scriberet, 'consilio meo se uti velle gratia dignitate ope rerum omnium.' Respondit se non dubitare quin et opem et gratiam meam ille ad pacificationem quaereret, Att. 9. 11. 2; cf. also Att. 9. 16. 1. — admirabili: for Cicero's explanation of his use of this adj., cf. Att. 8. 9. 1. — de pace: Caesar, after his return to Rome from Brundisium, proposed to negotiate with Pompey, and the senate approved the plan, but no one was willing to act as envoy (cf. Caes. B. C. I. 32, 33). — naturam: sc. as a man of peace, and not inclined to extremes in politics.

2. magis idoneum: see introd. note to Ep. XLII. and mederi, Ep. XLII. 2 n. — cum primum potui: sc. after Jan. 4, on his arrival from Cilicia. Cf. Fam. 4. 1. 1; 16. 12. 2; 4. 14. 2; Vell. Pat. 2. 48. 5. — belli: Cicero is thinking of the fact that he had not accompanied the Pompeians in their flight. Furthermore, he had done practically nothing to levy recruits for the Pompeians in Campania. Cf. nihil fugam, Ep. XLV. 5 n. While Cicero's statement in the text seems to be true, it does not harmonize with the impression which he sought to convey to Pompey a month earlier; cf. Att. 8. 11 B. 2. See also Att. 7. 14. 2. — beneficio: with reference to the law passed in 52 B.C. giving Caesar the right to sue for the consulship while absent from the city. Cf. Ep. XLII. introd. note, and Intr. 26.

Sed, ut eo tempore non modo ipse fautor dignitatis tuae fui, verum etiam ceteris auctor ad te adiuvandum, sic me nunc Pompei dignitas vehementer movet; aliquot enim sunt anni cum vos duo delegi quos praecipue colerem et quibus essem, sicut sum, amicissimus.

3 Quamobrem a te peto vel potius omnibus te precibus oro et obtestor ut in tuis maximis curis aliquid impertias temporis huic quoque cogitationi, ut tuo beneficio bonus vir, gratus, pius denique esse in maximi benefici memoria possim. Quae si tantum ad me ipsum pertinerent, sperarem me a te tamen impetraturum, sed, ut arbitror, et ad tuam fidem et ad rem publicam pertinet me, et pacis et utriusque vestrum amicum, ad vestram et ad civium concordiam per te quam accommodatissimum conservari. Ego, cum antea tibi de Lentulo gratias egissem, cum ei salutem, qui mihi fuerat, fuisses, tum lectis eius litteris quas ad me gratissimo animo de tua liberalitate beneficioque misit, eandem me salutem a te accepisse putavi quam ille; in quem si me intellegis esse gratum, cura, obsecro, ut etiam in Pompeium esse possim.

3. aliquid impertias temporis: for Cicero's comments on this phrase, see Att. 8. 9. 1. — tuo beneficio: sc. in not forcing him to give up his neutrality, and thus losing a chance to help Pompey. — pius: sc. in remembering the duty he owed to his old friend Pompey. — ad tuam fidem: Caesar steadily maintained that he desired peace. — per te . . . conservari: i.e. that I be not constrained to appear at Rome and thus lose my neutral position, and with it my ability to secure a peaceful solution of the present difficulty. — de Lentulo: Cicero had thanked Caesar in a previous letter for his generosity in allowing Lentulus Spinther, who had been captured at Corfinium, to go free. For Caesar's reply, cf. Att. 9. 16. At this time Lentulus was at Puteoli; cf. Att. 9. 11. 1. — qui . . . fuerat: in 57 B.C. Lentulus as consul had worked for Cicero's recall from exile. Cf. also Ep. XIV. 2.

L. (Fam. 8. 16.)

CAELIVS CICERONI S.

Exanimatus tuis litteris, quibus te nihil nisi triste cogitare ostendisti, neque id quid esset perscripti, neque non tamen quale esset quod cogitares aperuisti, has ad te ilico litteras scripsi. Per fortunas tuas, Cicero, per liberos oro obsecro ne quid gravius de salute et incolumitate tua consulas; nam deos hominesque amicitiamque nostram testifcor me tibi praedixi neque temere monuisse, sed postquam Caesarem convenierim sententiamque eius, qualis futura esset parta victoria, cognorim, te certiozem fecisse. Si existimas

L. Intimelium, April 16, 49 B.C. This letter also appears in the collection of letters to Atticus, Att. 10. 9 A.

1. tuis litteris: in this letter, which has not been preserved, Cicero must have conveyed the impression that he intended to join the Pompeians. — nihil nisi triste: attributive acc. Cf. Intr. 83 a; see also Stinner, 58, n. 2; Becher, 31. — perscripti: for perscriptisti; cf. praedixi for praedixisse, below. Cf. Intr. 82. — Cicero: the earnestness of Caelius is shown by his use of the vocative Cicero twice in this letter. It occurs but once elsewhere in his letters. — oro obsecro: the use of such double expressions is especially common in colloquial language. The writer or speaker seeks to bring the idea home by coupling words or phrases which have essentially the same meaning. Cf., e.g., in this letter, salute et incolumitate, 1; atrox et saevum, 1; sciens prudensque, 5; insolentiam et iactationem, 5. — testifcor: for the fondness of colloquial Latin for facere in various phrases, see Intr. 89. As for words compounded with facio, in early Latin their number was limited, but in the Vulgate there is a host of such verbs as beatificare, castificare, damnificare, and this formation gave rise in turn to certifier, notifier, etc., in the Romance languages, so that the formation supports the view that the Romance languages were derived not from literary but from colloquial Latin. Cf. also civitate, Ep. LII. 3 n.; quicquid in buccam, Ep. LXIX. 2 n. — sententiam: a kind of prolepsis especially frequent in comedy; see Draeger, Hist. Syn. II. 498, and cf. Plaut. Trin. 373 scin tu illum quo genere gnatus sit? Plaut. Men. 247 ego illum scio quam carus sit cordi meo, etc. Caelius himself writes similarly (Fam. 8. 10. 3): nosti Marcellum quam tardus sit. In general, cf. Reising-Schmalz, Lat. Syn. n. 554 and Ziemer's Junggramma-

eandem rationem fore Caesaris in dimittendis adversariis et condicionibus ferendis, erras. Nihil nisi atrox et saevum cogitat atque etiam loquitur. Iratus senatui exiit, his intercessionibus plane incitatus est; non mehercules erit deprecationi locus. Quare, si tibi tu, si filius unicus, si domus, si spes tuae reliquaë tibi carae sunt, si aliquid apud te nos, si vir optimus, gener tuus, valemus, quorum fortunam non debes velle conturbare, ut eam causam, in quouis victoria salus nostra est, odisse aut relinquere cogamur aut impiam cupiditatem contra salutem tuam habeamus — denique illud cogita, quod offensae fuerit in ista cunctatione, te subisse; nunc te contra victorem Caesarem facere, quem dubiis rebus laedere noluisti, et ad eos fugatos accedere quos resistentis sequi nolueris, summae stultitiae est. Vide ne, dum pudet te parum optimate esse, parum diligenter quid optimum sit eligas. Quod si totum tibi tische Streifzüge, 60 ff. — eandem rationem : i.e. as in the case of Domitius at Corfinium. — nihil cogitat : see note on nihil nisi triste, above. — exiit : sc. ex urbe; for the reason of Caesar's anger, see Caes. B. C. 1. 33. — intercessionibus : the tribune L. Metellus forbade Caesar's removal of the treasure from the temple of Saturn, and opposed all his plans in the senate. — mehercules : cf. mercule, Ep. XXV. 3 n.

2. domus : Cicero's family were, however, urging him to join the Pompeians. Cf. Att. 9. 6. 4 praesertim cum ii ipsi, quorum ego causa timidus me fortunae committebam, uxor filia Cicerones pueri me illud (i.e. the cause of Pompey) sequimalent, hoc turpe et me indignum putarent; nam Quintus quidem frater, quicquid mihi placeret, id rectum se putare aiebat, id animo aequissimo sequebatur. — gener tuus : P. Cornelius Dolabella, who was a pronounced Caesarian. — illud cogita : see note on nihil, 1. — offensae : on offensa, Meyer (De Ciceronis in epistolis ad Atticum sermone, 17) says : 'used only in conversation.' Cicero himself does not use the word even in his letters, employing offensio in its stead. The more colloquial writers of a later period, however (e.g. Plin., Suet., and Petron.), use it frequently. — optimate . . . optimum : the singular form optimate, which is very rare in Latin, is used here for the sake of the pun with optimum. 'Don't be so good a nobleman as to shut your eyes to what is noble.'

persuadere non possum, saltem dum quid de Hispaniis agamus scitur exspecta; quas tibi nuntio adventu Caesaris fore nostras. Quam isti spem habeant amissis Hispaniis nescio; quod porro tuum consilium sit ad desperatos accedere, non medius fidius reperio. Hoc, 4 quod tu non dicendo mihi significasti, Caesar audierat ac simulatque 'Have' mihi dixit, statim quid de te audisset exposuit. Negavi me scire, sed tamen ab eo petii ut ad te litteras mitteret quibus maxime ad remanendum commoveri posses. Me secum in Hispaniam ducit; nam, nisi ita faceret, ego prius quam ad urbem accederem, ubicumque esses, ad te percurrissem et hoc a te praesens contendissem atque omni vi te retinuissem. Etiam atque etiam, Cicero, cogita ne te tuos- 5 que omnis funditus evertas, ne te sciens prudensque eo demittas unde exitum vides nullum esse. Quod si te aut voces optimatum commovent aut nonnullorum hominum insolentiam et iactationem ferre non potes, eligas censeo aliquod oppidum vacuum a bello, dum haec decernuntur quae iam erunt confecta. Id si feceris, et ego te sapienter fecisse iudicabo et Caesarem non offendes.

3. de Hispaniis: Caesar had set out for Spain in the early part of April. — isti: i.e. the Pompeians. — accedere: in apposition to tuum consilium. A more regular construction would be accedendi. — medius fidius: cf. Ep. XVII. 2 n.

4. dicendo: the abl. of the gerund indicating manner is rare before Livy's time Cf., however, bellum ambu'ando confecerunt, Ep. XLVIII. 4, also from Caelius.

— litteras: probably Att. 10. 8 B.
— contendissem: here transitive. Cf. Intr. 83 a.

5. sciens prudensque: 'the proverbial expression sciens prudensque, or prudens et sciens, was used of one who takes an ill-advised course with his eyes open' (Landgraf, 318). — aut voces, etc.: i.e. the reproaches of the Optimates on the one hand, or the insolent demeanor of the Caesarians on the other.

LI. (Fam. 2. 16.)

M. CICERO IMP. S. D. M. CAELIO.

1 Magno dolore me adfecissent tuae litterae nisi iam et ratio ipsa depulisset omnes molestias et diuturna desperatione rerum obdurisset animus ad dolorem novum. Sed tamen quare acciderit ut ex meis superioribus litteris id suspicari quod scribis nescio; quid enim in illis fuit praeter querelam temporum, quae non meum animum magis sollicitum habent quam tuum? Nam non eam cognovi aciem ingeni tui, quod ipse videam, te id ut non putem videre. Illud miror, adduci potuisse te, qui me penitus nosse deberes, ut existimares aut me tam improvidum qui ab excitata fortuna ad inclinatam et prope iacentem desciscerem, aut tam inconstantem ut collectam gratiam florentissimi hominis effunderem a meque ipse deficerem et, quod initio
2 semperque fugi, civili bello interessens. Quod est igitur meum 'triste consilium'? Vt discederem fortasse in aliquas solitudines. Nosti enim non modo stomachi

LI. Cumae, May 4, 49 B.C. This is Cicero's reply to Ep. L. A month after he wrote this letter, in which he disclaims any intention of joining the Pompeians, he set out for the East. This seems to be a frank statement, however, of Cicero's intentions at the time.

1. meis superioribus litteris: cf. tuis litteris, Ep. L. 1 n. — sollicitum habent: the analytical method of forming the perfect tenses, as illustrated by habeo dictum for dixi, which came into vogue in late Latin and in the Romance languages, developed out of such combinations as this;

cf. Thielmann in Arch. f. Lat. Lex. II. 372 ff. See also Intr. 84 d. — nam non eam, etc., for I have appreciated your penetration too well to suppose that you do not see what I see. Cicero's high appreciation of the political judgment and foresight of Caelius was shown by his selection of him as his special correspondent in 51–50 B.C. — hominis: i.e. Caesaris.

2. triste consilium: with reference probably to te . . . ostendisti, Ep. L. 1, and to tuum consilium, etc., L. 3. — solitudines: Dolabe's, a few weeks later, in Ep. LII. 3, suggests a similar plan. —

mei, cuius tu similem quondam habebas, sed etiam oculorum in hominum insolentium indignitate fastidium. Accedit etiam molesta haec pompa lictorum meorum nomenque imperi quo appellor. Eo si onere carerem, quamvis parvis Italiae latebris contentus essem; sed incurrit haec nostra laurus non solum in oculos, sed iam etiam in vocolas malevolorum. Quod cum ita esset, nil tamen umquam de profectione nisi vobis approbantibus cogitavi. Sed mea praediola tibi nota sunt; in his mihi necesse est esse ne amicis molestus sim. Quod autem in maritimis facillime sum, moveo nonnullis suspicionem velle me navigare, quod tamen fortasse non nollem, si possem ad otium; nam ad bellum quidem qui convenit? praesertim contra eum cui spero me satis fecisse, ab eo cui iam satis fieri nullo modo potest. Deinde sententiam meam tu facillime perspicere potuisti iam ab illo tempore, cum in Cumanum mihi obviam venisti. Non enim te celavi sermonem T. Ampii; vidisti quam abhorrerem ab urbe relinquenda, quondam: Caelius had formerly belonged to the senatorial party. — hominum insolentium: cf. insolentiam, Ep. L. 5. — nostra laurus: cf. fascis laureatos, Ep. XLV. 5 n. — vocolas: the diminutive expresses contempt. The same word, as used in Ep. IX. 1 (recreandae vocolae causa), has its natural diminutive force, 'my weak voice.' — praediola: used for modesty's sake, while specula (5) implies not that the hope is a faint one, but that the personal gain to Dolabella is a small advantage in comparison with the loss which the state suffers. — maritimis: sc. praediolis. Cicero was at Cumae. — facillime: cf. Intr.

85.— ad otium: depending loosely upon navigare, as does ad bellum below. — qui (convenit): the archaic ablative; cf. Intr. 81. — contra eum: i.e. Caesarem. — ab eo, on his side; sc. the side of Pompey.

3. obviam venisti: sc. when Cicero returned from Cilicia. — T. Ampii (Balbi): one of Cicero's predecessors as governor of Cilicia (cf. Fam. 1. 3. 2), and during the Civil War an extreme Pompeian (cf. Vell. Paterc. 2. 40; Cic. Fam. 6. 12. 3). — ab urbe relinquenda: for Cicero's first impressions of the wisdom of the Pompeians in abandoning Rome, cf. Att. 7. 10. See also Ep. XLV.

cum audissem. Nonne tibi adfirmavi quidvis me potius perperurum quam ex Italia ad bellum civile exiturum? Quid ergo accidit cur consilium mutarem? Nonne omnia potius, ut in sententia permanerem? Credas hoc mihi velim, quod puto te existimare, me ex his miseriis nihil aliud quaerere, nisi ut homines aliquando intelligent me nihil maluisse quam pacem, ea desperata nihil tam fugisse quam arma civilia. Huius me constantiae puto fore ut numquam paeniteat. Etenim memini in hoc genere gloriari solitum esse familiarem nostrum Q. Hortensium, quod numquam bello civili interfuisset; hoc nostra laus erit inlustrior, quod illi tribuebatur ignaviae, de nobis id existimari posse non arbitror.

- 4 Nec me ista terrent quae mihi a te ad timorem fidissime atque amantissime proponuntur. Nulla est enim acerbitas quae non omnibus hac orbis terrarum perturbatione impendere videatur; quam quidem ego a re publica meis privatis et domesticis incommodis libentissime vel istis ipsis, quae tu me mones ut caveam, 5 redemissem. Filio meo, quem tibi carum esse gaudeo, si erit ulla res publica, satis amplum patrimonium relinquam in memoria nominis mei; sin autem nulla erit, nihil accidet ei separatim a reliquis civibus. Nam quod rogas ut respiciam generum meum, adulescentem

3. — exiturum : after potius quam in indirect discourse the infin. is the regular construction; cf. Krebs, Antibarbarus, II. 310. — me nihil maluisse, etc.: upon Cicero's sincere desire for peace, cf. cum primum potui, Ep. XLIX. 2 n. — Q. Hortensium: the orator, who had died in 50 B.C.

4. quae . . . proponuntur: with reference to certain statements in Caelius's letter, e.g. si existimas, etc., Ep. L. 1. — incommodis vel istis ipsis : i.e. those very misfortunes which you mention in your letter, e.g. Ep. L. 5 etiam atque etiam, Cicero, cogita ne te tuosque omnis funditus evertas.

5. memoria : Hofmann quotes de Domo, 146 liberis nostris satis amplum patrimonium paterni nominis ac memoriae nostrae relinquemus, and de Off. I. 121 optima hereditas a patribus traditur liberis optimum mihi que carissimum, an dubitas, cum scias quanti cum illum tum vero Tulliam meam faciam, quin ea me cura vehementissime sollicitet, et eo magis quod in communibus miseriis hac tamen oblectabar specula, Dolabellam meum vel potius nostrum fore ab iis molestiis, quas liberalitate sua contraxerat, liberum? Velim quaeras quos ille dies sustinuerit, in urbe dum fuit, quam acerbos sibi, quam mihimet ipsi socero non honestos. Itaque neque ego hunc Hispaniensem casum 6 exspecto, de quo mihi exploratum est ita esse ut tu scribis, neque quicquam astute cogito. Si quando erit civitas, erit profecto nobis locus; sin autem non erit, in eadem solitudines tu ipse, ut arbitrator, venies, in quibus nos consedis audies. Sed ego fortasse vaticinor et haec omnia meliores habebunt exitus; recordor enim desperationes eorum qui senes erant adulescente me. Eos ego fortasse nunc imitor et utor aetatis vitio. Velim ita sit; sed tamen —. Togam praetextam texi Oppio 7 omnium patrimonio praestantior gloria virtutis rerumque gestarum. — an dubitas: when an answer to a difficulty is thrown into the form of a question, it is commonly introduced by an; cf. Tusc. Disp. 1. 14 quasi non necesse sit, quicquid isto modo pronunties, id aut esse aut non esse. An tu dialecticis ne imbutus quidem es. See also Philipp. 2. 38. — liberum: Dolabella, when he was in power at Rome a few years later, actually proposed novae tabulae; cf. Att. 11. 23. 3. — quos ille dies, etc.: sc. when pressed by his creditors for payment.

6. Hispaniensem casum: cf. de Hispaniis, Ep. L. 3 n. — astute cogito: for astutum cogito; cf. prolixo, Ep. XXI. 1 n. — fortasse vaticinor, perhaps I am a false prophet. fortasse appears to be cynical. Its use is quite in harmony with the markedly calm tone which Cicero affects throughout in replying to the impulsive letter of Caelius. — sed tamen: such an aposiopesis is especially common in the Letters when the suppressed possibility is an unpleasant one. Söckel quotes Att. 7. 23. 2 manedo igitur, etsi vivere —; Fam. 14. 3. 5 si perficitis quod agitis, me ad vos venire oportet; sin autem —.

7. Oppio: upon Oppius, see Ep. XXX. 2. Cicero humorously expresses in togam praetextam texi the hope which Oppius cherished of securing public office through the influence of his friend puto te audisse; nam Curtius noster dibaphum cogitat, sed eum infector moratur. Hoc adpersi ut scires me tamen in stomacho solere ridere. De re Dolabellae quod scripsi, suadeo videas, tamquam si tua res agatur. Extremum illud erit: nos nihil turbulenter, nihil temere faciemus; te tamen oramus, quibuscumque erimus in terris, ut nos liberosque nostros ita tueare ut amicitia nostra et tua fides postulabit.

LII. (Fam. 9. 9.)

DOLABELLA S. D. CICERONI.

i S. v. g. V. et Tullia nostra recte v. Terentia minus belle habuit, sed certum scio iam convaluisse eam;

Caesar. — Curtius: M. Curtius Postumus, like Oppius, one of Caesar's enthusiastic admirers and followers; cf. Att. 9. 2 A. 3. — dibaphum cogitat, has his eye on the purple robe. The death of Hortensius (cf. 3) had caused a vacancy in the college of augurs, and Curtius hoped to secure the position. The official robe of the augur is spoken of as dibaphum, either because it was of two colors, or because in obtaining one of its colors, purple, two processes were necessary. Cf. Att. 2. 9. 2. — infector, the dyer, i.e. Caesar. — de re . . . scripsi: i.e. in 5.

LII. Caesar's camp near Dyrachium, June, 48 B.C. For Dolabella, see Intr. 56. For Cicero's movements after writing Ep. LI., cf. Intr. 31. Dolabella was in Caesar's camp, and Cicero was probably in Pompey's.

i. s. v. g. v.: for si vales, gaudeo. Valeo. Literary Latin failed to perpetuate gaudeo in its archaic sense, which crops out here and there in colloquial Latin. In Plautus it is regularly used in welcoming a friend on his return from foreign parts; cf., e.g., Trin. 1097 et salve et salvom te advenisse gaudeo. It is quite natural that Dolabella in his free and easy style should write s. v. g. instead of the common formula s. v. b. e. Cf. also Intr. 62. — recte: regularly used in inquiries and answers concerning one's health. Cf., e.g., satine recte (valetis)? Ter. And. 804; nempe recte valet? Plaut. Bacch. 188; DEM. quid agitur? Sy. recte (agitur), Ter. Adel. 884. — minus belle (sc. se) habuit: on belle, see bellus, Ep. XXIV. 2 n. The omission of se in this phrase and in similar ones is colloquial; cf. Ter. Adel. 365 omnem rem modo seni quo pacto haberet enarramus ordine; Phorm. 429 bene habent tibi principia. While in Cicero the pronoun is ordinarily expressed in this phrase (cf., e.g., ea res sic se habet, Fam. 3. 5. 3), in one or two passages it is omitted. Cf. Fam.

praeterea rectissime sunt apud te omnia. Etsi nullo tempore in suspicionem tibi debui venire, partium causa potius quam tua tibi suadere ut te aut cum Caesare nobiscumque coniungeres aut certe in otium referres, praecipue nunc iam inclinata victoria ne possum quidem in ullam aliam incidere opinionem nisi in eam, qua scilicet tibi suadere videar quod pie tacere non possim. Tu autem, mi Cicero, sic haec accipies ut, sive probabuntur tibi sive non probabuntur, ab optimo certe animo ac deditissimo tibi et cogitata et scripta esse iudices. Animadvertis Cn. Pompeium nec nominis sui nec rerum gestarum gloria neque etiam regum ac nationum clientelis quas ostentare crebro solebat esse tutum, et hoc etiam, quod infimo cuique contigit, illi non posse contingere, ut honeste effugere possit, pulso Italia, amissis Hispaniis, capto exercitu veterano, circumvallato nunc denique, quod nescio an nulli um-

16. 15. 1 is etsi mihi nuntiavit te plane febris carere et belle habere; pro Mur. 14 bene habet. A similar ellipsis occurs in colloquial Latin with facere, agere, capessere, probare, recipere, etc. — certum scio: that certum in the common phrases certum scio and certum nescio is an adverb is evident from Cic. pro Scauro, 34 qui sive patrius sive plebeius esset, nondum enim certum constituerat; Hor. Sat. 2. 6. 27 postmodo, quod mi obsit, clare certumque locuto; 2. 5. 100 certum vigilans (Hofmann). — rectissime sunt: cf. Intr. 85. — suadere: in apposition to suspicionem: cf. accedere, Ep. L. 3 n. — inclinata victoria, since victory has already turned (from the Pompeians). — mi Cicero: cf. mi Pompei, Ep. X. n. — ab animo: most editors strike out ab, but the style of Dolabella is very colloquial, and the Latin in everyday life was fond not only of personification in general, but of the representation of the individual by this word animus; cf. anime mi (e.g. Plaut. Curc. 165; Men. 182) as a term of endearment; cf. also Ep. LXXVII. 1 praesertim vel animo defetigato tuo qui nunc requiem quaerat ex magnis occupationibus; Ep. LXI. 8 volo enim videre animum qui mihi audeat ista . . . apponere.

2. ostentare crebro solebat: cf. Intr. 79. — Italia: for ex Italia. Cicero never omits ex with names of countries, and, with the exception of one passage in Caesar (B. C. 3. 58), perhaps the construction does not occur in prose again until we reach Silver Latin. — circumvallato: a dative. Pompey was surrounded by Caesar's forces;

quam nostro acciderit imperatori. Quamobrem, quid aut ille sperare possit aut tu, animum adverte pro tua prudentia; sic enim facillime quod tibi utilissimum erit consili capies. Illud autem te peto ut, si iam ille evitaverit hoc periculum et se abdidit in classem, tu tuis rebus consulas et aliquando tibi potius quam cuivis sis amicus. Satis factum est iam a te vel officio vel familiaritati, satis factum etiam partibus et ei rei p. 3 quam tu probabas. Reliquum est, ubi nunc est res p., ibi simus potius quam, dum illam veterem sequamur, simus in nulla. Quare velim, mi iucundissime Cicero, si forte Pompeius pulsus his quoque locis rusus alias regiones petere cogatur, ut tu te vel Athenas vel in quamvis quietam recipias civitatem. Quod si eris factururus, velim mihi scribas, ut ego, si ullo modo potero, ad te advolem. Quaecumque de tua dignitate ab impecf. Caes. B. C. 3. 42 ff. — animum adverte: for animadverte, a Plautine usage. — illud te peto: cf. quod . . . hortatur, Ep. XXXVII. 1 n. and Intr. 83 a.

3. reliquum est, etc.: the omission of ut is archaic. — mi iucundissime Cicero: adjectives as well as pronouns are sometimes joined with proper names in colloquial Latin. Such adjectives usually express affection, admiration, or sympathy, and are used both with the names of persons addressed or with those of persons spoken of. This usage is very rare in formal Latin, and is employed only under certain well-defined circumstances; cf. Naegelsbach, Stilistik,⁷ 251 ff. — his quoque locis: the use of his shows that Dolabella was in the immediate vicinity of Pompey's headquarters, i.e. that he was in

Caesar's camp before Dyrrachium, and not at Rome. Had he been writing from Rome, he would have said illis or istis. Cf. also circumvallato, above. — rusus: an archaic form for rursus; cf. Intr. 81. — tu: the pleonastic use of pronouns is characteristic of the more informal letters. In this letter, for instance, tu is used five times, and in three of these cases quite unnecessarily. Cf. tibi tu, Ep. L. 2. — civitatem: a colloquial substitute for urbs or oppidum. This is its first appearance in this sense in prose. In late Latin and in general in the Romance languages it completely usurped the functions of the two words mentioned above. The history of this word offers another illustration of the connection existing between colloquial Latin and the Romance languages; cf. testificor, Ep. L.

ratore erunt impetranda, qua est humanitate Caesar, facillimum erit ab eo tibi ipsi impetrare, et meas tamen preces apud eum non minimum auctoritatis habituras puto. Erit tuae quoque fidei et humanitatis curare, ut is tabellarius quem ad te misi reverti possit ad me et a te mihi litteras referat.

LIII. (Fam. 14. 12.)

TVLLIVS TERENTIAE SVAE S. D.

Quod nos in Italiam salvos venisse gaudes, perpetuo gaudeas velim; sed perturbati dolore animi magnisque iniuriis metuo ne id consili ceperimus quod non facile explicare possimus. Quare quantum potes adiuva; quid autem possis mihi in mentem non venit. In viam quod te des hoc tempore, nihil est. Et longum est iter et non tutum et non video quid prodesse possis, si veneris. Vale. D. pr. Non. Nov. Brundisio.

1 n. — advolem : cf. advoles, Ep. XXV. 4 n. — non minimum : non mediocre, non pessimum, and other similar expressions are common in the Letters.

LIII. Brundisium, Nov. 4, 48 B.C. With reference to the battle of Pharsalus and Cicero's subsequent movements, cf. Intra. 31 f.

iniuriis : sc. at the hands of the Pompeians, who were angry at his refusal to take charge of their forces after the defeat at Pharsalus. — metuo : on the one hand, Caesar had forbidden the Pompeians to return to Italy, so that the ultimate triumph of the Caesarians would be fraught with danger to Cicero; on the other hand, in view of their anger at him, the success of the Pompeians would be equally dangerous. — in viam . . . nihil est : Terentia had expressed a wish to join him at Brundisium, and the coolness with which Cicero receives the proposal is another indication of the estrangement between husband and wife. — d. pr. : cf. Intra. 62 (end).

LIV. (Fam. 14. 19.)

TVLLIVS TERENTIAE SVAE S. D.

In maximis meis doloribus excruciat me valetudo Tulliae nostrae, de qua nihil est quod ad te plura scribam; tibi enim aequae magnae curae esse certo scio. Quod me propius vultis accedere, video ita esse faciendum; etiam ante fecissem, sed me multa impederunt, quae ne nunc quidem expedita sunt. Sed a Pomponio exspecto litteras, quas ad me quam primum perferendas cures velim. Da operam ut valeas.

LV. (Fam. 14. 17.)

TVLLIVS TERENTIAE SVAE S. D.

S. v. b. e. V. Si quid haberem quod ad te scriberem, facerem id et pluribus verbis et saepius. Nunc quae sint negotia vides; ego autem quomodo sim adfectus ex Lepta et Trebatio poteris cognoscere. Tu fac ut tuam et Tulliae valetudinem cures. Vale.

LIV. Brundisium, Nov. 27, 48
B.C.

in maximis . . . doloribus: cf. Intr. 32. — quod . . . accedere: Atticus had given the same advice (Att. 11. 5. 2), but Cicero had hesitated to adopt it, for fear of injury at the hands of the Caesarians. — multa, etc.: e.g. his lictors; see Att. 11. 6. 2. — Pomponio: cf. Intr. 58.

LV. Brundisium, Dec. 18, 48
B.C.

s. v. b. e. v.: cf. Intr. 62 and Ep. LVI. n. — Lepta: cf. Ep. XXXV. 22. — Trebatio: see Ep. XXI. introd. note. Lepta and Trebatius had met Cicero at Brundisium. Cicero's state of mind is more fully indicated in a letter written to Atticus (Att. 11. 8) at this time.

LVI. (Fam. 14. 8.)

TVLLIVS TARENTIAE SVAE S.

Si vales, bene est. Ego valeo. Valetudinem tuam velim cures diligentissime; nam mihi et scriptum et nuntiatum est te in febrim subito incidisse. Quod celeriter me fecisti de Caesaris litteris certiolem, fecisti mihi gratum. Item posthac, si quid opus erit, si quid acciderit novi, facies ut sciam. Cura ut valeas. Vale. D. IIII Non. Iun.

LVII. (Fam. 14. 11.)

TVLLIVS S. D. TARENTIAE SVAE.

S. v. b. E. v. Tullia nostra venit ad me pr. Idus Iun.; cuius summa virtute et singulari humanitate graviore etiam sum dolore adfectus nostra factum esse negligentia, ut longe alia in fortuna esset atque eius pietas ac dignitas postulabat. Nobis erat in animo Ciceronem ad Caesarem mittere, et cum eo Cn.

LVI. Brundisium, June 2, 47 B.C.

si vales, bene est. ego valeo: Cicero never uses this formula in writing to Quintus, Atticus, or Tiro, nor in his early letters to Terentia, viz. Fam. 14. 2 (Ep. XIII.), 3 and 4 (Ep. XI), and in general he employs it only in formal letters. Its use here is therefore an indication of the coolness which had sprung up between him and his wife; cf. Intr. 52.—facies: cf. Intr. 84 b.

LVII. Brundisium, June 14, 47 B.C.

s. v. b. e. v.: si vales, benest.

Ego valeo; or si vales, bene est. Valeo. Cf. Intr. 62 and Ep. LVI., LVIII. nn.—ad me: i.e. to Brundisium; cf. Intr. 32.—negligentia: Cicero refers probably to Tullia's unpleasant position as the wife of Dolabella, a financial and moral bankrupt, who showed little affection for her, and whose agitation at this very moment for an abolition of debts was bringing further disgrace upon Tullia and her family. But Tullia's betrothal and marriage to Dolabella took place against her father's judgment during his absence in Cilicia. Cf. Intr. 56.—Ciceronem: the same Sallustium. Si profectus erit, faciam te certiozem. Valetudinem tuam cura diligenter. Vale. xvii K. Quinctilis.

LVIII. (Fam. 14. 15.)

TVLLIVS S. D. TARENTIAE.

Si vales, benest. Constitueramus, ut ad te antea scripseram, obviam Ciceronem Caesari mittere, sed mutavimus consilium, quia de illius adventu nihil audiebamus. De ceteris rebus, etsi nihil erat novi, tamen quid velimus et quid hoc tempore putemus opus esse ex Sica poteris cognoscere. Tulliam adhuc mecum teneo. Valetudinem tuam cura diligenter. Vale. xii K. Quinctilis.

LIX. (Fam. 14. 20.)

TVLLIVS S. D. TARENTIAE SVAE.

In Tusculanum nos venturos putamus aut Nonis aut postridie. Ibi ut sint omnia parata. Plures enim plan is mentioned in a letter to Atticus (Att. 11. 17. 1). Cf. also si . . . conduceret, Ep. LXXIV. 2 n.

LVIII. Brundisium, June 19, 47 B.C.

si vales, benest: this form of greeting is indicated by the abbreviation (s. v. b.) in Fam. 7. 29. Cf. also Ravennaest, Ep. XXXI. 4 n. — ut . . . scripseram: sc. Ep. LVII. — mutavimus consilium: young Marcus apparently remained in Rome until the following year, when he set out for Athens to pursue his studies there; cf. Intr. 54 and Att. 11. 18. 1. — de illius adventu: Caesar arrived at Tarentum from the East Sept. 24. — Sica: cf. Ep. X.

LIX. Venusia, Oct. 1, 47 B.C. Cicero went to meet Caesar on his arrival at Tarentum, Sept. 24, and received permission to remain in Italy. He accordingly set out two days later for his Tusculan villa, and wrote this letter on his way thither. It is the last one extant to Terentia and makes an appropriate climax to the series of cold, formal letters which Cicero wrote to her during the course of this year. At the moment of meeting his wife after an absence of more than two years, he merely gives certain instructions in regard to the arrangement of the house, in a tone almost brutal, and quite at variance with the extreme fortasse nobiscum erunt et, ut arbitror, diutius ibi commorabimur. Labrum si in balineo non est, ut sit; item cetera quae sunt ad victum et ad valetudinem necessaria. Vale. K. Oct. de Venusino.

LX. (Fam. 9. 1.)

CICERO M. VARRONI S.

Ex iis litteris quas Atticus a te missas mihi legit, ¹ quid ageres et ubi esses cognovi; quando autem te visuri essemus, nihil sane ex isdem litteris potui suspicari. In spem tamen venio appropinquare tuum adventum; qui mihi utinam solacio sit! Etsi tot tantisque rebus urgemur, ut nullam adlevationem quisquam non stultissimus sperare debeat; sed tamen aut tu potes me aut ego te fortasse aliqua re iuvare. Scito enim ² me, postea quam in urbem venerim, redisse cum vetepoliteness shown everywhere else, even in writing to his enemies. They were divorced a few months later.

LX. Rome, close of 47 B.C. or early part of 46. M. Terentius Varro is a fine type of the old Roman character, and one of the most picturesque figures in the later years of the republic. While better known to us for his literary work, he was by no means without ability in politics and the art of war. He espoused the cause of the senate in the Civil War, and was sent to Spain as Pompey's legate. After the defeat of Afranius and Petreius he was compelled to leave Spain, but Caesar pardoned him, and chose him to take charge of the library which he intended to found. Having incurred the enmity of Antony, he was put on the list of the proscribed, but rescued by a friend. He died in 27 B.C., in his 90th year. He was a most fruitful writer of both prose and poetry, leaving behind him 74 works, containing some 620 books, dealing with almost all the departments of human knowledge, — with literature, history, jurisprudence, grammar, philosophy, geography, and agriculture. Cf. Quint. 10. 1. 95. Of his works we possess only books 5-10 de Lingua Latina, and 3 books Rerum Rusticarum, with fragments of his Saturae Menippeae.

1. legit: cf. aliis legi, Ep. V. 8 n.

2. in urbem: probably in Oct., 47, on his return from Brundisium;

ribus amicis, id est cum libris nostris, in gratiam; etsi non idcirco eorum usum dimiseram, quod iis suscense-rem, sed quod eorum me suppudebat. Videbam nimirum me in res turbulentissimas infidelissimis sociis demissum praeceptis illorum non satis paruisse. Ignoscunt mihi, revocant in consuetudinem pristinam teque, quod in eo permanseris, sapientiore quam me dicunt fuisse. Quamobrem, quoniam placatis iis utor, videor sperare debere, si te viderim, et ea quae premant et ea quae impendeant me facile transiturum. Quamobrem, sive in Tusculano sive in Cumano ad te placebit sive, quod minime velim, Romae, dummodo simul simus, perficiam profecto ut id utriusque nostrum commodissimum esse diiudicetur.

LXI. (Fam. 9. 16.)

CICERO [PAPIRIO] PAETO S.

1 Delectarunt me tuae litterae, in quibus primum amavi amorem tuum, qui te ad scribendum incitavit, cf. Ep. LIX. introd. note. — libris nostris : one of the products of his literary work was the Brutus, which Cicero began in the autumn of 47 B.C. and completed the following spring. — eorum usum dimiseram : for a period of six years, 52-47 B.C., Cicero wrote nothing and apparently did little literary work of any sort. — suppudebat : for the force of sub, cf. Intr. 77. — praeceptis illorum : i.e. especially the precepts of the philosophers. Cicero's favorite philosopher Theophrastus advised an absolute abstention from politics (cf. Att. 2. 16. 3). — ad (= apud) te placebit : sc. nos simul esse.

LXI. Tusculum, July, 46 B.C. L. Papirius Paetus, to whom are addressed Fam. 9. 15-26, was a friend of long standing. We first hear of him through a collection of books which he presented to Cicero in 60 B.C. (Att. 1. 20. 7; 2. 1. 12). Like Atticus, he was an Epicurean and held himself aloof from politics. The large fortune which he had inherited made it unnecessary for him to engage in business, and he was able to give himself up to the pleasures of a literary and social life. Cicero's letters to him testify to their intimate relations, and offer the best commentary upon his character verentem ne Silius suo nuntio aliquid mihi sollicitudinis attulisset; de quo et tu mihi antea scripseras — bis quidem eodem exemplo, facile ut intellegerem te esse commotum — et ego tibi accurate rescripseram ut, quomodo in tali re atque tempore, aut liberarem te ista cura aut certe levarem. Sed quoniam proximis quo-² que litteris ostendis quantae tibi curae sit ea res, sic, mi Paete, habeto: quicquid arte fieri potuerit — non enim iam satis est consilio pugnare; artificium quoddam excogitandum est, — sed tamen quicquid elaborari aut effici potuerit ad istorum benevolentiam conciliandam et conligendam, summo studio me consecutum esse, nec frustra, ut arbitror; sic enim color, sic observor ab omnibus iis qui a Caesare diliguntur, ut ab iis me amari putem. Nam etsi non facile diiudicatur amor verus et fictus, nisi aliquod incidit eiusmodi tempus ut, quasi aurum igni, sic benevolentia fidelis periculo aliquo perspici possit — cetera sunt signa communia, — sed ego uno utor argumento, quamobrem me ex animo vereque arbitrer diligi, quia et nostra fortuna ea est et illorum ut simulandi causa non sit. De illo autem, quem penes est omnis potestas, nihil ³ and tastes. No better specimens of the sermo urbanus and no better proof of Cicero's wit and brilliancy as a letter-writer can be found than in the letters to Paetus.

1. amavi amorem: cf. occidione occisum, Ep. XXXIV. 7 n., and cura ut valeas meque ames amore illo tuo singulari, Fam. 15. 20. 3. — Silius: probably P. Silius Nerva, to whom, when he was propraetor of Bithynia in 51 and 50 B.C., several letters of recommendation (Fam. 13. 47, 61–65) are addressed.

— bis: for fear that one might be lost. — eodem exemplo, to the same effect; as in Q. fr. 2. 10 (12). 5. Exemplum without idem, when applied to letters, means 'a copy,' e.g. Caesaris litterarum exemplum tibi misi, Att. 7. 23. 3. — quomodo: equivalent to quoquomodo, as in Fam. 14. 14. 1 quomodo quidem nunc se res habet, . . . bellissime mecum esse poteritis.

2. sic . . . habeto: cf. Ep. XXVI. 1 n. and Intr. 89. — istorum: i.e. Caesar and his friends.

video quod timeam, nisi quod omnia sunt incerta, cum a iure discessum est, nec praestari quicquam potest, quale futurum sit quod positum est in alterius voluntate, ne dicam libidine. Sed tamen eius ipsius nulla re a me offensus est animus; est enim adhibita in ea re ipsa summa a nobis moderatio. Vt enim olim arbitrari esse meum libere loqui, cuius opera esset in civitate libertas, sic ea nunc amissa nihil loqui quod offendant aut illius aut eorum qui ab illo diliguntur voluntatem. Effugere autem si velim nonnullorum acute aut facete dictorum opinionem, fama ingeni mihi 4 est abicienda, quod, si possem, non recusarem. Sed tamen ipse Caesar habet peracre iudicium, et, ut Servius, frater tuus, quem litteratissimum fuisse iudico, facile diceret 'Hic versus Plauti non est, hic est,' quod tritas auris haberet notandis generibus poetarum et consuetudine legendi, sic audio Caesarem, cum volumina iam confecerit ἀποφθεγμάτων, si quod adferatur ad eum pro meo, quod meum non sit, reicere solere;

3. cuius opera : sc. in the suppression of the Catilinarian conspiracy.

4. Servius : Ser. Claudius, son-in-law of the Roman grammarian L. Aelius Stilo (cf. Suet. de Gram. 3), and a well-known editor of Plautus (cf. Aul. Gell. 3. 3. 1). He was the cousin or half-brother of Paetus (cf. Att. 1. 20. 7 ; 2. 1. 12). — notandis generibus poetarum : i.e. by noticing the characteristics of the different poets. — ἀποφθεγμάτων : that Caesar in his youth made a collection of witticisms we know from Suet. Jul. 56 feruntur et a puero et ab adulescentulo quaedam scripta, ut Laudes Herculis, tragoedia Oedi- pus, item Dicta Collectanea; quos omnes libellos vetuit Augustus publicari in epistula, quam brevem admodum ac simplicem ad Pompeium Macrum, cui ordinandas bibliothecas delegaverat, misit. — quod meum non sit : cf. pro Planc. 35 quod quisque dixit, me id dixisse dicunt . . . stomachor, cum aliorum non me digna in me conferuntur ; Fam. 7. 32. I ais enim, ut ego discesserim (to Cilicia), omnia omnium dicta . . . in me conferri. Quid? tu id pateris? non me defendis? non resistis? equidem sperabam ita notata me reliquisse genera dictorum meorum ut cognosci sua sponte possent. Of the soci Ciceronis in their published quod eo nunc magis facit, quia vivunt mecum fere cotidie illius familiares; incidunt autem in sermone vario multa quae fortasse illis, cum dixi, nec inlitterata nec insulsa esse videantur; haec ad illum cum reliquis actis perferuntur; ita enim ipse mandavit. Sic fit ut, si quid praeterea de me audiat, non audiendum putet. Quamobrem Oenomao tuo nihil utor; etsi posuisti loco versus Accianos. Sed quae est 'invidia' aut quid mihi nunc 5 invideri potest? Verum fac esse omnia; sic video philosophis placuisse, iis qui mihi soli videntur vim virtutis tenere, nihil esse sapientis praestare nisi culpam, qua mihi videor dupliciter carere, et quod ea senserim quae rectissima fuerunt, et quod, cum videam praesidi non satis esse ad ea obtinenda, viribus certandum cum valentioribus non putarim; ergo in officio boni civis certe non sum reprehendendus. Reliquum est, ne quid stulte, ne quid temere dicam aut faciam contra potentis. Id quoque puto esse sapientis. Cetera vero, quid quisque me dixisse dicat aut quomodo ille accipiat aut qua fide mecum vivant ii qui me assi-

form Quintilian, however, expresses (6. 3. 5) a rather unfavorable opinion.—cum reliquis actis, with the rest of the day's doings.—Oenomao tuo: Paetus, with a flattering application to Cicero, had quoted the words of King Oenomaus from the Oenomaus of Accius: the king speaks of his position made difficult by the envy of men, and compares himself to a rock, on which the waves of envy beat. Saxum id facit angustitatem, et sub eo saxo exuberans | Scatebra fluviae radit rupem. Cf. Ribbeck, Trag. Rom. Frag. p. 201, and Röm. Trag. p. 437.—loco, appositely enough.

5. sic: limiting placuisse and explained by nihil . . . culpam. Cf. sic habeto, 2 n.—praestare, to be responsible for; commonly used with a thing to be desired, e.g. felicitatem, but here employed, as is now and then the English phrase by which it is translated, of a thing to be guarded against; cf. T. D. 3. 34 videt culpam nullam esse cum id, quod ab homine non potuerit praestari, evenerit.—in officio, in so far as it concerns the duty. Cf. liberalis in populo, Att. 4. 17. 3; quo me animo in servis esse censes, Q. fr. 1. 1. 17, and often in the Letters.—ille: i.e. Caesar.

6 due colunt et observant, praestare non possum. Ita fit ut et consiliorum superiorum conscientia et praesentis temporis moderatione me consoler, et illam Acci similitudinem non iam ad 'invidiam,' sed ad fortunam transferam, quam existimo levem et imbecillam ab animo firmo et gravi 'tamquam fluctum a saxo frangi' oportere. Etenim cum plena sint monumenta Graecorum quemadmodum sapientissimi viri regna tulerint vel Athenis vel Syracusis, cum servientibus suis civitatibus fuerint ipsi quodammodo liberi, ego me non putem
7 mum cuiusquam nec frangam dignitatem meam? Nunc venio ad iocationes tuas, quoniam tu secundum Oenomaum Acci, non, ut olim solebat, Atellanam, sed, ut nunc fit, mimum introduxisti. Quem tu mihi popellum, quem cantharum narras? quam tyrotarichi patinam? Facilitate mea ista ferebantur antea; nunc mutata res est. Hirtium ego et Dolabellam dicendi discipulos

6. ad fortunam : while I am not exposed to envy, the passage which you quote from Accius may well be used to describe the position of the brave man, exposed to the assaults of fortune, as I have been. — sapientissimi viri : e.g. Socrates in Athens and Plato in Syracuse.

7. iocationes : not found in Cicero's orations or philosophical works; cf. Intr. 75. — secundum Oenomaum : the first part of your letter was serious in its tone, the last part humorous. 'You have brought out, as they do at the theatre, first a tragedy, and then not a farce, as was done in olden times, but a mime.' — solebat : sc. fieri. — Atellanam : cf. Oscos ludos, Ep. XIX. 3 n. — mimum :

cf. mimos, Ep. XIX. 1 n. — popellum : see Crit. Append. — cantharum : see Crit. Append. The MS. reading denarium can hardly be correct, as the name of some cheap dish is expected. — narras : colloquial for nominas or dicis. Cf. Plaut. Men. 402 ; Ter. And. 367, 434, 466 ; Heaut. 520 ; Ep. LXVII. 3 ; Att. 2. 7. 2 ; 11. 1 ; 13. 51. 2. — tyrotarichi patinam : a plebeian dish of cheese and salt fish, which, as Cicero elsewhere also intimates in jest, Paetus was in the habit of offering to his guests : ipse autem eo die in Paeti nostri tyrotarichum imminebam, Att. 14. 16. 1. — Hirtium : best known as the author of Bk. VIII. of the Gallie War (cf. Suet. Iul. 56). He was also the author, habeo, cenandi magistros ; puto enim te audisse, si forte ad vos omnia perferuntur, illos apud me declamitare, me apud illos cenitare. Tu autem quod mihi bonam copiam eiures, nihil est; tum enim, cum rem habebas, quaesticulis te faciebat attentioem, nunc, cum tam aequo animo bona perdas, non est quod non eo sis consilio ut, cum me hospitio recipias, aestimationem te aliquam putes accipere ; etiam haec levior est plaga ab amico quam a debitore. Nec tamen eas 8 cenas quaero, ut magna reliquiae fiant ; quod erit, magnificum sit et lautum. Memini te mihi Phameae apparently, of the celebrated 'open letter' to Cicero, which was intended to counteract the political effect of Cato's suicide and of Cicero's eulogy upon him (cf. Intr. 33, 42).—Dolabellam: see Intr. 56. Cassius and Pansa were also pupils of Cicero ; cf. Fam. 7. 33. 2. Cicero's object in giving his time to these aspirants for oratorical honors seems to have been largely a desire to secure through them the friendship of Caesar, for he writes to Atticus two years later: haud amo vel hos designatos (i.e. Hirtius and Pansa) qui etiam declamare me coegerunt, ut ne apud aquas quidem acquiescere liceret; sed hoc meae nimiae facilitatis; nam id erat quondam quasi necesse, Att. 14. 12. 2.—declamitare, cenitare: see Intr. 79. Hirtius was fond of dining well ; cf. Att. 12. 2. 2 ibi Hirtius et isti omnes; et quidem ludii dies VIII.: quae cenae! quae deliciae! Cf. also Ep. LXIII. 2.—tu . . . eiures, etc., the fact that you take oath before me to your insolvency goes for nothing ; cf. eiurare militiam, 'to swear oneself unfit for service.' Paetus is legally estopped from pleading poverty as an excuse for not serving a fine dinner.—quaesticulis: cf. Intr. 76. The subject of faciebat is res understood.—bona perdas: as a partial relief to the debtor class, Caesar appointed arbitrators to estimate the value which certain property had before the Civil War began, and this property creditors were obliged to take at its estimated value ; cf. Caes. B. C. 3. 1. 2 per eos (i.e. arbitros) fierent aestimationes possessionum et rerum, quanti quaeque earum ante bellum fuisset, atque hae creditoribus traderentur. Many creditors, of whom Paetus seems to have been one, had suffered seriously from being obliged to accept this depreciated property.—aestimationem . . . accipere, there is no reason why you should n't take the attitude of thinking that when you receive me generously, you are accepting one of the many 'cuts' in your property to which you have submitted. Aestimatio is used concretely for the depreciated property.

8. Phameae: a rich and vulgar freedman like the host whom Petronius satirizes in his Cena Tri- cenam narrare. Temperius fiat, cetera eodem modo. Quod si perseveras me ad matris tuae cenam revocare, feram id quoque; volo enim videre animum qui mihi audeat ista quae scribis apponere, aut etiam polypum miniani Iovis similem. Mihi crede, non audebis. Ante meum adventum fama ad te de mea nova lautitia veniet. Eam extimesces. Neque est quod in promulside spei ponas aliquid, quam totam sustuli; solebam enim antea 9 debilitari oleis et lucanicis tuis. Sed quid haec loquimur? Liceat modo isto venire. Tu vero — volo enim abstergere animi tui metum — ad tyrotarichum antiquum redi. Ego tibi unum sumptum adferam, quod balneum calfacias oportebit; cetera more nostro. Su-

 10 periora illa lusimus. De villa Seliciana et curasti diligenter et scripsisti facetissime; itaque puto me praetermissurum; salis enim satis est, sannionum parum.

malchionis; cf. also Ep. LXXXI. 2. He was grandfather of the well-known musician Tigellius (cf. Ep. LXXXI. 1).—temperius fiat: the approved time for the cena in Cicero's day was the ninth hour; cf. Fam. 9. 26. 1 accubueram hora nona. To begin the dinner too early or to prolong it beyond a reasonable hour was in bad form.—ad matris tuae cenam: Manutius explains: ut accipias me frugali cena, qualem dare solebat matris tuae.—animum: cf. ab animo, Ep. LII. 1 n.—polypum . . . similem: the polypus, which is still a favorite article of food with the poorer people in Italy, was probably served in a red broth. This fact suggests the comparison with the statue of Jove, which on festal days in olden times was streaked with vermilion; cf. Pliny, N. H. 33. 111 enumerat auctores Verrius quibus credere necesse sit Iovis ipsius simulacri faciem diebus festis minio illini solitam, etc., and he adds (35. 157) ficilem eum fuisse et ideo miniari solitum. See also Crit. Append.—mihi crede: cf. Ep. XXVII. 1 n.—promulside: the cena proper in Cicero's day was preceded by the gustus, gustatio, or promulsis, as it was sometimes called from the mulsum or mead which was commonly drunk with this course. The promulsis consisted of light articles of food, such as eggs, sausage, salads, olives, artichokes, asparagus, etc.

9. isto: cf. Ep. XLVIII. 2 n.

10. de villa Seliciana: a villa near Naples, belonging to Q. Selicius. Cf. also Ep. LXVII. 3.—salis . . . parum: perhaps Pætus had referred to salt works upon the estate of Selicius, and Cicero is commenting upon the statement, giving a double meaning to salis. Sannio was one of

LXII. (Fam. 9. 18.)

CICERO S. D. [L. PAPIRIO] PAETO.

Cum essem otiosus in Tusculano, propterea quod i discipulos obviam miseram ut eadem, me quam maxime conciliarent familiari suo, accepi tuas litteras plenissimas suavitatis, ex quibus intellexi probari tibi meum consilium, quod, ut Dionysius tyrannus, cum Syracusis pulsus esset, Corinthi dicitur ludum aperuisse, sic ego sublatis iudiciis amisso regno forensi ludum quasi habere cœperim. Quid quaeris? me quoque delectat 2 consilium; multa enim consequor. Primum, id quod maxime nunc opus est, munio me ad haec tempora. Id cuiusmodi sit nescio; tantum video, nullius adhuc consilium me huic antepone; nisi forte mori melius fuit. In lectulo, fateor. Sed non accidit; in acie non

the regular characters in the Atellan farces (cf. Oscos ludos, Ep. XIX. 3 n.). The sentence would then mean: 'there is sal (i.e. 'salt' and 'material for jests') enough already, but few who are in the mood of jesting.' With sanorum or saniorum (both gen. plur. neut.), which some editors read, the meaning would be nearly the same. If salis is used in a metaphorical sense, and without a double meaning, Cicero must have in mind the statements made in 3 f. See Crit. Append.

LXII. Tusculum, about July 20, 46 B.C.

1. discipulos: i.e. Hirtius and Dolabella. Cf. Ep. LXI. 7 n. — obviam (sc. Caesari): the battle of Thapsus took place in April, 46, and Caesar was on his way back to Rome. He reached the city July 25. — eadem (sc. opera): this omission is common in Plautus with eadem and una. Cf. M. G. 303, and Brix on Trin. 581. — Dionysius: sc. the younger. — sublatis iudiciis: the orderly administration of justice, with which politics had interfered for many years, had been almost suspended during the Civil War; cf. pro Marc. 23 (delivered in this very year) omnia sunt excitanda tibi, C. Caesar, uni, quae iacere sentis, belli ipsius impetu, quod necesse fuit, percussa atque prostrata: constituenda iudicia, etc. — regno forensi: cf. regnum iudiciale, Ep. I. 1.

2. quid quaeris: cf. Ep. V. 4 n. and Intr. 98. — id . . . nescio: i.e. 'I do not know of what value this protection is which the friendship of such men as Hirtius and Dolabella gives me.' — in acie non

fui. Ceteri quidem, Pompeius, Lentulus tuus, Scipio, Afranius foede perierunt. 'At Cato praeclare.' Iam istuc quidem, cum volumus, licebit; demus modo operam ne tam necesse nobis sit quam illi fuit, — id quod 3 agimus. Ergo hoc primum. Sequitur illud: ipse melior fio, primum valetudine, quam intermissis exercitationibus amiseram; deinde ipsa illa, si qua fuit in me, facultas orationis, nisi me ad has exercitationes rettulissem, exaruisset. Extremum illud est, quod tu nescio an primum putes: pluris iam pavones confeci quam tu pullos columbinos. Tu istuc te Hateriano iure delectas, ego me hic Hirtiano. Veni igitur, si vir es, et discce a me προλεγόμενας quas quaeris; etsi sus Minervam. 4 Si, quomodo video, aestimationes tuas vendere non fui: see Intr. 31 (end). — Pompeius: see Intr. 31. — Lentulus: on his death, cf. Ep. XXXV. 23 n. — Scipio: Metellus Scipio, while attempting to escape after the battle of Thapsus, fell into the hands of the Caesarians, and was put to death or took his own life (cf. Bell. Afr. 96). — Afranius: after escaping from the battle of Thapsus, he was captured by a detachment of Caesar's troops, and was murdered during an uprising of the soldiers (cf. Bell. Afr. 95). See also Intr. 33. For an account of Cato's death, see Bell. Afr. 88. — hoc primum: pointing back to munio . . . tempora, above.

3. pavones: Hortensius is said to have been the first to introduce the peacock as a table delicacy, at the dinner which he gave on being elected augur (cf. Varr. R. R. 3. 6. 6). Cf. also Hor. Sat. 2. 2. 23–28. In Ep. LXIII. 2 Cicero jestingly remarks upon his boldness in giving a dinner to Hirtius without a peacock. — istic: sc. in Naples. — iure: with a double meaning, 'legal procedure' and 'sauce.' Cf. ius Verrinum, in Verr. ii. 1. 121. Haterius was a jurist, staying probably with Paetus, at Naples. — προλεγόμενας (or προηγμένα, as Mendelssohn prefers): with a double reference, to the 'principles' of law and to 'receipts' in cooking. — sus Minervam (sc. docebo): a favorite proverb in both Greek and Latin for 'teaching one's betters.' Cf. Acad. 1. 18 nam etsi non sus Minervam, ut aiunt, tamen inepte quisquis Minervam docet. Cf. Intr. 102.

4. si, quomodo video, aestimationes, if, as I fancy, you cannot, etc. See Crit. Append. — aestimationes tuas: concretely used for the land which, after its value had been estimated, had been turned over to him as creditor. Cf. bona perdas and aestima-

potes neque ollam denariorum implere, Romam tibi remigrandum est; satius est hic cruditate quam istic fame. Video te bona perdidisse; spero idem istuc familiaris tuos. Actum igitur de te est, nisi provides. Potes mulo isto quem tibi reliquum dicis esse, quoniam cantherium comedisti, Romam pervehi. Sella tibi erit in ludo tamquam hypodidascolo proxima; eam pulvinus sequetur.

LXIII. (Fam. 9. 20.)

CICERO PAETO.

Dupliciter delectatus sum tuis litteris, et quod ipse risi et quod te intellexi iam posse ridere; me autem a te, ut scurram velitem, malis oneratum esse, non mo-

tionem accipere, Ep. LXI. 7.— ollam denariorum implere: this phrase has a proverbial ring to it, and calls up the picture of the miser with his pot of gold, as he is represented in the Aulularia, for instance. In this case, however, the pot of Paetus contained not gold but only silver denarii. The Greek genitive after complere and implere, which is frequent in Plautus (cf., e.g., Amph. 471; Aul. 552, and Brix on Men. 901), is found several times in Cicero.— satius est: sc. mori.— spero idem istuc: sc. passos esse. In that case, they could not give Paetus dinners to keep him from going to Rome.— actum igitur de te est, it is all up with you. Cf. transactum est, Ep. XI. 3 n.— in ludo: i.e. in Cicero's school of oratory.— proxima: sc. meae sellae.

LXIII. Rome, early part of Aug. 46 B.C.

1. scurram velitem: the scurra was the professional wit and dinerout, whose object in life was to secure a good dinner, and whose stock in trade was flattery, wit, and buffoonery,— the character which has been immortalized by Terence in the person of Phormio, and by Plautus in Peniculus. The veles was a skirmisher. Therefore a scurra veles would be a wit who carried on a guerilla warfare, taking a shot at every one and everything about him. The comparison is made more apt by the fact that in these very letters (e.g. Ep. LXI. 7) Cicero has been threatening to dine with Paetus whether he wishes him or not. The opportunity of the scurra at a dinner came with the secunda mensa, when the company gave itself up to conversation and jest, but the mala (apples), which were brought on at this point, lent themselves as ready missiles to be used against the jester. In a similar way, to the volley of wit which Cicero had aimed at Paetus in his letters Paeleste tuli; illud doleo, in ista loca venire me, ut constitueram, non potuisse; habuisses enim non hospitem, sed contubernalem. At quem virum! Non eum quem tu es solitus promulside conficere; integram famem ad ovum adfero, itaque usque ad assum vitulinum opera perducitur. Illa mea quae solebas antea laudare, 'O hominem facilem! O hospitem non gravem!' abierunt; nam omnem nostram de re p. curam, cogitationem de dicenda in senatu sententia, commentationem causarum abiecimus, in Epicuri nos, adversari nostri, castra coniecimus, nec tamen ad hanc insolentiam, sed ad illam tuam lautitiam, veterem dico, cum in sumptum habebas, etsi numquam plura praedia habuisti. Proinde te para; cum homine et edaci tibi res est et qui iam aliquid intellegat; ὀψιμαθεῖς autem homines scis quam insolentes sint. Dediscendae tibi sunt sportellae et artolagani tui. Nos iam ex arte ista tantum habemus ut Verrium tuum et Camillum — qua munditia homines, qua elegantia! — vocare saepius audeamus. Sed vide audaciam; etiam Hirtio cenam dedi, sine pavone tus replies with mala (raillery). Upon the military metaphor, cf. quas ego, etc., Ep. V. 1 n. — in ista loca: to Paetus's villa near Naples. — promulside: cf. Ep. LXI. 8 n. — ad ovum: eggs were commonly included in the promulsis, or first course at dinner. — assum vitulinum: a favorite article of food in the second course, or cena proper, where the substantial dishes were served. — ad hanc insolentiam (sc. venimus), to the extravagance in vogue at present (or here). — habebas, had money; the verb is used absolutely. — plura praedia, although you have never had more estates. Cf. Ep. LXI. 7 n.

2. ὀψιμαθεῖς: Horace's seri studiorum (Sat. 1. 10. 21), whose late and superficial acquisition of knowledge upon a subject only increased their insolent conceit. Cf. Aul. Gell. 11. 7. Cicero's newly acquired knowledge had come from Hirtius and Dolabella. Cf. Ep. LXI. 7. — Verrium, Camillum: men noted as connoisseurs in dinner-giving. Camillus was a prominent real-estate lawyer; cf. Fam. 5. 20. 3. — etiam Hirtio: cf. cenitare, Ep. LXI. 7 n. — sine pavone: cf. Ep. LXII. 3 n. — tamen. In ea cena cocus meus praeter ius fervens nihil non potuit imitari. Haec igitur est nunc vita 3 nostra: Mane salutamus domi et bonos viros multos, sed tristes, et hos laetos victores qui me quidem perofficiose et peramanter observant. Vbi salutatio defluxit, litteris me involvo; aut scribo aut lego. Veniunt etiam qui me audiunt quasi doctum hominem, quia paulo sum quam ipsi doctior. Inde corpori omne tempus datur. Patriam eluxi iam et gravius et diutius quam ulla mater unicum filium. Sed cura, si me amas, ut valeas, ne ego te iacente bona tua comedim; statui enim tibi ne aegrotō quidem parcere.

LXIV. (Fam. 9. 17.)

CICERO [L. PAPIRIO] PAETO.

Non tu homo ridiculus es, qui, cum Balbus noster 1 apud te fuerit, ex me quaeras quid de istis municipiis tamen: the position is colloquial. Cf. Plaut. Capt. 393 istuc ne praecipias, facile memoria memini tamen. Cf. also ibid. 187, 404; Rud. 569, etc.

3. bonos viros: the Optimates. See bonorum virorum, Ep. XVI. 2 n. — perofficiose et peramanter: cf. Intr. 77. — salutatio: a good illustration of the colloquial use of a noun in -tio. Cf. Intr. 75. In this day's programme no mention is made of law practice or public business, although in earlier days Cicero has told us that he was compelled by press of business to forego even the siesta which all Romans were supposed to take at midday. The ordinary life of a prominent Roman included the ientaculum, the salutatio, the day's business, the prandium at midday, the siesta, the daily exercise, the bath about 3 P.M. (to the last two Cicero refers in inde corpori, etc.), and the cena. — si me amas: cf. Ep. XIII. 3 n. and Intr. 100. — comedim: this archaic form leads Böckel to regard bona tua comedim as a quotation from some old poet. Perhaps, however, the form survived in popular speech, and was used here to heighten the humorous effect.

LXIV. Rome, Aug. or Sept., 46 B.C.

1. Balbus: see Ep. XXI. 2 n. For the visit, cf. Fam. 9. 19. — de . . . agris: there was a possibility that land in Campania would be assigned to Caesar's veterans, and, et agris futurum putem? quasi aut ego quicquam sciam quod iste nesciat, aut, si quid aliquando scio, non ex isto soleam scire. Immo vero, si me amas, tu fac ut sciam quid de nobis futurum sit; habuisti enim in tua potestate ex quo vel ex sobrio vel certe ex ebrio scire posses. Sed ego ista, mi Paete, non quaero, primum quia de lucro prope iam quadriennium vivimus, si aut hoc lucrum est aut haec vita, superstitem rei p. vivere; deinde quod scire quoque mihi videor quid futurum sit. Fiet enim quodcumque volent qui valebunt, valebunt autem semper arma. Satis igitur nobis esse debet, quicquid conceditur. Hoc si qui pati non potuit, mori

 2 debuit. Veientem quidem agrum et Capenatem metiuntur; hoc non longe abest a Tusculano; nihil tamen timeo. Fruor dum licet, opto ut semper liceat; si id minus contigerit, tamen, quoniam ego vir fortis idemque philosophus vivere pulcherrimum duxi, non possum eum non diligere, cuius beneficio id consecutus sum. Qui si cupiat esse rem p., qualem fortasse et ille vult et omnes optare debemus, quid faciat tamen non habet;
 3 ita se cum multis conligavit. Sed longius progredior; scribo enim ad te. Hoc tamen scito, non modo me qui consiliis non intersum, sed ne ipsum quidem principem scire quid futurum sit; nos enim illi servimus, if this were done, the estates of Paetus would go with the rest. — immo vero: commonly used to make an emphatic correction; cf., e.g., Ter. Phorm. 936; And. 854. In combination with si, immo vero and immo are very common in colloquial Latin; cf., e.g., Ter. Eun. 355; Cic. Fam. 8. 8. 2; 8. 9. 1. — de nobis: in contrast to de municipiis, above. — primum

. . . vivimus: i.e. the mere chance to live was an unexpected boon. — de lucro: a mercantile expression; cf. Liv. 40. 8; Ter. Phorm. 251 quicquid praeter spem eveniet, omne id deputabo esse in lucro. For a similar use of de, cf. Cic. in Verr. ii. 3. 105 de publico convivari.
 2. ille: i.e. Caesar. — quid . . . habet, he does n't know what to do.

ipse temporibus. Ita nec ille quid tempora postulatura sint nec nos quid ille cogitet scire possumus. Haec tibi antea non rescripsi, non quo cessator esse solem, praesertim in litteris, sed, cum explorati nihil haberem, nec tibi sollicitudinem ex dubitatione mea nec spem ex adfirmatione adferre volui. Illud tamen adscribam, quod est verissimum, me his temporibus adhuc de isto periculo nihil audisse. Tu tamen pro tua sapientia debebis optare optima, cogitare difficillima, ferre quaecumque erunt.

LXV. (Fam. 6. 6.)

M. CICERO S. D. A. CAECINAE.

Vereor ne desideres officium meum — quod tibi pro nostra et meritorum multorum et studiorum parium coniunctione deesse non debet, — sed tamen vereor ne litterarum a me officium requiras, quas tibi et iam pridem et saepe misissem, nisi cotidie melius exspectans gratulationem quam confirmationem animi tui

3. cessator: cf. Infr. 75. — de isto periculo: cf. de istis municipiis, 1.

LXV. Rome, Sept. or Oct., 46 B.C. A. Caecina, descended from an old Etruscan family, was a man of considerable ability, both as a writer and as an orator. Cf. Sen. Nat. Quaest. 2. 56. In hoc apud Caecinam invenio, facundum virum et qui habuisset aliquando in eloquentia nomen, nisi illum Ciceronis umbra pressisset. In fact it was his course as a political pamphleteer, rather than as a soldier, which led Caesar to banish him (cf. Suet. Jul. 75). He was at this time in Sicily. It was in his father's behalf that Cicero delivered the oration pro Caecina in 69 B.C. Cicero wrote two other letters to the younger Caecina (viz. Fam. 6. 5 and 8), one in his behalf (Fam. 13. 66), and received one from him (Fam. 6. 7).

1. studiorum parium: Caecina was an authority upon the Etruscan method of interpreting omens, and had written a book, de Etrusca Disciplina, while Cicero, after his elevation to the augurate, had interested himself in the same class of subjects, and had written a treatise called de Auguriis. Cf. also Fam. 6. 9. 1. — litterarum: used as a plural; cf. litteris, Ep. XCIX. 1 n. — melius: cf. prolixè, Ep. XXI. 1 n.

complecti litteris maluissem. Nunc, ut spero, brevi gratulabimur; itaque in aliud tempus id argumentum
 2 epistulae differo. His autem litteris animum tuum, quem minime imbecillum esse et audio et spero, etsi non sapientissimi, at amicissimi hominis auctoritate confirmandum etiam atque etiam puto, nec iis quidem verbis quibus te consoler ut adfictum et iam omni spe salutis orbatum, sed ut eum de cuius incolumitate non plus dubitem quam te memini dubitare de mea. Nam cum me ex re p. expulissent ii qui illam cadere posse stante me non putarent, memini me ex multis hospitibus qui ad me ex Asia, in qua tu eras, venerant, audire
 3 te de glorioso et celeri reditu meo confirmare. Si te ratio quaedam Etruscae disciplinae, quam a patre, nobilissimo atque optimo viro, acceperas, non fefellit, ne nos quidem nostra divinatio fallat; quam cum sapientissimorum virorum monumentis atque praeceptis plurimoque, ut tu scis, doctrinae studio, tum magno etiam usu tractandae rei p. magnaue nostrorum tem-
 4 porum varietate consecuti sumus. Cui quidem divinationi hoc plus confidimus, quod ea nos nihil in his tam obscuris rebus tamque perturbatis umquam omnino fefellit. Dicerem quae ante futura dixissem, ni verer

2. ii qui . . . putarent: Cicero probably has Caesar and Pompey in mind as well as Clodius. — in qua tu eras: engaged in business transactions probably; cf. Fam. 6. 8. 2.

3. Etruscae disciplinae: cf. studiorum parium, 1. — quam . . . consecuti sumus: Cicero's forecast of the future rests upon: (1) the teachings of wise men (monumentis atque praeceptis) and his own study of philosophy (doc- trinae studio); (2) his long and varied experience in public affairs. — plurimo: the attributive use of the singular plurimus is rare in classical prose, and is scarcely found outside the formula plurimam salutem dicere (Böckel).

4. quod ea . . . fefellit: cf. Cicero's own words in Att. 3. 15. 5 hic mihi primum meum consilium non solum defuit, sed etiam obfuit. Caeci, caeci, inquam, fuimus in vestitu mutando (in putting on mourn-ne ex eventis fingere viderer. Sed tamen plurimi sunt testes me et initio, ne coniungeret se cum Caesare, monuisse Pompeium et postea, ne seiungeret; coniunctione frangi senatus opes, diiunctione civile bellum excitari videbam. Atque utebar familiarissime Caesare, Pompeium faciebam plurimi, sed erat meum consilium cum fidele Pompeio, tum salutare utrique. Quae prae- 5 terea providerim praetereo; nolo enim hunc de me optime meritum existimare ea me suasisse Pompeio, quibus ille si paruisset, esset hic quidem clarus in toga et princeps, sed tantas opes, quantas nunc habet, non haberet. Eundum in Hispaniam censui. Quod si fecisset, civile bellum nullum omnino fuisset. Rationem haberi absentis non tam pugnavi ut liceret quam ut, quoniam ipso consule pugnante populus iusserat, haberetur. Causa orta belli est. Quid ego praetermisi aut monitorum aut querelarum, cum vel iniquissimam pacem iustissimo bello anteferrem? Victa est 6 auctoritas mea, non tam a Pompeio (nam is movebaing), etc. — ne . . . seiungeret : cf. mederi, Ep. XLII. 2 n., and Philipp. 2. 24 mea illa vox est nota multis: 'Vtinam, Pompei, cum Caesare societatem aut numquam coisses aut numquam diremisses.' — Pompeium . . . plurimi : cf. Att. 8. 2. 4 (written in 49 B.C.) ego pro Pompeio libenter emori possum; facio pluris omnium hominum neminem.

5. hunc : i.e. Caesar. — ille : i.e. Pompey. — eundum in Hispaniam censui : the province of Spain, which Pompey had received at the close of his second consulship, in 55 B.C., for a period of five years, was granted to him for five years longer at the close of his third consulship, in 52 B.C.

While retaining the province, Pompey stayed, however, in Italy, — a course of action the illegality of which laid him open to the attacks of the Caesarians; and Cicero, in advising that Pompey should go to Spain, would have been acting in the interests of harmony. Cicero probably gave the advice indicated during the meeting of Pompeians at Capua, on Jan. 25, 49 B.C.; cf. Fam. 16. 12. 3 with Att. 7. 15. 2; cf. also Att. 7. 14. 1. — rationem absentis : the right of suing for the consulship while absent from the city. See Ep. XLII. introd. note; also ut absentis ratio haberetur, Ep. XLV. 3 n., and Intr. 21. — ipso consule pugnante : sc. Pompey.

tur) quam ab iis qui duce Pompeio freti peropportunam et rebus domesticis et cupiditatibus suis illius belli victoriam fore putabant. Susceptum bellum est quiescente me, depulsum ex Italia manente me, quoad potui, sed valuit apud me plus pudor meus quam timor; veritus sum deesse Pompei saluti, cum ille aliquando non defuisset meae. Itaque vel officio vel fama bonorum vel pudore victus, ut in fabulis Amphiarus, sic ego 'prudens et sciens ad pestem ante oculos positam' sum profectus; quo in bello nihil adversi accidit non 7 praedicente me. Quare quoniam, ut augures et astrologi solent, ego quoque augur publicus ex meis superioribus praedictis constitui apud te auctoritatem auguri et divinationis meae, debet habere fidem nostra praedictio. Non igitur ex alitis involatu nec e cantu sinistro oscinis, ut in nostra disciplina est, nec ex tripudiis

6. rebus, etc.: both Cicero and Caesar believed that many Pompeians urged on the Civil War in the hope of relieving themselves from their heavy indebtedness. Cf. Att. 11. 6. 2; Fam. 7. 3. 2; and Caes. B. C. 3. 32 erat plena lictorum et imperiorum provincia, differt praefectis atque exactoribus, qui praeter imperatas pecunias suo etiam privato compendio serviebant; dictitabant enim se domo patriaque expulsos omnibus necessariis egere rebus, ut honesta praescriptione rem turpissimam tegerent. — pudor meus: cf. Fam. 7. 3. 1 pudori tamen malui famaue cedere quam salutis meae rationem ducere; Att. 9. 19. 2 pergamus igitur, . . . nec mehercule hoc facio rei publicae causa, quam funditus deletam puto, sed ne quis me putet ingratum in eum qui me levavit iis incommodis quibus idem affecerat. — ali-

quando: Pompey, who had allowed Cicero to be exiled without protest, exerted himself at last to secure his recall. — ut in fabulis Amphiarus: Amphiarus, the seer, foresaw that he should be ruined in the struggle of the Seven against Thebes (cf. Ribbeck, Röm. Trag. 487). Cicero probably has in mind some tragedy, perhaps the Eriphyle of Accius (cf. ibid. 487-497), founded upon his fate. — prudens et sciens: cf. Ep. L. 5 n. The phrase prudens . . . positam probably forms part of two iambic verses quoted from some tragic poet. Cf. Ribbeck, Trag. Rom. Frag. p. 256.

7. non . . . involatu nec . . . oscinis: birds were divided into two classes, alites (or praepetes) and oscines; the latter gave omens by singing, the former by their flight and the motion of their wings; cf.

sollistimis aut soniviis tibi auguror, sed habeo alia signa quae observem; quae etsi non sunt certiora illis, minus tamen habent vel obscuritatis vel erroris. Notantur 8 autem mihi ad divinandum signa duplici quadam via, quarum alteram duco e Caesare ipso, alteram e temporum civilium natura atque ratione. In Caesare haec sunt: mitis clemensque natura, qualis exprimitur praeclearo illo libro 'Querelarum' tuarum. Accedit quod mirifice ingeniis excellentibus, quale est tuum, delectatur. Praeterea cedit multorum iustis et officio incensis, non inanibus aut ambitiosis voluntatibus, in quo vehementer eum consentiens Etruria movebit. Cur 5 haec igitur adhuc parum profecerunt? Quia non putat se sustinere causas posse multorum, si tibi, cui iustius videtur irasci posse, concesserit. 'Quae est igitur,' inquires, 'spes ab irato?' Eodem fonte se haustum intellegit laudes suas e quo sit leviter adpersus. Postremo homo valde est acutus et multum providens: intellegit te, hominem in parte Italiae minime contemnenda facile omnium nobilissimum et in communi re p. cuivis summorum tuae aetatis vel ingenio vel

Serv. on Verg. Aen. 3. 361. In taking the auspices, the augur faced south, and the east, from which favorable omens came, would be to his left (sinistra). — involatu: cf. invitatu, Ep. XXI. 2 n. — in nostra disciplina: Cicero became an augur in 53 B.C. — nec . . . soniviis: if the sacred chickens ate the pulse so rapidly that a part of it fell to the ground, the auspices were favorable.

8. Querelarum: Caecina's Liber Querelarum was evidently a book complimentary to Caesar, which Caecina wrote while in exile.

Billerbeck surmises that it was similar to Ovid's Tristia. On Caesar's clemency, cf. Suet. Iul. 75 and Caesar's own words to Cicero (Att. 9. 16. 2): recte auguraris de me — bene enim tibi cognitus sum — nihil a me abesse longius crudelitate. — consentiens Etruria: Etruria, as Caecina's native province, would favor his recall.

9. leviter adpersus: in Caecina's first political pamphlet. Cf. introd. note. To encourage Caecina, Cicero minimizes the virulence of his attack on Caesar. Suetonius (Iul. 75), however, char-

gratia vel fama populi R. parem, non posse prohiberi re publica diutius. Nolet hoc temporis potius esse 10 aliquando beneficium quam iam suum. Dixi de Caesare; nunc dicam de temporum rerumque natura.
 Nemo est tam inimicus ei causae quam Pompeius animatus melius quam paratus susceperat, qui nos malos civis dicere aut homines improbos audeat. In quo admirari soleo gravitatem et iustitiam et sapientiam Caesaris: numquam nisi honorificentissime Pompeium appellat. 'At in eius persona multa fecit asperius.' Armorum ista et victoriae sunt facta, non Caesaris. At nos quemadmodum est complexus! Cas-sium sibi legavit, Brutum Galliae praefecit, Sulpicium Graeciae, Marcellum cui maxime suscensebat cum 11 summa illius dignitate restituit. Quo igitur haec spec-tant? Rerum hoc natura et civilium temporum non acterizes his pamphlet as a criminosissimus liber. — beneficium: a tardy forgiveness would do little credit to Caesar's generosity.

10. nos: i.e. the Pompeians. — in eius persona: with this use of in Böckel compares Cic. Philipp. 14. 9 (animus) dicere reformidat quae L. Antonius in Parmensium liberis et coniugibus effecerit; and on persona he cites appositely Seyffert-Müller on Lael. p. 21: 'persona, a term taken from the masks used upon the stage, does not mean the "person" in the sense of the "individual" (homo), but refers always to the rôle which one takes, or to the external relations which position, rank, and office suggest, to that which one is, represents, or wishes to represent.' So here the reference is to Pompey as the political leader. — Cassium: in the Civil War C. Cassius had commanded a part of the Pompeian fleet (cf. Caes. B. C. 3. 101), but submitted to Caesar soon after the battle of Pharsalus. — Brutum: Caesar entrusted M. Brutus with the province of Cisalpine Gaul in 47 B.C. — Sulpicium: cf. Ep. LXXV. introd. note. At the outbreak of the Civil War, Servius Sulpicius Rufus, like Cicero, maintained a neutral attitude, and after the battle of Pharsalus withdrew even from the scene of the struggle. At this time he was governor of Achaia, on Caesar's appointment. — Marcellum: M. Claudius Marcellus, consul in 51 B.C., had been a bold and consistent champion of the senatorial party, had served under Pompey in the Civil War until the battle of Pharsalus was fought, and had then gone into voluntary banishment to Mytilene. He was pardoned by Caesar; cf. Fam. 4. 7 and 4. 9.

patietur, nec manens nec mutata ratio feret, primum ut non in causa pari eadem sit et condicio et fortuna omnium, deinde ut in eam civitatem boni viri et boni cives nulla ignominia notati non revertantur, in quam tot nefariorum scelerum condemnati reverterunt. Habes augurium meum ; quo, si quid addubitarem, non ¹² potius uterer quam illa consolatione, qua facile fortem virum sustentarem : te, si explorata victoria arma sumpsisses pro re p. — ita enim tum putabas, — non nimis esse laudandum ; sin propter incertos exitus eventusque bellorum posse accidere ut vinceremur putasses, non debere te ad secundam fortunam bene paratum fuisse, adversam ferre nullo modo posse. Disputarem etiam quanto solacio tibi conscientia tui facti, quantae delectationi in rebus adversis litterae esse deberent. Commemorarem non solum veterum, sed horum etiam recentium vel ducum vel comitum tuorum gravissimos casus, etiam externos multos claros viros nominarem ; levat enim dolorem communis quasi legis et humanae condicionis recordatio. Exponerem etiam ¹³ quemadmodum hic et quanta in turba quantaque in

11. tot . . . condemnati : cf. Caes. B. C. 3. 1 nonnullos ambitus Pompeia lege (of 52 B.C.) damnatos illis temporibus, quibus in urbe praesidia legionum Pompeus habuerat . . . in integrum restituit. Cf. also Cic. Att. 10. 4. 8 ; Fam. 15. 19. 3 ; Suet. Iul. 41.

12. illa : explained by the following oratio obliqua. — te, si explorata victoria, etc., if you had taken up arms, when you thought victory assured. — adversam . . . posse: opposed in thought to the clause with paratum fuisse. Both paratum fuisse and posse depend on debere. — quantae delectationi : cf. Fam. 6. 12. 5 sed est unum perfugium doctrina ac litterae . . . quae secundis rebus delectationem modo habere videbantur, nunc vero etiam salutem. — ducum vel comitum tuorum : cf. Ep. LXII. 2 nn. — multos claros viros : not multos et claros viros, because claros viros constitutes a single idea. Cicero may be thinking, for instance, of Alcibiades and Themistocles, who died in banishment.

13. quanta . . . viveremus : Cicero suggests the same consola-confusione rerum omnium viveremus; necesse est enim minore desiderio perdita re p. carere quam bona. Sed hoc genere nihil opus est. Incolumem te cito, ut spero, vel potius, ut perspicio, videbimus. Interea tibi absenti et huic, qui adest, imagini animi et corporis tui, constantissimo atque optimo filio tuo, studium officium operam laborem meum iampridem et pollicitus sum et detuli, nunc hoc amplius, quod me amicissime cotidie magis Caesar amplectitur, familiares quidem eius sicuti neminem. Apud quem quicquid valebo vel auctoritate vel gratia, valebo tibi. Tu cura ut cum firmitudine te animi tum etiam spe optima sustententes.

LXVI. (Fam. 6. 14.)

CICERO LIGARIO.

1 Me scito omnem meum laborem, omnem operam curam studium in tua salute consumere; nam cum te tory thought to another exile, Torquatus: nos qui Romae sumus miserrimos esse duco, Fam. 6. 4. 3. — hoc genere: sc. consolationis. — me . . . Caesar amplectitur: cf. Ep. LXI. 2. — familiares eius: i.e. Hirtius, Balbus, Dolabella, Matius, etc.; cf. Fam. 6. 12. 2. With Cicero's utterances in 4–6, Fam. 4. 1. 1; 6. 21. 1, and 4. 14. 2 may be profitably compared.

LXVI. Rome, Nov. 26 (Sept. 23 of the Julian calendar), 46 B.C. Q. Ligarius was in 50 B.C. legate in charge of the province of Africa. When in 49 B.C. the Pompeian P. Attius Varus, who had formerly been propraetor of Africa, appeared in the province, Ligarius delivered it over to him, and assisted him later in maintaining his position against L. Aelius Tu-berero, who had been sent out by the senate as governor. After the battle of Thapsus, in which Ligarius took part against Caesar, he was captured by the Caesarians, and in 46 B.C. was living in exile. The combined efforts of Cicero and the relatives of Ligarius had thus far failed to secure his recall. To prevent the success of the movement in his behalf, Q. Tubero, son of Aelius Tubero, brought a charge de vi against him. In his defense Cicero delivered an oration (still extant), which made so deep an impression upon Caesar, who presided at the trial (cf. pro Lig. 37), that Ligarius was ultimately recalled. He joined later the conspiracy against Caesar, and was probably put to death under the Second Triumvirate.

semper maxime dilexi, tum fratrum tuorum, quos aequae atque te summa benevolentia sum complexus, singularis pietas amorque fraternus nullum me patitur officii erga te studique munus aut tempus praetermittere. Sed quae faciam fecerimque pro te, ex illorum te litteris quam ex meis malo cognoscere; quid autem sperem aut confidam et exploratum habeam de salute tua, id tibi a me declarari volo. Nam si quisquam est timidus in magnis periculosisque rebus semperque magis adversos rerum exitus metuens quam sperans secundos, is ego sum et, si hoc vitiumst, eo me non carere confiteor. Ego idem tamen, cum a. d. v. K. intercalares priores rogatu fratrum tuorum venissem mane ad Caesarem atque omnem adeundi et conveniendi illius indignitatem et molestiam pertulissem, cum fratres et propinqui tui iacerent ad pedes et ego essem locutus, quae causa, quae tuum tempus postulabat, non solum ex oratione Caesaris, quae sane mollis et liberalis fuit,

1. exploratum habeam: cf. sollicitum habent, Ep. LI. 1 n. and Intr. 84 d.

2. a. d. v. K., etc.: i.e. Nov. 26 under the old calendar, or Sept. 23 under the new. The Roman calendar was so far from correct at this time, that Jan. 1, 46 B.C., came in the middle of the autumn. This state of things Caesar remedied by the insertion of 90 extra days into the year 46 B.C. The year 46 contained, therefore, 445 days. After the Terminalia (Feb. 23), an intercalary month of 23 days was inserted, and between November and December two intercalary months were inserted containing together 67 days. These months were distinguished as mensis intercalaris prior and mensis intercalaris posterior. Cf. Zeitrechnung d. Griechen u. Römer by von Unger in Müller's Handbuch, I. 816 f. — mane ad Caesarem: cf. Att. 14. 1. 2 cum Sesti rogatu apud eum fuisset expectaremque sedens quoad vocarer, dixisse eum: 'Ego dubitem quin summo in odio sim, cum M. Cicero sedeat nec suo commodo me convenire possit?' These two passages indicate a most significant change in the old Roman salutatio. There is now one patronus par excellence, viz. Caesar, and all Romans are his clientes, who, whether plebeian or aristocrat, must wait their turn in his antechamber (expectarem sedens), and seek favors at his hands by the most abject signs of submission (iacerent ad pedes).

sed etiam ex oculis et vultu, ex multis praeterea signis, quae facilius perspicere potui quam scribere, hac opinione discessi, ut mihi tua salus dubia non esset. 3 Quamobrem fac animo magno fortique sis et, si turbidissima sapienter ferebas, tranquilliora laete feras. Ego tamen tuis rebus sic adero, ut difficillimis, neque Caesari solum, sed etiam amicis eius omnibus, quos mihi amicissimos esse cognovi, pro te, sicut adhuc feci, libentissime supplicabo. Vale.

LXVII. (Fam. 9. 15.)

CICERO PAETO S.

1 Duabus tuis epistulis respondebo, uni quam quadri- duo ante acceperam a Zetho, alteri quam attulerat Phileros tabellarius. Ex prioribus tuis litteris intellexi pergratam tibi esse curam meam valetudinis tuae, quam tibi perspectam esse gaudeo; sed, mihi crede, non perinde ut est reapse ex litteris perspicere potuisti. Nam cum a satis multis (non enim possum aliter dicere) et colime videam et diligi, nemo est illorum omnium mihi te LXVII. Rome, first intercalary month after Nov., 46 B.C. (Oct. of the Julian calendar); see Ep. LXVI. introd. note. For Paetus, see Ep. LXI. introd. note.

1. Zetho: probably a freedman. — pergratam: cf. Intr. 77. — mihi crede: see Ep. XXVII. 1 n. — perinde ut: the comparative phrases perinde ut, proinde ac (cf. Fam. 10. 31. 2; Ep. XCII. 2), proinde ut (cf. Fam. 10. 4. 4), and pro eo ac (Ep. LXXV. 1) seem to be either legal or archaic. Cf. Palmer's note on Plaut. Amph. 685. — reapse: for re capse = re ipsa. In Plautus such forms as cumpse, eampse, and eapse are not uncommon (cf. Trin. 974; Poen. 272, etc.). Reapse occurs in some five or six other passages in Cicero, but apparently in every case Cicero is affecting an archaic or colloquial tone. — satis: Wölfflin (Lat. u. rom. Comparison, 23) has shown that satis in Plautus and in late Latin sometimes has the force of valde, and that would seem to be its meaning here. Cf., for this meaning, Plaut. M. G. 918; Ter. And. 475; Cic. Fam. 11. 10. 3; 8 11. 3; 10. 21 A.

iucundior. Nam quod me amas, quod id et iam pridem et constanter facis, est id quidem magnum atque haud scio an maximum, sed tibi commune cum multis ; quod tu ipse tam amandus es tamque dulcis tamque in omni genere iucundus, id est proprie tuum. Accedunt non Attici, sed salsiores quam illi Atticorum, Romani veteres atque urbani sales. Ego autem — existimes licet quidlibet — mirifice capior facetiis, maxime nostratibus, praesertim cum eas videam primum oblitus Latio tum cum in urbem nostram est infusa peregrinitas, nunc vero etiam bracatis et transalpinis nationibus, ut nullum veteris leporis vestigium appareat. Itaque te cum video, omnis mihi Granios, omnis Lucilios, vere ut dicam, Crassos quoque et Laelios videre videor.

2. Attici (sales): the Athenians were noted for their wit. Cf., e.g., Cic. de Off. 1. 104 duplex omnino est iocandi genus: unum inliberale petulans flagitiosum obscenum, alterum elegans urbanum ingeniosum facetum. Quo genere non modo Plautus noster et Atticorum antiqua comoedia, sed etiam philosophorum Socraticorum libri referti sunt. The whole passage may be read to advantage in connection with the letter before us. — capior facetiis: Cicero himself was a noted wit, and collections of his witticisms were made both by his freedman Tiro, and by his friend Trebonius. Cf. quod meum, etc., Ep. LXI. 4 n. and Fam. 15. 21. 2. — nostratibus: cf. Ep. XXXVI. 1 n. — oblitus Latio: i.e. adulterated or tintured by the admixture of Latin elements. — tum: i.e. about 90 B.C., when the Italians received the right of Roman citizenship. — bracatis et transalpinis nationibus: Suetonius (Jul. 80) gives the following satirical couplet as one sung in the streets after Caesar gave the Gauls the right of citizenship: Gallus Caesar in triumphum ducit, idem in curiam. | Galli bracas deposuerunt, latum clavum sumpserunt. — veteris leporis: the contests in wit between the representatives of different Italian towns had been from time immemorial the favorite entertainment of the people at their public gatherings, until they gave way to more conventional dramatic performances of a more or less un-Roman character. Cf. Fam. 7. 31. 2. — Granios: the generalizing plural. Granius, a herald noted for his wit, was a contemporary of the orator L. Crassus. Cicero mentions him frequently, saying of him (de Or. 2. 244): Granio quidem nemo dicacior. Cf. also Brut. 172; pro Planc. 33. — omnis Lucilios: i.e. Lucilius and men like him. Cicero refers to C. Lucilius, the satirist (180-103 B.C.). Cf. Horace's estimate of the wit of Lucilius in Sat.

Moriar si praeter te quemquam reliquum habeo in quo possim imaginem antiquae et vernaculae festivitatis agnoscere. Ad hos lepores cum amor erga me tantus accedat, miraris me tanta perturbatione valetudinis tuae tam graviter exanimatum fuisse? Quod autem altera epistula purgas te non dissuasorem mihi emptionis Neapolitanae fuisse, sed auctorem moderationis, urbane, neque ego aliter accepi; intellexi tamen idem quod his intellego litteris, non existimasse te mihi licere id quod ego arbitrabar, res has non omnino quidem sed magnam partem relinquere. Catulum mihi narras et illa tempora. Quid simile? ne mi quidem ipsi tunc placebat diutius abesse ab rei p. custodia; sedebamus enim in puppi et clavum tenebamus; nunc autem vix est in sentina locus. An minus multa s. c. futura putas, si ego sim Neapoli? Romae cum sum

1. 4 and 10. — Crassos: L. Licinius Crassus, the orator. Cf. Cic. Brut. 143 erat summa gravitas, erat cum gravitate iunctus facetiarum et urbanitatis oratorius, non scurrilis lepos. — Laelios: C. Laelius (Sapiens), the chief interlocutor in the de Amicitia, and introduced as a speaker into the de Re Publica and the de Senectute. Cicero says of him (de Off. 1. 108): in C. Laelio multa hilaritas. Cf. also Hor. Sat. 2. 1. 71 ff. It is strange, as Manutius observes, that Cicero does not in this connection mention C. Julius Caesar Strabo Vopiscus, of whom he remarks (de Off. 1. 133): sale vero et facetiis Caesar, Catuli patris frater, vicit omnes. — moriar si: see ne vivam, Ep. IV. 4 n. — vernaculae, native; opposed to peregrinus.

3. emptionis Neapolitanae: with reference to Cicero's purchase of the villa of Selicius; cf. Ep. LXI. 10. — auctorem moderationis: Paetus had deprecated Cicero's apparent purpose of retiring entirely from public life. — urbane: sc. fecisti. — magnam partem: an attributive accusative, and not the object of relinquere; the attributive accusatives magnam partem, maiorem partem, and maximam partem have acquired in colloquial Latin the force of adverbs, and we find them frequently used as such in Plautus (e.g. M. G. 94, Poen. 413, etc.) and in the Letters (e.g. Fam. 8. 9. 3). — Catulum: Q. Lutatius Catulus, consul in 78 B.C. and one of the leaders of the aristocracy just after Sulla's legislation had put that party in power. — narras, you talk to me of; cf. Ep. LXI. 7 n. — mi: cf. mi, Ep. XCIII. 2 n. — in puppi: cf. contraxi vela, Ep. V. 2 n.

et urgeo forum, s. c. scribuntur apud amatorem tuum, familiarem meum; et quidem, cum in mentem venit, ponor ad scribendum et ante audio s. c. in Armeniam et Syriam esse perlatum, quod in meam sententiam factum esse dicatur, quam omnino mentionem ullam de ea re esse factam. Atque hoc nolim me iocari putes; nam mihi scito iam a regibus ultimis adlatas esse literas, quibus mihi gratias agant quod se mea sententia reges appellaverim, quos ego non modo reges appellatos, sed omnino natos nesciebam. 'Quid ergo est?' Tamen, 5 quamdiu hic erit noster hic praefectus moribus, parebo auctoritati tuae; cum vero aberit, ad fungos me tuos conferam. Domum si habebō, in denos dies singulos sumptuariae legis dies conferam; sin autem minus invenero quod placeat, decrevi habitare apud te, scio enim me nihil tibi gratius facere posse. Donum Sullanam desperabam iam, ut tibi proxime scripsi, sed tamen non abieci. Tu velim, ut scribis, cum fabris

4. urgeo forum: this use of urgeo is perhaps found nowhere else. Cf., however, altum urgere, Hor. Od. 2. 10. 2. — amatorem tuum: i.e. Caesarem. — ponor ad scribendum: cf. legem conscripserunt, Ep. XV. 7 n. Those who had witnessed and signed a bill were said scribendo adfuisse. — scito: see Ep. II. 1 n.

5. quid ergo est: cf. quid quaeris, Ep. V. 4 n. and Intr. 98. — praefectus: in 46 B.C. Caesar was invested with the functions of the censorship under the new title of praefectus morum; cf. Dio Cass. 43. 14; Suet. Iul. 76. — parebo auctoritati tuae: i.e. in advising me to remain at Rome. Cicero speaks as if he were the youth and Paetus the man of wisdom and experience, while the humorous effect is heightened by the unexpected form in which the second alternative is put, ad fungos me tuos conferam. — fungos: highly esteemed by the Romans. Horace's Epicurean friend Catus includes them in his list of delicacies (Sat. 2. 4. 20); cf. also Fam. 7. 26. 2; 9. 10. 2. Paetus would seem to have been an experienced dinner-giver. — domum: sc. at Naples; cf. 3. — sumptuariae legis: the expenditure which the sumptuary laws allowed for one day, should in Cicero's case suffice for ten. Cicero is probably thinking of the lex Julia sumptuaria (cf. Lange, Röm. Alt. 3. 450), passed in the autumn of 46 B.C.; cf. also Fam. 9. 26. 4; 7. 26.

eam perspicias; si enim nihil est in parietibus aut in tecto viti, cetera mihi probabuntur.

LXVIII. (Att. 12. 11.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Male de Seio; sed omnia humana tolerabilia ducenda. Ipsi enim quid sumus aut quamdiu haec curaturi sumus? Ea videamus quae ad nos magis pertinent, nec tamen multo: quid agamus de senatu. Et, ut ne quid praetermittam, Caesonius ad me litteras misit, Postumiam Sulpici domum ad se venisse. De Pompei Magni filia tibi rescripsi nihil me hoc tempore cogitare. Alteram vero illam quam tu scribis, puto, nosti: nihil vidi foedius. Sed adsum; coram igitur.

LXVIII. Tusculum, second intercalary month after Nov., 46 B.C. (old calendar); about Nov. 24 (Julian calendar).

male de Seio: male and factum male were formulae used of a friend recently deceased. Cf. Att. 15. 1 A. 1 O factum male de Alexione; Att. 12. 10 male mehercule de Athamante. Cf. also Catullus, Carm. 3. 16 O factum male, O miselle passer; Ter. Phorm. 751 male factum. Of a joyous event factum bene was used; cf. Ter. And. 975. M. Seius, a Roman knight, was a common friend of Cicero and Atticus. On him, cf. Cic. de Off. 2. 58; Plin. N.H. 15. 1. — Caesonius: Cf. Ep. I. 1 n. — Postumiam Sulpici (sc. uxorem): the omission of words of relationship, uxor, filius, filia (and servus), is very rare in Latin prose, and Cicero allows it perhaps only in his earlier speeches and in the Letters. Cf., for the Letters, Att. 12. 20. 2 Serviliae Claudii (sc. uxoris) pater; Att. 12. 21. 4 Oviae (sc. uxoris) C. Lolli. In Latin poetry the omission is common. Cf. Verg. Aen. 3. 319 Hectoris (uxor) Andromache; Ovid, Met. 12. 622 Oileos (filius) Ajax. See also Tac. Ann. 4. 11; Plin. Ep. 2. 20. 2, etc. — domum ad se venisse: Cicero's divorce from Terentia must have occurred some months before this letter was written (cf. Intr. 52), and Postumia was interested in Cicero's second marriage. — Pompei Magni filia: overtures were evidently being made for a marriage between Cicero and Pompey's daughter. Who the other lady was (alteram illam) we do not know. — obsignata epistula: signare, consignare, and obsignare are technical terms for affixing the seal to a letter

Obsignata epistula accepi tuas. Atticae hilaritatem libenter audio; commotiunculis συμπόσχω.

LXIX. (Att. 12. 1.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Vndecimo die postquam a te discesseram hoc litterularum exaravi egrediens e villa ante lucem, atque eo die cogitabam in Anagnino, postero autem in Tusculano; ibi unum diem. V Kalend. igitur ad constitutum. Atque utinam continuo ad complexum meae Tulliae, ad osculum Atticae possim currere! Quod quidem ipsum scribe quaeso ad me, ut, dum consisto in Tusculano, sciam quid garriat, sin rusticatur, quid — commotiunculis: Attica was suffering from a febricula; cf. Ep. LXIX. 2.

LXIX. Near Arpinum, second intercalary month after Nov., 46 B.C. (old calendar); Nov. 24 (Julian calendar).

1. a te: Atticus was probably in Rome. — hoc litterularum, these few lines; a still stronger expression than hoc litterarum, which Cicero uses elsewhere. Cf. also ne patiamur intermittere litterulas, Att. 14. 4. 2. nescio quid ab eo litterularum, Att. 15. 4. 1. — exaravi: for scripsi. Exarare is properly used of writing with a stilus upon waxen tablets. It is almost certain, however, that Cicero's letters were written with pen and ink upon papyrus (cf. Intr. 59), and that exarare was loosely applied to the new method of writing, just as we carelessly speak of 'sealing a letter.' Exarare was also used of something written in haste; cf. ante lucem cum scriberem contra Epicureos, de eodem oleo et opera exaravi nescio quid ad te et ante lucem dedi, Att. 13. 38. 1; certior a Pilia factus mitti ad te Idibus tabellarios, statim hoc nescio quid exaravi, Att. 14. 22. 1; plura (sc. scribam) otiosus; haec, cum essem in senatu, exaravi, Fam. 12. 20. Cf. the English expression 'to scratch off a few lines.' In the following passage, however, the reference would certainly seem to be to waxen tablets: accubueram hora nona, cum ad te harum exemplum in codicillis exaravi, Fam. 9. 26. 1; and it is possible that the letter before us, being brief, and being sent only from Arpinum to Rome, was written on waxen tablets. — e villa: i.e. from his villa at Arpinum. — in Anagnino: sc. esse. Cf. Ep. LX. 2 (end). — ad constitutum: i.e. in locum (or loco), ubi tecum constitui (Boot). — Atticae: Attica, the daughter of Atticus, must have been at this time less than eight years old. Cf. also in eius nuptiis, Ep. XVI. 7 n — quod ipsum: referring loosely to scribat ad te; eique interea aut scribes salutem aut nuntiabis, itemque Piliae. Et tamen, etsi continuo congressuri sumus, scribes ad me si quid habebis.

- 2 Cum complicarem hanc epistulam, noctuabundus ad me venit cum epistula tua tabellarius, qua lecta de Atticae febricula scilicet valde dolui. Reliqua quae exspectabam ex tuis litteris cognovi omnia. Sed quod scribis 'igniculum matutinum γεροντικόν,' γεροντικώτερον est memoriola vacillare. Ego enim IIII Kal. Axio dederam, tibi III, Quinto, quo die venissem, id est prid. Kal. Hoc igitur habebis. Novi nihil. Quid ergo opus erat epistula? quid, cum coram sumus et garrimus quicquid in buccam? Est profecto quiddam λέσχη, osculum. — scribes . . . nuntia-bis: Cicero is uncertain whether Pilia and Attica are in the country or with Atticus in Rome. — scribes: cf. Intr. 84 b.

2. complicarem: the technical word for fastening a letter. — noctuabundus, after travelling all night long; found nowhere else in Latin, nor is there a verb noctuare known. Adjectives in -bundus belong exclusively to archaic or vulgar Latin. Gellius (N. A. II. 15) indicates correctly the force of the ending. — febricula, slight attack of fever. — sed quod scribis, etc., *but as for your writing that
'a bit of fire in the morning is a sign of old age,' it is a surer sign when one's memory is weak and tottering*. Cicero was about to visit Atticus, and had asked him to have a little fire for him in the morning. This request Atticus makes the basis of a sally at his expense, upon which Cicero retorts; for, as he goes on to say, he had written to Atticus that he should spend with him the third day before the Kalends, but Atticus had forgotten the day, and thought Cicero was to be with him on the fifth day before the Kalends. — memoriola: the large number of diminutives for so short a letter, litterularum, igniculum, and memoriola, is worthy of note.

All three of these words are rare,
and have not only a diminutive force but express other shades of meaning, e.g. memoriola expresses commiseration and sympathy. — dederam: the object is IIII Kal., i.e. quartum Kal. — quo die ve-nissem: sc. Romam. — hoc igitur habebis, take that then; a phrase from the arena, of one who has received a telling thrust or blow. hoc refers to γεροντικώτερον . . . vacillare. On habebis, cf. habes, Ep. XC. 7 n. — garrimus: a colloquial word properly applied to the chattering of children, as in 1. — quicquid in buccam (venerit): the vulgar expression for quicquid in mentem venerit. The same phrase is found in Att. I. 12. 4; 7. 10; 14. 7. 2. In quae habet, etiamsi nihil subest, collocutione ipsa suavitatem.

LXX. (Fam. 15. 17.)

M. CICERO C. CASSIO S.

Praeposteros habes tabellarios, etsi me quidem non ¹ offendunt. Sed tamen, cum a me discedunt, flagitant litteras; cum ad me veniunt, nullas adferunt. Atque id ipsum facerent commodius, si mihi aliquid spatii ad scribendum darent, sed petasati veniunt, comites ad portam exspectare dicunt. Ergo ignoscas; alteras habebis has brevis, sed exspecta πάντα περί πάντων. Etsi quid ego me tibi purgo, cum tui ad me inanes veniant, ad te cum epistulis revertantur? Nos hic, ut ² tamen ad te scribam aliquid, P. Sullam patrem mortuum habebamus: alii a latronibus, alii cruditate dicebant. Populus non curabat, combustum enim esse all these cases the letters, as is this one, are of a very colloquial character. The vulgar bucca has been preserved in the Romance languages (Fr. bouche, Ital. bocca), while its literary equivalent os has been lost, just as in cheval and cavallo, caballus has survived at the expense of equus. Cf. testificor, Ep. L. 1 n., and civitatem, Ep. LII. 3 n. — est profecto quiddam λέσχη, mere talk is really worth something.

LXX. Rome, about the close of Dec., 46 B.C. On Cassius, cf. Ep. LXXXVI. introd. note.

1. praeposteros, unreasonable.

—petasati: on journeys, especially in hot countries, the Romans wore broad-brimmed hats (petasi or causiae). Thus of the Sycophanta in the Trinummus, who is supposed to have just arrived from Seleucia, Charmides says (Trin. 851): ποῦ hic quidem fungino generest: capite se totum tegit. Harpax, who is to impersonate a messenger from abroad, is provided with a chlamys, a machaera, and a petusus (Pseud. 735). Perhaps, however, Cicero means that Cassius's messengers are always on the move, like Mercury, who wore the petusus. — ignoscas: cf. Intr. 84 b. — alteras, etc., this second letter from me will be short.

2. P. Sullam patrem: P. Cornelius Sulla, in whose defense against the charge of having taken part in the Catilinarian conspiracy Cicero delivered the oration pro Sulla in 62 B.C. — habebamus: cf. sic habeto, Ep. XXVI. 1 n. — populus, etc.: i.e. 'the peoconstabat. Hoc tu pro tua sapientia ferēs aequo animo; quamquam πρόσωπον πόλεως amisimus. Caesarem putabant moleste laturum, verentem ne hasta refrixisset; Mindius macellarius et Attius pigmentarius valde gaudebant se adversarium perdidisse. De Hispania novi nihil, sed expectatio valde magna; rumores tristiores, sed ἀδέσποτοι. Pansa noster paludatus a. d. III K. Ian. profectus est, ut quis intellegere posset, id quod tu nuper dubitare coepisti, τὸ καλὸν δι' αὐτὸ αἰρετὸν esse; nam quod multos miseriis levavit et quod se in his malis hominem praebuit, mirabilis eum virorum bonorum benevolentia prose-

ple do not care (to know how he died), as long as they know he is dead.' There is probably, as Reid suggests, a double meaning in combustum. Comburere is used literally of burning a man's body upon a funeral pyre, as in Att. 14. 10. 1, and figuratively of 'roasting' a man in the courts, as our slang phrase has it. Cf. Q. fr. 1. 2. 6 deinde rogas Fabium ut et patrem et filium vivos comburat, si possit; si minus, ad te mittat uti iudicio comburantur. — hoc tu, etc.: Cassius replied (Fam. 15. 19. 3) cuius (i.e. Sullae) ego mortem forti merces animo tuli. — πρόσωπον πόλεως, a familiar face in the city. — ne hasta refrixisset: a hasta stuck in the ground was the sign of an auction. Sulla gained possession at such sales of many estates confiscated by Caesar; cf. Fam. 15. 19. 3 Sulla . . . omnia bona coëmit. This fact caused his unpopularity. Cicero speaks of his death in the same way in writing to Dolabella (Fam. 9. 10. 3): ego ceteroqu岸 animo aequo fero; unum vereor ne hasta Caesaris refrixerit. Upon refrixisset, cf.

Intr. 99. — Mindius . . . perdidisse: the butcher Mindius and the perfumer Attius have now no competitor at auction sales.

3. de Hispania: upon de, cf. Intr. 91. Caesar went to Spain (cf. Bell. Hisp. 2) in Nov., 46 B.C., and the battle of Munda took place Mar. 17, 45, i.e. only a few months after this letter was written. The difficulties in which Caesar was involved, and the imminence of the decisive contest, were doubtless known at Rome. — Pansa: C. Vibius Pansa, the colleague of Hirtius in the consulship in 43. He had set out to join Caesar in Spain; cf. Schmidt, Briefw. 272. — paludatus: of a soldier, as togatus is used of a civilian. The paludamentum was the cloak of a commander, the sagum the cloak of a common soldier. — nuper: Cassius had lately become an Epicurean; cf. Fam. 15. 16. 1. — τὸ καλὸν δι' αὐτὸ αἰρετὸν: a Stoic doctrine which the Epicureans rejected. Cassius's analysis of Pansa's conduct is: Pansa, qui ἠδονῆς sequitur, virtutem retinet, Fam. 15. 19. 3.

cuta est. Tu quod adhuc Brundisi moratus es, valde 4
 probo et gaudeo, et mercule puto te sapienter factu-rum, si ἀκενόσπουδος fueris; nobis quidem, qui te amamus erit gratum. Et, amabo te, cum dabis posthac aliquid domum litterarum, mei memineris. Ego numquam quemquam ad te, cum sciam, sine meis litteris ire patiar. Vale.

LXXI. (Fam. 13. 72.)

M. CICERO P. SERVILIO COLLEGAE S.

Caerelliae, necessariae meae, rem nomina possessiones Asiaticas commendavi tibi praesens in hortis tuis quam potui diligentissime, tuque mihi pro tua consue-tudine proque tuis in me perpetuis maximisque officiis omnia te facturum liberalissime recepisti. Meminisse

4. si ἀκενόσπουδος fueris: the Epicureans discouraged an active participation in politics, and Cicero, perhaps ironically, approves of the consistency with which Cassius puts into practice his new faith by remaining at Brundisium, remote from dangers and annoyances, while Pansa had unwisely stayed in Rome, the center of political action, and given himself annoyance by relieving the distress of the unfortunate Pompeians.

LXXI. Rome (?), 46 B.C. P. Servilius Vatia Isauricus (the younger man of that name), to whom Cicero addressed Fam. 13. 66-72, was in 46 B.C. proconsul of Asia. He had been praetor in 54 B.C., and consul in 48, and was an active and influential member of the party of the Optimates. He apparently belonged to the extreme wing of that party, as he is classed by Cicero with Bibulus, Curio, and Favonius (Ep. XVI. 2). He was Cicero's colleague in the college of augurs.

1. Caerelliae: a woman, probably about Cicero's own age, of whom we hear little up to the last few years of Cicero's life, when an intimate friendship sprung up between them. In Att. 13. 21. 5 Cicero calls the attention of Atticus to the fact that Caerellia succeeded in getting a copy of the de Finibus from the copyists of Atticus before the book was published. She attempted as a common friend to bring about a reconciliation between Cicero and Publilia (cf. Att. 14. 19. 4; 15. 1. 4). Of Cicero's letters to her only this fragment is preserved: haec (sc. Caesaris tempora) aut animo Catonis ferenda sunt aut Ciceronis stomacho (Quint. 6. 3. 112). — nomina, debis.

te id spero; scio enim solere. Sed tamen Caerelliae procuratores scripserunt te propter magnitudinem provinciae multitudinemque negotiorum etiam atque etiam ² esse commonefaciendum. Peto igitur ut memineris te omnia quae tua fides pateretur mihi cumulate recepisse. Equidem existimo habere te magnam facultatem — sed hoc tui est consili et iudici — ex eo s. c. quod in heredes C. Vennoni factum est, Caerelliae commodandi. Id senatus consultum tu interpretabere pro tua sapientia; scio enim eius ordinis auctoritatem semper apud te magni fuisse. Quod reliquum est, sic velim existimes, quibuscumque rebus Caerelliae benigne feceris, mihi te gratissimum esse facturum.

LXXII. (Att. 12. 16.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

Te tuis negotiis relictis nolo ad me venire. Ego potius accedam, si diutius impediere; etsi ne discessissem quidem e conspectu tuo, nisi me plane nihil ulla res adiuveret. Quod si esset aliquod levamen, id esset in te uno, et cum primum ab aliquo poterit esse, a te erit. Nunc tamen ipsum sine te esse non possum.

2. recepisse: cf. Ep. VIII. 2 n. — C. Vennoni: probably the man mentioned in Ep. XXXV. 25.

LXXII. Astura, Mar. 10, 45 B.C. The death of his only daughter, Tullia, in the latter part of Feb., 45, robbed Cicero of the one person to whom he was deeply attached, and left him inconsolable. He betook himself at once to a house belonging to Atticus, near Rome, and then in a short time to his solitary villa upon the island of Astura, where he remained alone, writing daily letters to Atticus (Att. 12. 9-44), and receiving letters of condolence from Sulpicius, Dolabella, and others. Cf. also Intr. 51, 53.

nunc ipsum, at this very moment. With this meaning, 'precisely' or 'just,' ipsum is now and then found with adverbs of time; cf. nunc ipsum non dubitabo rem tantam abicere, Att. 7. 3. 2; ne tum ipsum accideret, etc., de Or. 1.

Sed nec tuae domi probabatur nec meae poteram, nec, si propius essem uspiam, tecum tamen essem; idem enim te impediret quo minus tecum esses quod nunc etiam impedit. Mihi adhuc nihil prius fuit hac solitudine, quam vereor ne Philippus tollat; heri enim vesperi venerat. Me scriptio et litterae non leniunt, sed obturbant.

LXXIII. (Fam. 9. 11.)

CICERO DOLABELLAE S.

Vel meo ipsius interitu mallet litteras meas desiderares quam eo casu quo sum gravissime adflictus; quem ferrem certe moderatius, si te haberem; nam et oratio tua prudens et amor erga me singularis multum levaret. Sed quoniam brevi tempore, ut opinio nostra est, te sum visurus, ita me adfectum offendes ut multum a te possim iuvari, non quo ita sim fractus ut aut hominem me esse oblitus sim aut fortunae succumbendum

123. — tuae domi: where he remained for a short time after Tullia's death. — poteram: sc. esse. — Philippus: L. Marcius Philippus, the stepfather of Augustus, had a villa in the neighborhood; cf. Att. 12. 18. 1. — scriptio et litterae: not letter-writing, but literary work. Cf. Intr. 51. — obturbant: a colloquial substitute for turbare; cf. Intr. 78. In his letters only, according to Stinner, Cicero admits the following compounds of ob: obduro, oblanguesco, obtendo, and occalesco.

LXXIII. The villa of Atticus, at Ficulea, soon after April 20, 45 B.C. Upon Dolabella, cf. Intr. 56. This letter is written in reply to a letter of condolence which Dolabella had sent to Cicero on hearing of Tullia's death. Dolabella was at this time in Spain, acting as Caesar's legate.

1. opinio nostra: on the expectation of a decisive battle in Spain, cf. de Hispania, Ep. LXX. 3 n. — ut . . . iuvari: Cicero does not reveal, either in this letter or in his letters to Atticus, the bitterness which we should expect him to feel on account of the heartless and mercenary treatment which Tullia had suffered at Dolabella's hands; cf. Ep. LVII n. — fortunae . . . putem: in a letter of sympathy to Titius (Fam. 5. 16. 2) Cicero writes: est autem consolatio per-vulgata quidem illa maxime, quam semper in ore atque in animo habere debemus, homines nos ut esse meminerimus ea lege natos ut om putem, sed tamen hilaritas illa nostra et suavitas quae te praeter ceteros delectabat erepta mihi omnis est ; firmitatem tamen et constantiam, si modo fuit aliquando in nobis, eandem cognosces quam reliquisti. Quod scribis proelia te mea causa sustinere, non tam id laboro ut, si qui mihi obtrectent, a te refutentur, quam intellegi cupio, quod certe intellegitur, me a te amari. Quod ut facias te etiam atque etiam rogo ignoscasque brevitati litterarum mearum; nam et celeriter una futuros nos arbitror et nondum satis sum confirmatus ad scribendum.

LXXIV. (Att. 12. 32.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

1 Haec ad te mea manu. Vide, quaeso, quid agendum sit. Publilia ad me scripsit matrem suam — ut cum Publilio loquerer — ad me cum illo venturam et se una, si ego paterer. Orat multis et supplicibus verbis ut liceat et ut sibi rescribam. Res quam molesta sit vides. Rescripsi mihi etiam gravius esse quam tum nibus telis fortunae proposita sit vita nostra. Cf. also Fam. 5. 17. 3 te ut hortarer rogaremque ut et hominem te et virum esse meminisses, id est, ut et communem incertumque casum, quem neque vitare quisquam nostrum nec praestare ullo pacto potest, sapienter ferres et dolori fortiter ac fortunae resisteres. — hilaritas illa nostra: the gaiety which Cicero showed in his letters to Fadius Gallus (Ep. IV.), to Trebatius (Ep. XXIV.–XXVI., XXVIII.), or to Paetus (Ep. LXI.–LXIV., LXVII.). Cf. also Att. 12. 40. 3 hilaritatem illam qua hanc tristitiam temporum condiebamus in perpetuum amisi.

2. proelia te sustinere: Quintus, Cicero's nephew, who was with Caesar in Spain, was speaking ill of his uncle to Caesar.

LXXIV. Astura, Mar. 28, 45 B.C.

1. mea manu: cf. Intr. 64. — Publilia: cf. Intr. 52. — Publilio: the brother of Publilia. — tum: Publilia seems to have felt some jealousy of the devotion which Cicero showed for his daughter, and the failure on Publilia's part to show a proper feeling at Tullia's death led him to separate from her.

cum illi dixissem me solum esse velle; qua re nolle me hoc tempore eam ad me venire. Putabam, si nihil rescripsissem, illam cum matre venturam, nunc non puto; apparebat enim illas litteras non illius esse. Illud autem quod fore video ipsum volo vitare, ne illae ad me veniant. Et una est vitatio, ut alio: nollem, sed necesse est. Te hoc nunc rogo ut explores ad quam diem hic ita possim esse ut ne opprimar. Ages, ut scribis, temperate. Ciceroni velim hoc proponas, ita² tamen, si tibi non iniquum videbitur, ut sumptus huius peregrinationis, quibus, si Romae esset domumque conduceret, quod facere cogitabat, facile contentus futurus erat, accomodet ad mercedes Argileti et Aventini et, cum ei proposueris, ipse velim reliqua moderere, quemadmodum ex iis mercedibus suppeditemus ei quod opus sit. Praestabo nec Bibulum nec Acidinum nec Messallam, quos Athenis futuros audio, maiores sumptus

— illas litteras non esse illius: sc. but dictated by her mother. — alio: sc. discedam. — nollem, I am sorry. — ut scribis: i.e. quemadmodum scribere soles (Boot).

2. ita . . . si, only in case that. Words which denote degree obtain often from the context the idea of limitation. Cf. Ep. XXXII. 2 a te rogabo, . . . ita mihi des, si tibi ut id libenter facias ante persuaseris; in Cat. 3. 16 tam diu ('only so long'); pro Flac. 34 dixit tantum: nihil ostendit, nihil protulit. — peregrinationis: young Cicero had just gone to Athens to prosecute his studies there, and as Cicero himself would be absent from Rome, he requested Atticus to pay the young man's expenses from the rental of certain houses. — quibus: referring forward to mercedes. — si . . . conduceret, quod . . . cogitabat: only a few weeks before this time, Cicero's son, growing restive under the paternal roof, perhaps because of the treatment which his mother had received, and because of his father's marriage to Publilia, had laid before his father two alternatives, either that he should be allowed to join Caesar in Spain, or that he should have a house of his own at Rome; (filium) velle Hispaniam, requirere liberalitatem, Att. 12. 7. 1. — Argileti: the Argiletum entered the Forum from the north, passing between the Curia and the Basilica Aemilia. Cicero evidently had houses (insulae) which he rented in the Argiletum and on the Aventine. — Bibulum, Acidinum, Messallam: rich young aristocrats, who were likewise to pursue their facturos quam quod ex iis mercedibus recipietur. Itaque velim videas, primum, conductores qui sint et quanti, deinde, ut sint qui ad diem solvant, et quid viatici, quid instrumenti satis sit. Iumento certe Athenis nihil opus erit; quibus autem in via utatur, domi sunt plura quam opus erit, quod etiam tu animadvertis.

LXXV. (Fam. 4. 5.)

SERVIVS CICERONI S.

1 Postea quam mihi renuntiatum est de obitu Tulliae filiae tuae, sane quam pro eo ac debui graviter molestaeque tuli, communemque eam calamitatem existimavi, studies in Athens. — quanti: gen. of price. — ut sint qui . . . solvant: the tenants failed to pay as promptly as Cicero wished; cf. Att. 15. 17. 1 quod scribis tibi de esse H S C, quae Ciceroni curatae sint, velim ab Erotae quaeras ubi sit mercus iusularum. — iumento: i.e. equis.

LXXV. Athens, March, 45 B.C. Servius Sulpicius Rufus, who was of about the same age as Cicero, was for a time his rival in oratory, but, soon recognizing his friend's matchless oratorical powers, he turned his attention to the study of jurisprudence, and was for many generations a leading authority in that subject. His opinions are frequently quoted in the Digest. In politics he was, like Cicero, a conservative and a lover of peace, and, as such, strove during his consulship in 51 to avert the impending struggle between Caesar and Pompey. When the other Pompeians left Rome at the outbreak of the Civil War, Sulpicius was prevented by illness from accompanying them, and, like Cicero, he hesitated long whether to maintain a neutral position or to join them. A lively correspondence upon this point passed between the two in 49 (cf. Fam. 4. 1, 2). In 46 he was made governor of Achaia by Caesar (cf. Ep. LXV. 10). After the death of Caesar, in the struggle between Antony and D. Brutus, his sympathies were again upon the side of peace and compromise, and he was sent by the senate, in 43 B.C., upon a peace embassy to Antony, who was laying siege to Mutina. While on his way thither he died. Cicero's ninth Philippic is a eulogy on him. This epistle, like the letters from Caesar, Luceius, and Dolabella (Intr. 53), was called forth by the death of Tullia, and is perhaps the most widely known of all the letters in the correspondence of Cicero.

1. sane quam: cf. Ep. XXXI. 2 n. — (pro eo) ac: for ut; cf. perinde ut, Ep. LXVII. 1 n. — graviter molestaeque: cf. oro obscuro, qui, si istic adfuissem, neque tibi defuissem coramque meum dolorem tibi declarassem. Etsi genus hoc consolationis miserum atque acerbum est, propterea quia, per quos ea confieri debet propinquos ac familiares, ipsi pari molestia adficiuntur neque sine lacrimis multis id conari possunt, uti magis ipsi videantur aliorum consolatione indigere quam aliis posse suum officium præstare, tamen, quae in praesentia in mentem mihi venerunt decrevi brevi ad te perscribere, non quo ea te fugere existimem, sed quod forsitan dolore impeditus minus ea perspicias. Quid est quod tanto opere te commoveat tuus dolor intestinus? Cogita quemadmodum adhuc fortuna nobiscum egerit: ea nobis erepta esse quae hominibus non minus quam liberi cara esse debent, patriam, honestatem, dignitatem honores omnis. Hoc uno incommodo addito, quid ad dolorem adiungi potuit? Aut qui non in illis rebus exercitatus animus callere iam debet atque omnia minoris existimare? An illius vicem, credo, doles? Quo-

Ep. L. 1 n. — istic adfuissem: pleonastic for adfuissem. — istic: i.e. in Italy. Servius was in Athens. — miserum atque acerbum: see graviter molestique, above. — confieri: colloquial from two points of view: (1) it is used for the simple verb feri. Lorenz, Introd. to Pseud. n. 36, says: 'In general compounds with con are popular throughout the old comic poetry, and must have been extremely common in the Roman vulgar language of that day. The loss of force which the preposition suffers in almost every case bears witness to this fact'; (2) facio, when compounded with a preposition, has fici for its passive form. Such forms as confieri and defieri for confici and defici are found only in colloquial and archaic Latin. Cf., e.g., Plaut. Trin. 408; M. G. 1261; and Thielmann, De sermonis proprietatibus in primis Ciceronis libris, 52. — propinquos ac familiares: cf. graviter molestique, above. The words quoted are thrown in loosely, as an appositive to quos. — perspicias: the mood is determined by forsitan. 2. qui: cf. Intr. 81. — minoris existimare: existimare (for aestimare) with the genitive is colloquial. Cf. Plaut. Capt. 682 dum ne ob malefacta peream, parvi existimo; Suet. Aug. 40 magni existimans. Cf. also Intr. 78.

tiens in eam cogitationem necesse est et tu veneris (et nos saepe incidimus,) hisce temporibus non pessime cum iis esse actum quibus sine dolore licitum est mortem cum vita commutare! Quid autem fuit quod illam hoc tempore ad vivendum magno opere invitare posset? Quae res? Quae spes? Quod animi solacium? Vt cum aliquo adolescente primario coniuncta aetatem gereret? Licitum est tibi, credo, pro tua dignitate ex hac iuventute generum diligere, cuius fidei liberos tuos te tuto committere putares! An ut ea liberos ex sese pareret, quos cum florentis videret laetaretur, qui fem a parente traditam per se tenere possent, honores ordinatim petituri essent, in re publica, in amicorum nego-

3. tu veneris . . . nos incidimus: there is an implied compliment in the application of veneris to Cicero and incidimus to himself. — cum iis esse actum: cf. nobiscum egerit, 2. — licitum est: licitum est and placitum est, for licuit and placuit, belong to the sermo cotidianus. Cf. Fam. 8. 4. 4; Ep. XI. 5; and see Krebs, Antibarbarus, II. 22. These passive forms are frequent in comedy. Cf. Plaut. Men. 589; Ter. And. 443, and Donatus, note. See also placitum est, Ep. LXXXVI. 2 n. — quae res? quae spes? a case of assonance. — adulescente: Tullia's last husband, Dolabella, must have been about 18 years old at the time of their marriage; cf. Appian, B. C. 2. 129. — primario: adjectives in -arius are very rare in Cicero, but common in colloquial Latin. Cf. manifestarius, Plaut. Aul. 469; praesentarius, Trin. 1081; quasillarius, Petron. 132, etc. Cf. also Lorenz to Plaut. Pseud. 952. In late Latin the ending is especially common, e.g. bar-

baricarius, scandularius, muliercularius, etc. — ut . . . gereret: ironical. Tullia's first husband, Piso, died prematurely, and from Crassipes and Dolabella she was divorced after an unhappy wedded life (cf. Intr. 53). — licitum est: cf. licitum est, above. Schmalz thinks that licitum est . . . putares may be an adaptation of Ter. Hec. 212: qui illum decreverunt dignum, suos quos liberos committerent. — ex hac iuventute: the degenerate youth of to-day, as they seemed to be to the old man of 60, although Sulpicius has in mind Tullia's unhappy married life in particular. — honores ordinatim: i.e. the offices of quaestor, aedile, praetor, and consul. — ordinatim: for classical ordine. Adverbs in -im are found frequently in early and late Latin, but in the Ciceronian period, with a few exceptions, their use is confined to colloquial Latin. Neue, Formenlehre, II. 662, says: 'Adverbs in -im are especially common in archaic Latin, and in late writers who tiis libertate sua usuri? Quid horum fuit quod non prius quam datum est, ademptum sit? 'At vero malum est liberos amittere.' Malum: nisi hoc peius sit, haec sufferre et perpeti. Quae res mihi non mediocrem consolationem attulit, volo tibi commemorare, si forte eadem res tibi dolorem minuere possit. Ex Asia rediens cum ab Aegina Megaram versus navigarem, coepi regiones circumcirca prospicere. Post me erat Aegina, ante me Megara, dextra Piraeus, sinistra Corinthus, affected an archaic style'; and of ecclesiastical Latin, Rönisch writes (It. u. Vulg. 473): 'In the formation of adverbs the substitution of the endings -im and -iter for -e is especially common.' In Cicero's letters to Atticus we find affatim, summatim, and syllabatim. No one of these forms occurs, however, in the orations. — malum . . . perpeti: 'it is a misfortune to lose one's children, unless it may be regarded as so much greater a misfortune to witness the ruin of one's country and the loss of one's liberty that all other afflictions become insignificant.'

4. volo tibi commemorare: used politely for tibi commemorabo. — si forte: the use of these particles with the subjunctive is Plautine (Schmalz). — ex Asia: i.e. from Samos, whither he had gone after the battle of Pharsalus. — ab Aegina: ab and ex to denote motion from, and in to denote position in and motion towards, with names of towns and islands are archaic. Cf. ex Epheso, Plaut. Bacch. 236; in Epheso, M. G. 778; in Ephesum, Bacch. 171. Spengel (to Ter. And. 70). — circumcirca: to be joined with regiones. The use of an adverb for an attributive adj. is of colloquial origin. It becomes especially common in Livy; cf., e.g., Liv. 3. 26. 3 nulla magnopere clade accepta; 6. 39. 6 nullo publice emolumento. In the Letters we find (Fam. 12. 14. 3) ullae privatim iniuriae; (Att. 11. 12. 1) profectionis meae tum; (Ep. XCI. 2) tuus deinde discessus. Cf. Intr. 85 b; Brenous, Les Hellenismes dans la Syn. Lat. pp. 394 ff.; Nägelsbach, Stil. pp. 229 f. Such compounds as circumcirca, praeterpropter, and exadversum are colloquial. — post me erat . . . esse natum: Schmalz (Z. f. Gymn. 1881, p. 90) calls attention to an interesting imitation of this passage in one of St. Ambrose's letters (Ep. 39. 3): nempe de Bononiensi veniens urbe, a tergo Claternam, ipsam Bononiam, Mutinam, Rhegium derelinquebas, in dextera erat Brixillum, etc. Tot igitur semirutarum urbium cadavera terrarumque sub eodem conspectu exposita funera non te admonent, etc. Byron's stanzas in Childe Harold (IV. 44) are also inspired by it. — Aegina: its decline probably dated from its submission to Athens, in 457 or 456 B.C. — Megara: destroyed in 307 B.C. by Demetrius Poliiorcetes. — Piraeus: taken by Sulla in 86 B.C. — Corinthus: utterly destroyed by Mummius in 146 B.C. Cf. Cic. de Leg. Agr. 2. 87 Corinthi vesti-

quae oppida quodam tempore florentissima fuerunt, nunc prostrata et diruta ante oculos iacent. Coepi egomet mecum sic cogitare: 'Hem! nos homunculi indignamur, si quis nostrum interiit aut occisus est, quorum vita brevior esse debet, cum uno loco tot oppidum cadavera proiecta iacent? Visne tu te, Servi, cohibere et meminisse hominem te esse natum?' Crede mihi, cogitatione eā non mediocriter sum confirmatus. Hoc, idem si tibi videtur, fac ante oculos tibi proponas. Modo uno tempore tot viri clarissimi interierunt; de imperio p. R. tanta deminutio facta est, omnes provinciae conquassatae sunt; in unius mulierculae animulā si iactura facta est, tanto opere commoveris? Quāe si hoc tempore non diem suum obisset, paucis post annis tamen ei moriendum fuit, quoniam 5 homo nata fuerat. Etiam tu ab hisce rebus animum gium vix relictum est. — quodam tempore: for quondam; cf. Intr. 101. — prostrata et diruta: cf. graviter molesteque, I. — mecum . . . cogitare: a pleonasm common in the older poets; cf., e.g., Ter. Ad. 30, 500; Eun. 629; Heaut. 385. — hem: cf. Intr. 92. — homunculi: the diminutive expresses contempt. — nos homunculi . . . iacent: Böckel quotes from Rutilius Namatianus, I. 413:

*Non indignemur mortalia corpora solvi:
Cernimus exemplis oppida posse mori.*

— oppidum: the shorter form of the genitive plural of the second declension is especially common in early Latin. — visne te cohibere: imperative; see Intr. 84 b, and cf. Petron. 111 vis tu reviviscere? vis discusso muliebri errore, quam diu licuerit, lucis commodis frui? — si tibi videtur: a colloquial expression, while si videtur is the more formal and elegant phrase. The former is therefore the common expression in the Letters. Cicero himself uses si videtur in the Letters but once, while si tibi videtur occurs 18 times or more. Cf. Att. 8. 6. 2, etc. — ante oculos tibi: cf. michi ante oculos, Ep. XIII. 3 n. — tot viri clarissimi: cf. Ep. LXII. 2 nn. — deminutio: the struggle between Caesar and Pompey had lessened the majesty of Rome, and weakened the sense of allegiance on the part of peoples dependent on her. — mulierculae, animula: the diminutives convey an idea of pity and depreciation. — mulierculae, a delicate woman. — hoc tempore: for nunc; cf. quodam tempore, above.

ac cogitationem tuam avoca atque ea potius reminiscere quae digna tuā personā sunt: illam quamdiu ei opus fuerit vixisse, una cum re publica fuisse, te patrem suum praetorem consulem augurem vidisse, adolescentibus primariis nuptam fuisse, omnibus bonis prope perfunctam esse; cum res publica occideret, vita excessisse. Quid est quod tu aut illa cum fortuna hoc nomine queri possitis? Denique noli te oblivisci Ciceronem esse et eum qui aliis consueris praecipere et dare consilium, neque imitari malos medicos qui in alienis morbis profitentur tenere se medicinae scientiam, ipsi se curare non possunt, sed potius, quae aliis tute praecipere soles, ea tute tibi subice atque apud animum propone. Nullus dolor est quem non longin-⁶ quitas temporis minuat ac molliat. Hoc te expectare tempus tibi turpe est ac non ei rei sapientiā tuā te occurrere. Quod si qui etiam inferis sensus est, qui illius in te amor fuit pietasque in omnis suos, hoc certe illa te facere non vult. Da hoc illi mortuae, da ceteris amicis ac familiaribus qui tuo dolore maerent, da patriae, ut, si qua in re opus sit, opera et consilio tuo uti possit. Denique, quoniam in eam fortunam devenimus ut etiam huic rei nobis serviendum sit, noli

5. persona: cf. persona, Ep. LXV. 10 n.—adulescentibus primariis: cf. adulescente primario, 3.—praecipere et dare consilium: cf. graviter molesteque, 1.—neque: the negative idea of the preceding noli has turned the conjunction into a negative; cf. Hor. Od. 2. 12. 2.—malos medicos, tute tibi: cf. Intr. 93. Servius uses the strengthened forms tute and ego-^{met}, 4.

6. minuat ac molliat, tem-

pus tibi turpe: alliterative.—hoc . . . est: the use of tibi and te in the same clause is unclassical. In his use of the same phrase, Fam. 4. 6. 1, Cicero omits the dative.—illi mortuae: a fair instance of the use of the demonstrative as equivalent to the Greek article. Cf. Tusc. Disp. 5. 78 quae est victrix, ea laeta prosequentibus suis una cum viro in rogam imponitur, illa victa maesta discedit (Watson).—denique, etc.: added committere ut quisquam te putet non tam filiam quam rei publicae tempora et aliorum victoriam lugere. Plura me ad te de hac re scribere pudet ne videar prudentiae tuae diffidere. Quare, si hoc unum proposuero, finem faciam scribendi: vidimus aliquotiens secundam pulcherrime te ferre fortunam magnamque ex ea re te laudem apisci; fac aliquando intellegamus adversam quoque te aequae ferre posse neque id maius quam debeat tibi onus videri, ne ex omnibus virtutibus haec una tibi videatur deesse. Quod ad me attinet, cum te tranquilliores animo esse cognoro, de iis rebus quae hic geruntur, quemadmodumque se provincia habeat, certiores faciam. Vale.

LXXVI. (Fam. 4. 6.)

M. CICERO S. D. SER. SVLPICIO.

Ego vero, Servi, vellem, ut scribis, in meo gravissimo casu adfuisses; quantum enim praesens me adjuvare potueris et consolando et prope aequae dolendo facile ex eo intellego quod litteris lectis aliquantum adquievi;

as an afterthought. — finem faciam: alliterative. Cf. ferre fortunam, below. — apisci: Cicero uses apisci only twice, Att. 8. 14. 3 and de Leg. 1. 52. Cf., however, Plaut. Trin. 367; Ter. Heaut. 693; Phorm. 406. — quod . . . attinet: cf. Intr. 91. — provincia: i.e. Achaia.

While the letter reveals the real sorrow of Sulpicius at Cicero's loss, he seeks to comfort his friend, not so much by assuring him of his sympathy, as by setting before him certain philosophical considerations. The training of Sulpicius as a lawyer and a jurist goes far to explain the peculiarities in his style and Latinity. The epistle will illustrate how closely allied legal, archaic, and colloquial Latin are; in fact, the expressions which have been noted as common in colloquial speech, are really legal archaisms as used by Sulpicius.

LXXVI. From the villa of Atticus, at Ficulea, Apr., 45 B.C. Cicero's reply to Ep. LXXXV.

1. ego vero: cf. Ep. XXX. 1 n. — adfuisses: without hic; cf. Ep. LXXXV. 1 n. — Servius tuus:

nam et ea scripsisti quae levare luctum possent, et in me consolando non mediocrem ipse animi dolorem adhibuisti. Servius tamen tuus omnibus officiis, quae illi temporis tribui potuerunt, declaravit et quanti ipse me faceret et quam suum talem erga me animum tibi gratum putaret fore. Cuius officia iucundiora scilicet saepe mihi fuerunt, numquam tamen gratiora. Me autem non oratio tua solum et societas paene aegritudinis, sed etiam auctoritas consolatur; turpe enim esse existimo me non ita ferre casum meum ut tu, tali sapientia praeditus, ferendum putas. Sed opprimor interdum et vix resisto dolori, quod ea me solacia deficiunt quae ceteris, quorum mihi exempla propono, simili in fortuna non defuerunt. Nam et Q. Maximus, qui filium consularem, clarum virum et magnis rebus gestis, amisit, et L. Paullus, qui duo septem diebus, et vester Galus, et M. Cato, qui summo ingenio, summa virtute filium perdidit, iis temporibus fuerunt ut eorum luctum ipsorum dignitas consolaretur ea quam ex re publica consequantur. Mihi autem amissis ornamentis iis quae ipse commemoras quaeque eram maxi-

the son of Sulpicius. — iucundiora, more productive of pleasure. — gratiora, more worthy of gratitude; cf. Att. 3. 24. 2 ista veritas, etiam si iucunda non est, mihi tamen grata est. — societas: cf. Servius's expressor of personal sorrow in Ep. LXXV. 1. — mihi exempla propono: cf. fac., etc., Ep. LXXV. 4 n. — Q. Maximus: Q. Fabius Maximus, who won the epithet of Cunctator in the war with Hannibal. — magnis rebus gestis: parallel with clarum. — L. Paullus: L. Aemilius Paullus, the conqueror of Perseus in 168 B.C. — vester Galus: C. Sulpicius

Galus conquered the Ligurians in 166 B.C. He belonged to the Sulpician gens, hence vester. — M. Cato: M. Porcius Cato, the censor. On these instances, cf. Tusc. Disp. 3. 70 quid, qui non putant lugendum viris? qualis fuit Q. Maximus efferens filium consularem, qualis L. Paullus duobus paucis diebus amissis filiis, qualis M. Cato praetore designato mortuo filio, quales reliqui, quos in Consolatione collegimus. Quid hos aliud placavit nisi quod luctum et maerorem esse non putabant viri?

2. quae ipse commemoras: cf. Ep. LXXXV. 5. — unum illud

mis laboribus adeptus, unum manebat illud solacium, quod ereptum est. Non amicorum negotiis, non rei publicae procuratione impediabantur cogitationes meae, nihil in foro agere libebat, adspicere curiam non poteram, existimabam, id quod erat, omnis me et industriae meae fructus et fortunae perdidisse. Sed cum cogitarem haec mihi tecum et cum quibusdam esse communia, et cum frangerem iam ipse me cogereque illa ferre toleranter, habebam quo confugerem, ubi conquiescerem, cuius in sermone et suavitate omnis curas doloresque deponerem. Nunc autem hoc tam gravi vulnere etiam illa quae consanuisse videbantur recrudescunt; non enim, ut tum me a re publica maestum domus excipiebat quae levaret, sic nunc domo maerens ad rem publicam confugere possum ut in eius bonis adquiescam. Itaque et domo absum et foro, quod nec eum dolorem, quem de re publica capio, domus iam consolari potest nec domesticum res publica. Quo magis te exspecto teque videre quam primum cupio: maius mihi solacium adferre ratio nulla potest quam coniunctio consuetudinis sermonumque nostrorum; quamquam sperabam tuum adventum — sic enim audiebam — appropinquare. Ego autem cum multis de causis te exopto quam primum videre, tum etiam ut ante commentemur inter nos qua ratione nobis traducendum sit hoc tempus, quod est totum ad unius voluntatem accommodandum et prudentis et liberalis et, ut per-solacium: i.e. the companionship and sympathy of Tullia. — amicorum negotiis: as an advocate; cf. sublatis iudiciis, Ep. LXII. 1 n. — curiam: the ascendancy of Caesar had taken away the dignity and influence of the senate. Cf.

Ep. LXVII. 4. — consanuisse: found only here in Cicero.

3. sperabam: an epistolary tense; cf. Intr. 84 c. — ante: before Caesar's return from Spain, which took place in Sept., 45 B.C. — unius: i.e. Caesaris. — ami- spexisse videor, nec a me alieni et tibi amicissimi. Quod cum ita sit, magnae tamen est deliberationis quae ratio sit ineunda nobis non agendi aliquid, sed illius concessu et beneficio quiescendi. Vale.

LXXVII. (Fam. 5. 14.)

L. LVCCEIVS Q. F. S. D. M. TVLLIO M. F.

S. v. b. E. v. sicut soleo, paululo tamen etiam deteriorius quam soleo. Te requisivi saepius ut viderem; Romae quia postea non fuisti quam discesseram, miratus sum; quod item nunc miror. Non habeo certum quae te res hinc maxime retrahat. Si solitudine delectare, cum scribas et aliquid agas eorum quorum consuisti, gaudeo neque reprehendo tuum consilium. Nam nihil isto potest esse iucundius non modo miseris his temporibus et luctuosis, sed etiam tranquillis et optatis, praesertim vel animo defetigato tuo, qui nunc requiem quaerat ex magnis occupationibus, vel erudito, qui semper aliquid ex se promat quod alios delectet, cissimi: Caesar had shown his friendship for Servius by making him governor of Achaia. — vale: cf. Intr. 62.

LXXVII. Rome, May 9, 45 B.C. Luceius urges Cicero not to give himself up entirely to grief for the loss of his daughter. On Luceius, cf. Ep. XVIII. introd. note.

i. s. v. b. e. v.: i. e. si vales benest. Ego valeo, or si vales bene est. Valeo. Cf. Intr. 62. — habeo certum: for scio certum; cf. Ep. LII. 1. See also sic habeto, Ep. XXVI. 1 n. — quae res: a natural substitute for quid from the pen of a lawyer. Cf. quae res for quod, Fam. 12. 14. 2. — delectare:

in the second pers. sing. Cicero uses the ending -re in the pres. subj., imperf. ind., and fut. ind., elsewhere the ending -ris. Two exceptions may be noted to the last statement: (1) in his earlier writings -re is also found in the imperf. subj.; (2) in verbs having no active form -re is also used in the pres. ind. Other cases of the use of forms in -re, as delectare here, are archaic or colloquial. — quorum consuisti: the case of the relative is assimilated to that of its antecedent. Cf. Hor. Sat. 1. 6. 15 iudice quo nosti populo. — animus: on the personification of animus, cf. Ep. LII. 1 n.

2 ipsum laudibus inlustret. Sin autem, sicut hinc discesseras, lacrimis ac tristitiae te tradidisti, doleo quia doles et angere, non possum te non — si concedis, quod sentimus ut liberius dicamus — accusare. Quid enim? Tu solus aperta non videbis, qui propter acumen occultissima perspicis? Tu non intelleges te querelis cotidianis nihil proficere, non intelleges duplicari sollicitudines 3 quas elevare tua te prudentia postulat? Quod si non possimus aliquid proficere suadendo, gratia contendimus et rogando, si quid nostra causa vis, ut istis te molestiis laxes et ad convictum nostrum redeas atque ad consuetudinem vel nostram communem vel tuam solius ac propriam. Cupio non obtundere te, si non delectare nostro studio; cupio deterrere ne permanes in incepto. Nunc duae res istae contrariae me conturbant, ex quibus aut in altera mihi velim, si potes, obtemperes aut in altera non offendas. Vale.

2. sicut hinc discesseras: as you did when you left here. — hinc: i.e. from Rome after Tullia's death. — tristitiae te tradidisti: alliterative. — doleo quia: for doleo quod. Cf. Brix on Plaut. Trin. 290, 'After verbs of emotion (e.g. doleo, gaudeo, suscenseo, paveo, piget, etc.), where later writers employ quod, Plautus uses quia, in conformity with colloquial usage.' See also Reisig-Schmalz, Lat. Syn. note 431 g. — angere: cf. delectare, 1. — non possum: in a writer whose style is so condensed and careless as is that of Luceius (cf. quorum consuesti, sicut hinc discesseras, and si quid nostra causa vis) such an asyndeton is not remarkable. — sollicitudines: probably a genuine plural. Cf., however, Brix, Trin. 490, and Lorenz, Pseud. Introd. 57. — elevare . . . te . . . postulat: postulo followed by the acc. and inf. is Plautine. Cf., e.g., Trin. 237 numquam amor quemquam nisi cupidum hominem postulat se in plagas conicere.

3. si quid nostra causa vis: a phrase from the sermo urbanus (Böckel). Cf. Fam. 13. 71. — obtundere, to tire out (by talking or writing); a favorite word in Plautus and Terence. — delectare: cf. delectare, above.

LXXVIII. (Fam. 4. 12.)

SERVIUS CICERONI SALVTEM PLVRIBVS VERBIS.

Etsi scio non iucundissimum me nuntium vobis ¹ adlaturum, tamen, quoniam casus et natura in nobis dominatur, visum est faciendum, quoquo modo res se haberet, vos certiores facere. A. d. x K. Iun., cum ab Epidauro Piraeum navi advectus essem, ibi M. Marcellum collegam nostrum conveni eumque diem ibi consumpsi ut cum eo essem. Postero die ab eo digressus sum eo consilio, ut ab Athenis in Boetiam irem reliquamque iurisdictionem absolverem, ille, ut aiebat, supra Maleas in Italiam versus navigaturus erat. Post diem tertium eius diei, cum ab Athenis ² proficisci in animo haberem, circiter hora decima noctis P. Postumius familiaris eius ad me venit et mihi nuntiavit M. Marcellum collegam nostrum post cenae

LXXVIII. Athens, May 31, 45 B.C. M. Claudius Marcellus, the consul of 51 B.C., who had been living in banishment at Mytilene since the battle of Pharsalus, was recalled by the senate, with the consent of Caesar, towards the close of the year 46. The indifference which he felt concerning his recall is shown both by the coldness and brevity of his letter of acknowledgment to Cicero (Fam. 4. 11), and by the fact that he did not set out for Rome until the middle of 45 B.C. On his way thither he was murdered at the Piraeus, as described in this letter, the style of which is terse and graphic.

1. non iucundissimum: instances of litotes are common in the Letters; cf. non minimum, non pessimum, non mediocriter, etc. — visum est faciendum: Landgraf, p. 327, notes that facere ut is a colloquial expression (cf. Fam. 10. 17. 3), while facere followed by the infin., as here, belongs to vulgar Latin; cf. Petron. 51 fecit Caesarem reporrigere. — navi: the regular form in early Latin. Nave appears first in Cicero's time. From Livy on nave is the common form. — collegam nostrum: probably in the augurate. — ab Athenis: cf. ab Aegina, Ep. LXXV. 4 n. Cf. also ab Epidauro, above, and ab Athenis, 2. — reliquam . . . absolverem: before leaving his province he held the circuit courts, which it was part of a governor's duty to do. — supra Maleas: super is the common preposition in this sense.

tempus a P. Magio Cilone familiare eius pugione percussus esse et duo vulnera accepisse, unum in stomacho, alterum in capite secundum aurem; sperare tamen eum vivere posse; Magium se ipsum interfecisse postea; se a Marcello ad me missum esse qui haec nuntiaret et rogaret uti medicos ei mitterem. Itaque medicos coegi et e vestigio eo sum profectus prima luce. Cum non longe a Piraeo abessem, puer Acidini obviam mihi venit cum codicillis in quibus erat scriptum, paulo ante lucem Marcellum diem suum obisse. Ita vir clarissimus ab homine deterrimo acerbissima morte est adfectus, et, cui inimici propter dignitatem pepercerant, inventus 3 est amicus qui ei mortem offerret. Ego tamen ad tabernaculum eius perrexi. Inveni duos libertos et pauculos servos; reliquos aiebant profugisse metu perterritos quod dominus eorum ante tabernaculum inter-

2. P. Magio Cilone: certain persons at Rome suspected that Caesar had instigated the murder of Marcellus; but cf. Att. 13. 10. 3 *hodie Spintherem exspecto; misit enim Brutus ad me; per litteras purgat Caesarem de interitu Marcelli, in quem, ne si insidiis quidem ille interfectus esset, caderet ulla suspicio, nunc vero, cum de Magio constet, nonne furor eius causam omnem sustinet? . . . Quamquam nihil habeo quod dubitem, nisi ipsi Magio quae fuerit causa amentiae, pro quo quidem etiam sponsor factus erat. Nimirum id fuit; solvendo enim non erat: credo cum petiisse a Marcello aliquid, et illum, ut erat, constantius respondisse. — secundum aurem, directly behind the ear. This meaning of secundum is Plautine, and is found in no other writer of the classical period. — ipsum: to be joined with *Ma-

gium. — e vestigio, forthwith. — eo: i.e. to the Piraeus. — codicillis: see Intr. 59. — diem suum obisse: euphemistic; cf. Ep. LXXV. 4. — inimici: Caesar is thought of especially.

3. ad tabernaculum eius: the Piraeus being in ruins (cf. Ep. LXXV. 4), travellers were obliged to camp in tents. — pauculos: Servius shows a fondness for the use of diminutives. Cf. muliercula, homunculus, and animala, Ep. LXXV. — metu: if a citizen was murdered by a slave, all the slaves of the household were liable to be put to death; cf. Tac. Ann. 14. 42 Pedanium Secundum servus ipsius interfecit; . . . ceterum cum vetere ex more familiam omnem, quae sub eodem tecto mansitaverat, ad supplicium agi oporteret, etc. Even when the murderer was not one of their number, the slaves fectus esset. Coactus sum in eadem illa lectica qua ipse delatus eram, meisque lecticariis in urbem eum referre, ibique pro ea copia quae Athenis erat, funus ei satis amplum faciendum curavi. Ab Atheniensibus locum sepulturae intra urbem ut darent impetrare non potui, quod religione se impediri dicerent, neque tamen id antea cuiquam concesserant. Quod proximum fuit, uti in quo vellemus gymnasio eum sepeliremus, nobis permiserunt. Nos in nobilissimo orbi terrarum gymnasio Academiae locum delegimus ibique eum combusimus posteaque curavimus ut iidem Athenienses in eodem loco monumentum ei marmoreum faciendum locarent. Ita, quae nostra officia fuerunt pro collegio et pro propinquitate, et vivo et mortuo omnia ei praestitimus. Vale. D. pr. K. Iun. Athenis.

LXXIX. (Fam. 5. 15.)

M. CICERO S. D. L. LVCCEIO Q. F.

Omnis amor tuus ex omnibus partibus se ostendit in iis litteris quas a te proxime accepi, non ille quidem mihi ignotus, sed tamen gratus et optatus — dicerem had good reason to fear the severity of the law. — meis lecticariis: abl. of means. — pro ea copia, so far as the facilities (at Athens) allowed. — ut (darent): the position of ut in the middle of the clause lays emphasis upon the words which precede. Cf. Ep. XXX. 1 n. — quod . . . dicerent: the subj., although not expressing a pretext but the real reason; cf. diceret, Ep. I. 3 n. — neque tamen, and after all . . . not. — in quo vellemus gymnasio: there were three in Athens: Λύκειον, Κυρβοσάργες, Ἀκαδημία. — orbi: locative. — iidem Athenienses: i.e. the same people who had declined to allow the ashes to be deposited within the city. — propinquitate: how Marcellus was related to Servius is unknown. — d. pr. K., etc.: cf. Intr. 62.

LXXIX. Astura, May 10-12, 45 B.C. Cicero's answer to Ep. LXXXVII.

'iucundus,' nisi id verbum in omne tempus perdidissem — neque ob eam unam causam, quam tu suspicaris et in qua me lenissimis et amantissimis verbis utens re graviter accusas, sed quod illius tanti vulneris quae 2 remedia esse debebant, ea nulla sunt. Quid enim? Ad amicosne confugiam? Quam multi sunt? Habuimus enim fere communis, quorum alii occiderunt, alii nescio quo pacto obdurerunt. Tecum vivere possem equidem et maxime vellem; vetustas amor consuetudo studia paria, — quod vinclum, quaeso, deest nostrae conjunctionis? Possumusne igitur esse una? Nec mehercule intellego quid impediatur; sed certe adhuc non fuimus, cum essemus vicini in Tusculano, in Puteolano. Nam quid dicam in urbe? in qua, cum forum 3 commune sit, vicinitas non requiritur. Sed casu nescio quo in ea tempora nostra aetas incidit ut, cum maxime florere nos oporteret, tum vivere etiam puderet. Quod enim esse poterat mihi perfugium spoliato et domesticis et forensibus ornamentis atque solaciis? Litterae, credo, quibus utor assidue; quid enim aliud facere possum? Sed nescio quomodo ipsae illae excludere me a portu et perfugio videntur et quasi exprobrare,

1. iucundus: cf. iucundiora, gratiora, Ep. LXXVI. 1 n. — ob eam unam causam: sc. the death of Tullia. — remedia: sc. friends, influence, freedom, civic honors, etc. Cf. Ep. LXXVI. 2 nn.

2. quid enim: usually followed, as here, by a rhetorical question expecting a negative answer. — occiderunt: cf. Ep. LXII. 2 nn. — possumusne: ne for nonne. This usage points back to the period when nonne was unknown.

3. cum . . . oporteret: Cicero had reached an age when he might naturally expect to reap the fruit, in the way of influence, distinction, and friendships, of his years of work and study. — domesticis: to be joined more particularly with solaciis. Cf. amissis ornamentis, etc., Ep. LXXVI. 2. — quibus utor assidue: in 45 B.C. Cicero wrote the Consolatio, Hortensius, de Finibus, and Academica. The Tusculanae Disputationes and the de Natura Deorum were partly written in the same year. — a portu: cf. in puppi, etc., Ep. LXVII. 3 and contraxi vela, Ep. V. 2 n.

quod in ea vita maneam, in qua nihil insit nisi propagatio miserrimi temporis. Hic tu me abesse urbe miraris, in qua domus nihil delectare possit, summum sit odium temporum hominum fori curiae? Itaque sic litteris utor, in quibus consumo omne tempus, non ut ab iis medicinam perpetuam, sed ut exiguam oblivionem doloris petam. Quod si id egissemus ego atque 5 tu — quod ne in mentem quidem nobis veniebat propter cotidianos metus, — omne tempus una fuisset, neque me valetudo tua offenderet neque te maeror meus. Quod quantum fieri poterit consequamur; quid enim est utriusque nostrum aptius? Propediem te igitur videbo.

LXXX. (Fam. 9. 8.)

CICERO VARRONI.

Etsi munus flagitare, quamvis quis ostenderit, ne i populus quidem solet nisi concitatus, tamen ego expectatione promissi tui moveor ut admoneam te, non ut flagitem. Misi autem ad te quattuor admonitores

4. hic: the reference is to Romae . . . miratus sum, Ep. LXXVII. 1. On hic, cf. Ep. XII. 1 n. — domus . . . possit: because it would remind him of Publilia's conduct. — ut . . . petam: Cicero's efforts in seeking consolation found expression especially in the Consolatio and the Tusculan Disputations.

5. si id egissemus: i.e. had lived together. The force of si continues through fuisset. — omne tempus: sc. post suum a Thessalica pugna reditum in Italiam (Manutius). — valetudo tua: cf. Ep. LXXVII. 1.

LXXX. Tusculum, July 11 or 12, 45 B.C. On Varro, cf. Ep. LX. introd. note.

1. promissi tui: Varro had promised, as early as 47 B.C., to dedicate one of his works to Cicero; cf. Att. 13. 12. 3 Varro mihi denuntiaverat magnam sane et gravem προσφώνησιν; but in 45 Cicero writes impatiently (Att. 13. 12. 3): biennium praeteriit, cum ille Καλλιπιδης assiduo cursu cubitum nullum processerit. Ultimately Varro's work de Lingua Latina appeared, between 45 and 43 B.C., of which twenty books were dedicated to Cicero. — quattuor ad-non nimis verecundos; nosti enim profecto os illius adulescentioris Academiae. Ex ea igitur media excitatos misi, qui metuo ne te forte flagitent; ego autem mandavi ut rogarent. Exspectabam omnino iamdiu meque sustinebam ne ad te prius ipse quid scriberem quam aliquid accepissem, ut possem te remunerari quam simillimo munere; sed cum tu tardius faceres, id est, ut ego interpretor, diligentius, teneri non potui quin coniunctionem studiorum amorisque nostri quo possem litterarum genere declararem. Feci igitur sermonem inter nos habitum in Cumano, cum esset una Pomponius; tibi dedi partis Antiochinas, quas a te probari monitores: the four books of the Academica. These books, at the suggestion of Atticus, were dedicated to Varro. Cf. Att. 13. 19. Cicero hoped that this might stimulate Varro to the performance of his promised work.—os, effrontery; a colloquial word. Cf. Plaut. M. G. 189 os habet linguam perfidiam; Ter. Eun. 806 os durum! ('you brazenface!'). Varro was not an adherent of the New Academy.—qui... flagitent: although these admonitores have been directed to make only a request of Varro, such is the boldness of all that comes from the adulescentior Academia, Cicero fears it may be a demand.—exspectabam: cf. Cic. Acad. 1. 2 inquit ille (i.e. Varro) . . . 'sed habeo opus magnum in manibus idque iam pridem; ad hunc enim ipsum'—me autem dicebat—'quaedam institui, quae et sunt magna sane et limantur a me politius.' Et ego, 'ista quidem,' inquam, 'Varro, iam diu exspectans non audeo tamen flagitare; audivi enim e Libone nostro, cuius nosti studium—nihil enim eum eius modi celare possumus,—non te ea intermittere, sed accuratius tractare nec de manibus umquam deponere.'—me sustinebam: sc. in my desire to write to you.—coniunctionem . . . nostri: cf. Cicero's remark upon Varro in Acad. 1. 1 hominem nobiscum et studiis iisdem et vetustate amicitiae coniunctum.—in Cumano: the dialogue is supposed to have taken place in Varro's villa at Cumae; cf. Acad. 1. 1.—Pomponius: i.e. Atticus.—partis Antiochinas: Cicero composed the Academica at first in two books, with Q. Lutatius Catulus for the principal speaker in the first, and L. Licinius Lucullus in the second. When he learned from Atticus that Varro wished to have a work dedicated to him, he reconstructed the Academica, divided it into four books, and dedicated the whole work to Varro, making him a mouthpiece for the opinions of Antiochus of Ascalon. Cf. Att. 13. 19. 3; 13. 12. 3; 13. 25. 3. Antiochus, a pupil but not a follower of Philo, sought to harmonize Academic with Stoic and intellexisse mihi videbar; mihi sumpsit Philonis. Puto fore ut, cum legeris, mirere nos id locutos esse inter nos quod numquam locuti sumus; sed nosti morem dialogorum. Posthac autem, mi Varro, quam plurima, si videtur, et de nobis inter nos, sero fortasse; sed superiorum temporum fortuna rei p. causam sustineat, haec ipsi praestare debemus. Atque utinam quietis temporibus atque aliquo, si non bono, at saltem certo statu civitatis haec inter nos studia exercere possemus! Quamquam tum quidem vel aliae quaequam rationes honestas nobis et curas et actiones darent; nunc autem quid est sine his cur vivere velimus? Mihi vero cum his ipsis vix, his autem detractis ne vix quidem. Sed haec coram et saepius. Migrationem et emptio-nem feliciter evenire volo, tuumque in ea re consilium probo. Cura ut valeas.

Peripatetic teaching. — Philonis: Philo, the head of the Academy, fled in 88 B.C. from Athens to Rome, where Cicero attended his lectures; cf. Brut. 306 cum princeps Academiae Philo . . . Romam venisset, totum ei me tradidi admirabili quodam ad philosophiam studio concitatus, in quo hoc etiam commorabar attentius, quod etsi rerum ipsarum varietas et magnitudo summa me delectatione retinebat, tamen sublata iam esse in perpetuum ratio iudiciorum videbatur.

2. si videtur: cf. si tibi videtur, Ep. LXXV. 4 n. — inter nos: sc. loquemur. — superiorum temporum, etc.: the state of public affairs might justify their literary inactivity in the past, but, since they would have no share in politics in the future, they would not be kept from the pursuit of literature. Literary work would in fact be their only feasible occupation, and failure to engage in it would be a dereliction of duty. — haec (sc. tempora) . . . debemus, the responsibility for the present (lit. times like these) rests with us. — aliquo . . . certo statu civitatis: a government conducted upon some fixed constitutional principles at least. — vel = etiam. — darent: apodosis to the condition in tum. — cura his ipsis (studiis) vix: sc. est cur vivere velim. — migrationem: sc. into a house lately bought. — feliciter evenire: a formula often used in wishing for the happy outcome of a new enterprise; cf. Cic. pro Mur. 1, and Plaut. Trin. 40 uxor, venerare ut nobis haec habitatio bona fausta felix fortunataque evenat. See also Ep. XC. 7 n.

LXXXI. (Fam. 7. 24.)

M. CICERO S. D. M. FADIO GALLO.

1 Amoris quidem tui, quoquo me verti, vestigia, vel proxime de Tigellio; sensi enim ex litteris tuis valde te laborasse. Amo igitur voluntatem. Sed pauca de re. Cippius, opinor, olim 'Non omnibus dormio.' Sic ego non omnibus, mi Galle, servio. Etsi quae est haec servitus? Olim, cum regnare existimabamur, non tam ab ullis quam hoc tempore observor a familiarissimis Caesaris omnibus praeter istum. Id ego in lucris pono, non ferre hominem pestilentiozem patria sua; eumque addictum iam tum puto esse Calvi Licini Hipponacteo

LXXXI. Tusculum, about Aug. 20, 45 B.C. For Fadius, see Ep. IV. introd. note.

1. vestigia: sc. sunt. — vel, for instance. — Tigellio: the singer whom Horace dubs Sardus Tigellius (Sat. 1. 3. 3) from his birth-place, Sardinia, a favorite of Julius Caesar in Cicero's time, and later of Octavianus. Cf. Hor. Sat. 1. 2 and 3. — Cippius . . . dormio: Cippius, as the story goes (cf. Festus), was in the habit of feigning sleep, but when on a certain occasion a slave attempted to steal one of his master's cups, Cippius started up, saying, 'non omnibus dormio.' — opinor: probably a case of genuine uncertainty concerning the name, but cf. Hector Naevianus, Ep. XVIII. 7 n. — olim, once upon a time. — sic . . . servio: he may find it necessary to be Caesar's slave, but he will not be the slave of every one of Caesar's household. Cicero apparently uses the same story in the same connection in Att. 13.

49. 2 (written about the same time as this letter), where, however, the name of Cippius is omitted. — olim: sc. before Caesar's assumption of power. — ab ullis: sc. observabar, from observor. — a familiarissimis: Gallus had evidently expressed the fear that Tigellius, who was angry at Cicero, might use his influence with Caesar against him. Cicero therefore assures Gallus that there has been no change in Caesar's attitude to him. Cicero's remark here harmonizes with statements made a year before; cf. Ep. LXI. 2. — pestilentiozem patria sua: cf. Ep. XVI. (end) n. — eumque . . . praeconio, and I think he has by this time been disposed of at the Hipponactean estimate put upon him by Calvus Licinius. — Calvi Licini: Gaius Licinius Macer Calvus was known equally well as an orator (cf., e.g., Cic. Brut. 280, 283) and as a poet (cf., e.g., Sen. Contr. 7. 4. 7). The different tendencies in oratory which Cicero and Cal-

praeconio. At vide quid suscenseat. Phameae causam a receperam, ipsius quidem causa; erat enim mihi sane familiaris. Is ad me venit dixitque iudicem sibi operam dare constituisse eo ipso die quo de P. Sestio in consilium iri necesse erat. Respondi nullo modo me facere posse; quem vellet alium diem si sumpsisset, me ei non defuturum. Ille autem, qui sciret se nepotem bellum tibicinem habere et sat bonum unctorem, discessit a me, ut mi videbatur, iratior. Habes 'Sardos venalis, alium alio nequiores.' Cognosti meam causam et istius salaconis iniquitatem. 'Catonem' tuum mihi mitte; cupio enim legere. Me adhuc non legisse turpe utriusque nostrum est.

vus represented led apparently to a correspondence between them (cf. Tac. Dial. 18). As a poet, Calvus belonged to the νεώτεροι, (Att. 7. 2. 1), and was an intimate friend of Catullus, the leading representative of that school. He died about 47 B.C.; cf. Fam. 15. 21. 4. Calvus had assailed Tigellius in a poem, the first verse of which, preserved by Porphyrio (Hor. Sat. 1. 3. 4), is as follows: Sardi Tigelli putidum caput venit (from veneo). On the order Calvi Licini, cf. Galli Canini, Ep. XIX. 4 n. — Hipponacteo: Hipponax was a Greek writer of lampoons. — praeconio: the setting forth by an auctioneer of the merits of his wares; suggested by the line from Calvus.

2. Phameae: cf. Ep. LXL. 8 n. Tigellius was annoyed at Cicero for neglecting to act as the advocate of Phamea, his grandfather (or uncle), after having promised to do so (cf. Att. 13. 49. 1). — ipsius quidem causa: Phamea had professed his assistance to Cicero during the latter's canvass for the consulship (cf. Att. 13. 49. 1). — P. Sestio: Sestius was apparently charged with ambitus; cf. Att. 13. 49. 1. — in consilium iri: cum iudices, de reo sententias laturo, in unum coeunt, ire in consilium dicuntur (Manutius). Cf., however, Ep. V. introd. note. — ille: i.e. Phamea. — sat bonum: this archaic form of satis (cf. Ter. And. 475) seems to be found with no other adj. than bonus in classical prose; cf. pro Rosc. Am. 89; de Or. 3. 84; Att. 14. 10. 1. — unctorem: the reference is obscure. Manutius suggests cantorem. — Sardos venalis: the Sardinian slaves were weak and sickly because of the unhealthy climate of their native country. Hence the proverb: 'Sardi venales; alius alio nequior.' Cf. Otto, Sprichwörter der Römer, 308. — Catonem tuum: probably a political biography of Cato. Cf. Intr. 33.

Att. 13. 49 may be read with profit in connection with this letter. The influence of Tigellius with

LXXXII. (Fam. 7. 25.)

CICERO S. D. M. FADIO GALLO.

1 Quod epistulam conscissam doles, noli laborare, salva est; domo petes, cum libebit. Quod autem me mones, valde gratum est, idque ut semper facias rogo; videris enim mihi vereri ne, si istum ludibrio habuerimus, rideamus γέλωτα σαρδάνιον. Sed heus tu, manum de tabula! magister adest citius quam putaramus; vereor

Caesar and Cicero's fear of Caesar's anger prevented Cicero from maintaining long the manly position which he assumes in this and the following letter, for about a month later he writes to Atticus: miror te nihil dūm cum Tigellio; velut hoc ipsum quantum acceperit, prorsus aveo scire nec tamen flocci facio (Att. 13. 50. 3); and about the same time: Tigellium totum mihi (sc. reduc in gratiam) et quidem quam primum; nam pendeo animi (Att. 13. 51. 2). Cf. Schmidt, Briefsw. pp. 353 ff.

LXXXII. Tusculum, about Aug. 24, 45 B.C.

1. quod . . . salva est: apparently Gallus had destroyed Ep. LXXXI. after reading it, for fear that it might fall into the hands of Tigellius or of his friends. Cicero seems to assure Gallus, however, that he has preserved a copy. — quod, etc.: cf. Intr. 91 and Fam. 7. 32, 33. — mones: sc. ut cautior sim. — istum: i.e. Tigellius. — γέλωτα σαρδάνιον: a bitter laugh of anger or secret triumph. But perhaps we should read, with Ernesti, σαρδόνιον. Σαρδόνιον was a poisonous plant of Sardinia, which caused death when eaten, and which so distorted the faces of those who ate it that they seemed to be laughing. The jest would then be in harmony with the sneers at the Sardinian origin of Tigellius in the previous letter. — heus tu: cf. Ep. XXXV. 25 n. — manum de tabula: sc. tolle. The schoolmaster (Caesar) has been away (in Spain), but suddenly returns, and those under him (like Cicero and Gallus) had better stop the pranks they have been playing in his absence, or they will suffer for it (cf. in Catonium Catoninos). Cicero is probably thinking of a roomful of schoolboys, who, instead of giving their attention to the task set them, have amused themselves during the master's absence by scribbling upon their tabulae. The master suddenly appears, and the order comes manum de tabula tollite. The scribbling which Cicero and Gallus have been guilty of during Caesar's absence, is in writing political biographies of Cato. Cf. Catonem tuum, Ep. LXXXI. 2 n. Or the reference may be general: 'No more indiscretions.' Cf. Otto, Sprichwörter, 210. — citius quam putaramus: Caesar arrived from Spain Sept., 45 B.C.; (cf. Suet. Jul. 83). He had been expected in the last week of Aug. (cf. Att. 13. 51. 2). — vereor ne in Catonium Catoninos. Mi Galle, cave putes quicquam melius quam epistolae tuae partem ab eo loco: 'cetera labuntur.' Secreto hoc — audi — tecum habeto; ne Apellae quidem, liberto tuo, dixeris. Praeter duos nos loquitur isto modo nemo; bene malene, videro; sed quicquid est, nostrum est. Vrge igitur, nec 'transversum unguem,' quod aiunt, a stilo; is enim est dicendi opifex. Atque equidem aliquantum iam etiam noctis adsumo.

... Catoninos, I am afraid that he will send us Catonians to the lower world; or to reproduce the pun involved in Catonium and Catoninos: I am afraid that he will send us followers of Cato to the world where Cato is. The term Catonium for the lower world was, according to Schmidt (Briefw. p. 355), a current witticism in the last days of the Republic, originating in a mime of Laberius; cf. Gell. 16. 7. 4. Cf. also Hertz, Gell. II. 281. It has a double meaning: as a comic derivative from Cato, it means 'the abode of Cato'; as a hybrid formation from κάτω (cf. Intr. 80), it means 'the world below.' On Catoninos, cf. Archiv f. lat. Lexikog. I. 184.

2. ab eo loco, beginning with. Gallus's words were perhaps quoted from Cicero's Phaenomena. — tecum habeto, keep it to yourself; for the more common construction, tibi habeto, cf. the formula of divorce, res tuas tibi habe; but see Att. 4. 15. 6 verum haec tu tecum habeto, and Plaut. Poen. 890 hoc tu tecum tacitum habeto. The expression is colloquial. — ne . . . dixeris: cf. Intr. 84 b. — videro: 'I am as yet undecided.' — trans-

versum unguem (sc. discedas), the breadth of a nail; a proverbial expression, the meaning of which appears from Plaut. Aul. 56 si hercle tu ex istoc loco digitum transversum aut unguem latum excesseris. As Manutius observes, this letter is remarkable for the number of popular expressions which it contains: rideamus γέλωτα σαρδάνιον, manum de tabula, and transversum unguem. Proverbiis autem locus magis videtur esse cum ad familiares familiariter scribimus; nam ad spectatos viros, in re praesertim gravi, sententiis quidem proverbiorum similibus, ut Homeri aliorumve poeturum versibus, saepe utitur Cicero; quae vero proverbia vere et plane sunt, ea non ita frequenter attingit, arbitratus fortasse Romanae gravitatis non esse proverbia inculcare (Manutius). — is . . . opifex: cf. de Or. 1. 150 stilus optimus et praestantissimus dicendi effector ac magister; 1. 257 stilus ille tuus quem tu vere dixisti perfectorem dicendi esse ac magistrum. — equidem: common in the Ciceronian letters, while ego quidem is regularly used in the non-Ciceronian letters: cf. Fam. 6. 7. 3; 8. 5. 1; Ep. LXXIX. 2.

LXXXIII. (Att. 13. 52.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

1 O hospitem mihi tam gravem ἀμεταμέλητον! Fuit enim periucunde. Sed cum secundis Saturnalibus ad Philippum vesperi venisset, villa ita completa militibus est ut vix triclinium ubi cenaturus ipse Caesar esset vacaret; quippe hominum κίς κίς. Sane sum commotus quid futurum esset postridie, ac mihi Barba Cassius subvenit: custodes dedit. Castra in agro; villa defensa est. Ille tertiis Saturnalibus apud Philippum ad h. VII, nec quemquam admisit: rationes opinor cum Balbo. Inde ambulavit in litore; post h. VIII in balneum; tum audivit de Mamurra; non mutavit; unctus

LXXXIII. Puteoli, Dec. 19, 45 B.C. This letter describes a visit which Caesar, accompanied by his bodyguard, made at Cicero's villa near Puteoli.

1. ο . . . ἀμεταμέλητον, would you believe it, I have nothing to be sorry for in the visit of a guest so formidable to me! The acc. hospitem expresses astonishment. — tam gravem: so formidable because he had been a political enemy. mihi tam gravem is to be taken parenthetically, and a contrast is intended between gravem and ἀμεταμέλητον. — fuit enim periucunde: sc. Caesar. Cf. Intr. 85. Cicero addresses almost the same words to Caesar (pro Deiot. 19): cum in convivio comiter et iucunde fuisses. On the force of per, cf. Intr. 77. — sed, but (to my tale). Breaking off his general comments upon the incident, he proceeds to describe it in detail. — secundis Saturnalibus:

i.e. Dec. 18. — Philippum: cf. Ep. LXXII. n. — quippe hominum κίς κίς: sc. fuerunt. — postridie: when he expected a visit from Caesar. — Barba Cassius: cf. Galli Canini, Ep. XIX. 4 n. Cassius Barba was a friend of Caesar; cf. Philipp. 13. 3. — ille: i.e. Caesar. — apud Philippum: sc. erat. — Balbo: Cornelius Balbus, Caesar's financial agent. Cf. Ep. XXI. 2 n. — in balneum: sc. iuit. This was doubtless at Cicero's villa. With these words the account of the visit proper begins, and since no reference is made to Caesar's arrival or to his reception by Cicero, Boot suggests with probability that one or more lines have fallen out after post h. VIII. — de Mamurra: Mamurra had been Caesar's praefectus fabrum in Gaul and Britain. It is he against whom Catullus directs his fierce invectives, Car. 29 and 57. The reference here is possibly to est, accubuit. Ἐμετικὴν agebat; itaque et edit et bibit ἀδεῶς et iucunde, opipare sane et apparate, nec id solum, sed

bene cocto

Condito, sermone bono et, si quaeri', libenter.

Praeterea tribus tricliniis accepti οἱ περὶ αὐτὸν valde 2 copiose; libertis minus lautis servisque nihil deficit: nam lautiores eleganter accepti. Quid multa? homines visi sumus. Hospes tamen non is cui diceret: 'Amabo te, eodem ad me, cum revertere.' Semel satis est.

the death of Mamurra, but probably, as Manutius suggests, Cicero has in mind his conviction under the sumptuary laws; cf. also Riese on Catull. Car. 29. — mutavit: used absolutely as in Fam. 16. 1. 1. — accubuit: Caesar followed the regular order, viz., exercise, the bath, dinner. — Ἐμετικὴν agebat (sc. τέχνη), he was taking a course of emetics. Emetics were regularly prescribed by physicians in order that patients might escape the effects resulting from eating elaborate dinners. They were taken in the morning, after the bath or after the cena. The use of them was, however, by no means confined to men of a gluttonous disposition; cf. pro Deiot. 21, where the speaker certainly has every reason to avoid offending Caesar: cum . . . vomere post cenam te velle dixisses. See also Marq. and Momm. Handbuch, VII. 330, and n. 5 and 6. For the Greek word, cf. Intr. 97. — opipare: from the colloquial vocabulary. Cf. Plaut. Bacch. 373; Caecil. Stat. 100, Ribbeck, Com. Rom. Frag. It occurs also Att. 5. 9. 1; 7. 2. 3; and de Off. 3. 58 in a quotation. — sane: cf. Ep. XVI. 2 n. — apparate: used only in the Letters (Hofmann). — bene

cocto condito: sc. cibo. The quotation, which is from Lucilius, is found also de Fin. 2. 25: *ex quo illud efficitur, qui bene cenent, omnes libenter cenare, qui libenter, non continuo bene. Semper Laelius bene. Quid bene? Dicit Lucilius: 'cocto | condito'; sed cedo caput cenae: 'sermone bono, quid ex eo? 'si quaeri', libenter.' — si quaeri': for si quaeris. — libenter: to be connected with some form of cenare in the unquoted part of the original.*

2. tribus tricliniis: in uno liberti lautiores, in altero minus lautii, in tertio discutere servi (Manutius). — nam, etc.: the reason for Cicero's use of the words minus lautis. — quid multa, in a word; cf. quid quaeris, Ep. V. 4 n. These words indicate that what follows conveys Cicero's general impression of the whole affair. — homines, ordinary mortals (not Caesar the dictator, and Cicero the constitutionalist). Cf. Ep. XX. 3 virum te putabo, si Sallusti Empedoclea legeris, hominem non putabo. The dinner was such a dinner as one gentleman might give to another. — amabo te: see Intr. 100; Archiv f. lat. Lexikog. IX. 485 ff.; and cf. si me amas, Ep. XIII. 3 n. — ad me:

Σπουδαῖον οὐδὲν in sermone, φιλόλογά multa. Quid quaeris? Delectatus est et libenter fuit. Puteolis se aiebat unum diem fore, alterum ad Baias. Habes hospitium sive ἐπισταθμεῖαν, odiosam mihi, dixi, non molestam. Ego paulisper hic, deinde in Tusculanum. Dolabellae villam cum praeteriret, omnis armatorum copia dextra sinistra ad equum nec usquam alibi. Hoc ex Nicia.

LXXXIV. (Fam. 13. 50.)

CICERO S. D. ACILIO.

1 Sumpsit hoc mihi pro tua in me observantia, quam penitus perspexi quamdiu Brundisi fuimus, ut ad te familiariter et quasi pro meo iure scriberem, si quae

sc. deverte. — σπουδαῖον οὐδὲν: i.e. no discussion of politics; see Intr. 97, and παρηγοῖαν, Ep. V. 8 n. Cf. also φιλόλογα and ἐπισταθμεῖαν, below. — quid quaeris: cf. quid multa, above. — libenter: cf. periuicunde, 1. — ad Baias: sc. fore or venturum esse. — habes: cf. sic habeto, Ep. XXVI. 1 n. — ἐπισταθμεῖαν, billeting. — hic: sc. ero. — Dolabellae villam: sc. at Baiae. — dextra sinistra: cf. Intr. 94. — ad equum: sc. Caesaris. This military evolution, which consisted in parading on either side of Caesar, was intended as a compliment to Dolabella. — Nicia: a common friend of Cicero and Dolabella.

The excitement which this visit produced is reflected in the language of the letter, which in the great number of ellipses and of Greek expressions presents a fine specimen of the sermo familiaris (Hofmann). It is a significant fact that Caesar was assassinated three months after the incident described in this letter. The spectacle which Caesar presented when making a progress through Italy attended by a disorderly bodyguard of 2000 men, may well have crystallized the sentiment forming against him.

LXXXIV. Rome, about Jan. 1, 44 B.C. Acilius, to whom Fam. 13. 30–39 also were addressed, had been twice successfully defended by Cicero (Fam. 7. 30. 3). He had just been sent out to Achaia to succeed Servius Sulpicius Rufus (cf. Fam. 7. 29. 1; 7. 30. 3). For M'. Curius, in whose behalf the letter was written, see Ep. XXXIX. 2. Cicero felt a debt of gratitude to him, because of the hospitality which he had shown him at Patrae, after the battle of Pharsalus (cf. Fam. 13. 17. 1). The letter was written in response to a request from Curius (cf. Fam. 7. 29. 1; 7. 30. 3).

1. Brundisi: from Oct., 48 B.C.,

res esset de qua valde laborarem. M'. Curius qui Patris negotiatur ita mihi familiaris est ut nihil possit esse coniunctius. Multa illius in me officia, multa in illum mea, quodque maximum est, summus inter nos amor et mutuus. Quae cum ita sint, si ullam in amicitia mea spem habes, si ea quae in me officia et studia Brundisi contulisti vis mihi etiam gratiora efficere — quamquam sunt gratissima, — si me a tuis omnibus amari vides, hoc mihi da atque largire ut M'. Curium 'sartum et tectum,' ut aiunt, ab omnique incommodo detrimento molestia sincerum integrumque conserves. Et ipse spondeo et omnes hoc tibi tui pro me recipient, ex mea amicitia et ex tuo in me officio maximum te fructum summamque voluptatem esse capturum. Vale.

LXXXV. (Fam. 6. 15.)

CICERO BASILO S.

Tibi gratulor, mihi gaudeo; te amo, tua tueor; a te amari et quid agas quidque agatur certior fieri volo.

to Sept., 47; cf. Intr. 32 f. — familiaris: cf. Fam. 13. 17. 1.

2. sartum et tectum: an adaptation of the technical phrase sarta et tecta, used by the censors of buildings placed in the hands of contractors to be 'put into perfect repair,' so as to be secure against the assaults of wind and weather. Cf. Brix on Plaut. Trin. 317, and Otto, Sprichwörter, 309.

LXXXV. Rome, probably Mar. 15, 44 B.C. With these words Cicero salutes L. Minucius Basilus, one of Caesar's murderers, on the day of the assassination and after its occurrence.

Basilus had been praetor in 45 B.C., and actuated by chagrin at not obtaining a province from Caesar for the next year, joined the conspirators. For an account of his death, see Appian, B. C. 3. 98. Cicero was perhaps a witness of Caesar's murder (cf. Phil. 2. 28; All. 14. 14. 4), but he had no previous knowledge of the plan (cf. Fam. 12. 2. 1; 12. 4. 1).

quid agas quidque agatur: the inquiry here indicates that this note of congratulation was written before Cicero's visit to the Capitol, where the conspirators took refuge after the assassination. Cf. Intr. 36.

LXXXVI. (Fam. II. I.)

D. BRVTVS BRVTO SVO ET CASSIO S.

1 Quo in statu simus cognoscite. Heri vesperi apud me Hirtius fuit; qua mente esset Antonius demonstravit, pessima scilicet et infidelissima. Nam se neque mihi provinciam dare posse aiebat neque arbitrari tuto

LXXXVI. Rome, Mar. 17, 44 B.C. The 17th and 18th of March were taken up with meetings of the senate (cf. Phil. 2. 89). Mar. 19 was a holiday (Quinquatrus), on which a burial could not take place, so that the burning of Caesar's body and Antony's address in the Forum cannot have taken place before Mar. 20. On the other hand, seven days seem to have been the extreme interval allowed between death and burial amongst the Romans (cf. Herodian, 4. 2. 4, with note by Marquardt, Handbuch, VII. 348). The burial must have taken place, therefore, on or before Mar. 22, i.e. Mar. 20-22 (Ruete, 16). As for the date of this letter, there is no mention in it of Caesar's burial, so that it was probably written before Mar. 20-22. In fact, the remarks in 6 make it highly probable that it was written on the morning of Mar. 17. Decimus Junius Brutus Albinus had served under Caesar with distinction in the campaigns against the Veneti in 56 B.C. (cf. B. G. 3. 11. 5), and against Vercingetorix in 52 (cf. B. G. 7. 9. 1). He followed Caesar in the Civil War (cf. Caes. B. C. 1. 56-58 et passim), and later served twice as governor of Gallia Vltior. In spite of these favors from Caesar, he was one of the three most active and prominent leaders of the conspiracy (cf. Suet. Iul. 80; Vell. Paterc. 2. 56), and induced Caesar to go to the curia on the Ides of March. Caesar had designated him as one of his second heirs and as governor of Gallia Cisalpina (cf. Intr. 40). M. Junius Brutus, who is addressed (cf. Bruto suo), had espoused the cause of Pompey in the Civil War (cf. Att. 11. 4. 2), but was subsequently pardoned by Caesar and made governor of Gallia Cisalpina (cf. Ep. LXV. 10 n.). At the time of Caesar's assassination he was praetor. C. Cassius Longinus (cf. Cassio), as proquaestor of Syria, while Cicero was governor of Cilicia, carried on a brilliant campaign against the Parthians (cf. quo . . . recessisse, Ep. XXXIV. 7 n.). He supported Pompey in 49 B.C., but was subsequently pardoned by Caesar and made one of his legates (cf. Ep. LXV. 10 n.). At the time of Caesar's death he was praetor.

1. Hirtius: consul with Pansa in 43 B.C. Cf. Ep. LXI. 7. — infidelissima: this unusual superlative Cicero himself uses in Ep. LX. 2. — provinciam: i.e. Gallia Cisalpina. — aiebat: sc. Antonius. — mediocre auxilium dignitatis: with especial reference to se . . . provinciam dare posse, above. Caesar's assignment of Gallia Cisalpina to D. Brutus was, however, ratified in urbe esse quemquam nostrum ; adeo esse militum concitatos animos et plebis. Quod utrumque esse falsum puto vos animadvertere, atque illud esse verum quod Hirtius demonstrabat, timere eum ne, si mediocre auxilium dignitatis nostrae habuissemus, nullae partes his in re p. relinquerentur. Cum in his angustiis ² versarer, placitum est mihi ut postularem legationem liberam mihi reliquisque nostris, ut aliqua causa profiscendi honesta quaereretur. Haec se impetratum pollicitus est, nec tamen impetratum confido ; tanta est hominum insolentia et nostri insectatio. Ac si dederint quod petimus, tamen paulo post futurum puto ut hostes iudicemur aut aqua et igni nobis interdicatur. 'Quid ergo est,' inquis, 'tui consili?' Dandus est ³ locus fortunae : cedendum ex Italia, migrandum Rhodum aut aliquo terrarum arbitror. Si melior casus fuerit, revertemur Romam ; si mediocris, in exilio vivemus ; si pessimus, ad novissima auxilia descendemus.

by the senate Mar. 18. — his : i.e. Antony and his followers.

2. placitum est: cf. licitum est, Ep. LXXV. 3 n. A confusion between the active and passive forms is noticeable in early Latin and in colloquial Latin of all periods ; see, e.g., Guericke, de Linguae Vulgaris Reliquiis apud Petronium, etc., 49, and Rönsch, It. u. Vulg. 297 ff. See also the statement with reference to the conservative element in colloquial Latin, Intr. 70. In general, colloquial Latin is distinguished from formal Latin by a less degree of fixity in the matter of form and construction. — legationem liberam : cf. legati, Ep. I. 2 n. — pollicitus est : sc. Hirtius. — insectatio : apparently the first extant instance of the use of the word. Cf. Intr. 75. — dederint : cf. dimisero, Ep. XV. 2 n. — aqua . . . interdicatur : the technical phrase for banishment.

3. aliquo terrarum : cf. quo terrarum, Liv. 39. 54 ; ubi terrarum, Cic. Att. 5. 10. 4. The limiting genitive is unusual with aliquo ; cf. Cic. in Cat. 1. 17. — ad novissima auxilia : i.e. to armed resistance, as indicated by the reference to Sex. Pompeius and Bassus Caecilius below. — novissima : i.e. extrema, a colloquial usage noticed by Varro (de Ling. Lat. 6. 59), and employed by Cicero in one of his earlier orations (pro Rosc. Com. 30), but otherwise avoided by him (cf. Gell. 10. 21. 1 f.) ; cf. novissime

- 4 Succurret fortasse hoc loco alicui vestrum, cur novissimum tempus exspectemus potius quam nunc aliquid moliamur. Quia ubi consistamus non habemus praeter Sex. Pompeium et Bassum Caecilium, qui mihi videntur hoc nuntio de Caesare allato firmiores futuri. Satis tempore ad eos accedemus, ubi quid valeant scierimus. Pro Cassio et te, si quid me velitis recipere, 5 recipiam; postulat enim hoc Hirtius ut faciam. Rogo vos quam primum mihi rescribatis — nam non dubito quin de his rebus ante horam quartam Hirtius certiotorem me sit facturus: quem in locum convenire possimus, quo me velitis venire, rescribite.
- 6 Post novissimum Hirti sermonem placitum est mihi postulare ut liceret nobis Romae esse publico praesidio. Quod illos nobis concessuros non puto; magnam enim invidiam iis faciemus. Nihil tamen non postulandum putavi, quod aequum esse statuerem.

= denique in a letter from D. Brutus (Fam. 11. 20. 1) and in one from C. Cassius (Fam. 12. 13. 3). This usage is not found in Caesar.

4. succurret: for occurret; a usage not found in Cicero outside the Letters, and only three times in them; Ep. XC. 6; Att. 14. 1. 2. — Sex. Pompeium: the son of Pompeius Magnus, who escaped after the battle of Munda (Caes. fr. p. 160, ed. Dinter), and gathered about him in Spain irreconcilables, freebooters, and malcontents. — Bassum Caecilium: a Pompeian who, though pardoned by Caesar after the battle of Pharsalus, secured a small army, entrenched himself in Syria, and defied the power of Caesar. On the order Bassum Caecilium, cf. Galli Canini, Ep. XIX.

4 n. Brutus adopts the same order in Fam. 11. 9. 1; 11. 20. 1. — de Caesare: euphemistic for de morte Caesaris. — pro Cassio et te: the letter is addressed more particularly to M. Brutus.

6. post . . . sermonem, etc.: apparently written after the conference with Hirtius referred to above, and immediately before the meeting of the senate on Mar. 17. — novissimum: for proximum; cf. note above. — illos: Antony and his followers. — invidiam iis faciemus: cf. Att. 3. 16 spem facere alicui; Fam. 10. 18. 2 timorem facere alicui; Att. 11. 8. 2 dolorem facere alicui. It is probable that all these phrases are colloquial. Cf. Intr. 89.

LXXXVII. (Fam. 9. 14.)

CICERO DOLABELLAE CONSVLI SVO S.

Etsi contentus eram, mi Dolabella, tua gloria satis-que ex ea magnam laetitiam voluptatemque capiebam, tamen non possum non confiteri cumulari me maximo gaudio, quod vulgo hominum opinio socium me adscri-bat tuis laudibus. Neminem conveni — convenio autem cotidie plurimos; sunt enim permulti optimi viri qui valetudinis causa in haec loca veniant, praeterea ex municipiis frequentes necessarii mei, — quin omnes, cum te summis laudibus ad caelum extulerunt, mihi continuo maximas gratias agant; negant enim se dubitare quin tu meis praeceptis et consiliis obtemperans praestantissimum te civem et singularem consulem praebeas. Quibus ego quamquam verissime possum 2

LXXXVII. Pompeii, May 3, 44 B.C. One of the many demagogues in Rome at this time, Herophilus or Amatius by name, who claimed to be descended from Gaius Marius, took advantage of the excitement to erect an altar to Caesar in the Forum, on the spot where Caesar's body had been burned. Although Herophilus was put to death as an instigator of riot, the altar which he had erected remained, and a column in Caesar's honor was soon after set up. Dolabella, Cicero's former son-in-law, who was one of the consuls for 44, during the absence from Rome of his colleague Antony, had the altar and column destroyed, and those concerned in the movement put to death (cf. Att. 14. 15. 1). It was this action on Dolabella's part which called forth this enthusiastic letter from Cicero. The extravagant tone of the letter has been condemned by many, but Cicero's real purpose was not so much to compliment Dolabella for the vigor of his action, although he appreciated that, as to attach him definitely to the cause of Brutus and Cassius. This hope of Cicero was short-lived. Dolabella's action had been merely a bid for a bribe from the Caesarians, and when this was forthcoming, he ceased to pose as a republican; cf. Intr. 56.

1. valetudinis causa: the Bay of Naples was and still is a favorite health resort. Cf. ad Baias, Ep. V. 10 n. — necessarii mei: Cicero's hold upon the municipia was a strong one; cf. concurso Italiae, Ep. XV. 4 n. — ad caelum, etc.: cf. Bibulus in caelo est, Ep. VII. 2.

respondere te quae facias tuo iudicio et tua sponte facere, nec cuiusquam egere consilio, tamen neque plane adsentior ne imminuam tuam laudem, si omnis a meis consiliis profecta videatur, neque valde nego; sum enim avidior etiam quam satis est gloriae, et tamen non alienum est dignitate tua, quod ipsi Agamemnoni, regum regi, fuit honestum, habere aliquem in consiliis capiendis Nestorem, mihi vero gloriosum te iuvenem consulem florere laudibus quasi alumnum disciplinae meae.

- 3 L. quidem Caesar, cum ad eum aegrotum Neapolim venissem, quamquam erat oppressus totius corporis doloribus tamen, ante quam me plane salutavit, 'O mi Cicero,' inquit, 'gratulor tibi cum tantum vales apud Dolabellam, quantum si ego apud sororis filium valerem, iam salvi esse possemus; Dolabellae vero tuo et gratulor et gratias ago, quem quidem post te consulem solum possumus vere consulem dicere.' Deinde multa de facto ac de re gesta tua: nihil magnificentius, nihil praeclarius actum unquam, nihil rei p. salutaris.
- 4 Atque haec una vox omnium est. A te autem peto ut me hanc quasi falsam hereditatem alienae gloriae sinas cernere, meque aliqua ex parte in societatem tuarum laudum venire patiari. Quamquam, mi Dolabella—haec enim iocatus sum—libentius omnes meas, si

2. Nestorem: Nestor's age and experience made him the privileged counselor of his more youthful superior Agamemnon.—iuvenem consulem: Dolabella had been advanced to the consulship by Caesar before reaching the age required by law.

3. L. Caesar: cf. Ep. I. 2 n.—cum . . . vales: the indicative with cum explicative, after expressions of emotion, etc., is regular till after Cicero's time.—sororis filium: i.e. Antony; cf. Ep. I. 2 n.

4. hereditatem . . . cernere: a technical term used of one who wishes to accept an inheritance.—haec iocatus sum: i.e. haec iocandi causa dixi; cf. defendam, Ep. XCI. 7 n.; in Verr. ii. 1. 71 quod interpellavit (= interpellandi causa dixit) Hortensius.

modo sunt aliquae meae, laudes ad te transfuderim quam aliquam partem exhausserim ex tuis. Nam cum te semper tantum dilexerim quantum tu intellegere potuisti, tum his tuis factis sic incensus sum ut nihil umquam in amore fuerit ardentius; nihil est enim, mihi crede, virtute formosius, nihil pulchrius, nihil amabilius. Semper amavi, ut scis, M. Brutum propter 5 eius summum ingenium, suavissimos mores, singularem probitatem atque constantiam; tamen Idibus Martiis tantum accessit ad amorem ut mirarer locum fuisse augendi in eo quod mihi iampridem cumulatam etiam videbatur. Quis erat qui putaret ad eum amorem quem erga te habebam posse aliquid accedere? Tantum accessit ut mihi nunc denique amare videar, antea dilexisse. Quare quid est quod ego te hortor ut digni- 6 tati et gloriae servias? Proponam tibi claros viros, quod facere solent qui hortantur? Neminem habeo clariorem quam te ipsum; te imitere oportet, tecum ipse certes; ne licet quidem tibi iam tantis rebus gestis non tui similem esse. Quod cum ita sit, hortatio non 7 est necessaria, gratulatione magis utendum est; contingit enim tibi, quod haud scio an nemini, ut summa severitas animadversionis non modo non invidiosa, sed etiam popularis esset et cum bonis omnibus, tum infimo

5. singularem probitatem: cf., however, Intr. 23; cuius salutem, Ep. XXXIV. 6 n.—locum augendi: with this intransitive use of the gerund, cf. Att. 7. 20. 2 turpitudinis coniungendi cum tyranno, and see Weissenborn De Gerundio et Gerundivo linguae Latinae, p. 138: neutri verborum generi gerundia esse adscribenda.—amare . . . dilexisse: cf. diligit . . . amavit, Ep. XXXII. 5 n.

7. summa severitas animadversionis: cf. Cic. Phil. 1. 5 talis animadversio fuit Dolabellae, cum in audaces sceleratosque servos, tum in impuros et nefarios liberos, talisque eversio illius execratae columnae ut mihi mirum videatur tam valde reliquum tempus ab illo uno die dissensisse. Cf. also introd. note.—infimo cuique gratissima: cf. Att. 14. 16. 2 mihi quidem videtur Brutus noster iam

cuique gratissima. Hoc si tibi fortuna quadam contigisset, gratularer felicitati tuae; sed contigit magnitudine cum animi, tum etiam ingeni atque consili. Legi enim contionem tuam; nihil illa sapientius; ita pedetemptim et gradatim tum accessus a te ad causam facti, tum recessus, ut res ipsa maturitatem tibi animadvertendi omnium concessu daret. Liberasti igitur et urbem periculo et civitatem metu, neque solum ad tempus maximam utilitatem attulisti, sed etiam ad exemplum. Quo facto intellegere debes in te positam esse rem p. tibi que non modo tuendos, sed etiam ornandos esse illos viros a quibus initium libertatis profectum est. Sed his de rebus coram plura propediem, ut spero. Tu quoniam rem p. nosque conservas, fac ut diligentissime te ipsum, mi Dolabella, custodias.

LXXXVIII. (Att. 15. 11.)

CICERO ATTICO SAL.

1 Antium veni a. d. vi Idus. Bruto iucundus noster adventus. Deinde multis audientibus, Servilia, Ter-vel coronam auream per forum ferre posse; quis enim audeat laedere proposita cruce aut saxo, praesertim tantis plausibus, tanta approbatione infimorum? — accessus . . . recessus: the figure seems to be taken from the movements of an army in face of the enemy. Hofmann, however, believes that Cicero is thinking of the ebb and flow of the tide.

8. ad tempus . . . ad exemplum, you have done a very great service, not only for the moment, but also in the way of an example (for the future). — illos viros: i.e.

the liberatores. — mi Dolabella: Cicero rarely addresses his correspondents by name (cf. Ep. X. n.). The fact that Dolabella is addressed three times in this letter gives to it a tone of earnestness and of real or assumed affection. For Dolabella's reply to this letter cf. Att. 14. 21. 1 rescripsit ad eas (litteras) quarum exemplum tibi miseram sane luculente.

LXXXVIII. Antium, June 8, 44 B.C. At a meeting of the senate held June 5, M. Brutus and Cassius were released from their obligation to reside in Rome as tulla, Porcia quaerere quid placeret. Aderat etiam Favonius. Ego quod eram meditatus in via suadere, ut uteretur Asiatica curatione frumenti, nihil esse iam reliqui quod ageremus, nisi ut salvus esset; in eo etiam ipsi rei publicae esse praesidium. Quam orationem cum ingressus essem, Cassius intervenit. Ego eadem illa repetivi. Hoc loco fortibus sane oculis Cassius — Martem spirare dices — se in Siciliam non iturum: 'Egone ut beneficium accepissem contumeliam?' 'Quid ergo agis?' inquam. At ille in Achaïam se iturum. 'Quid tu,' inquam, 'Brute?' 'Romam,' inquit, 'si praetors and commissioned to supply Rome with grain. They retired to Antium to discuss with Cicero the best course to take in view of the senate's action.

1. Servilia: sister of Cato Vticensis and the mother of M. Brutus, a woman of great strength of character, political influence, and judgment, whom Cicero calls prudentissima et diligentissima femina, Ep. ad Brut. 1. 18. 1. After the death of her first husband, M. Junius Brutus (father of the conspirator M. Brutus), she married D. Junius Silanus. One of the children of this second marriage, Tertia or Tertulla, married C. Cassius. — Porcia: the daughter of Cato Vticensis and the second wife of M. Brutus. This little group of brilliant women, ardent republicans and closely bound by marriage and blood relationship to M. Brutus, C. Cassius, and Cato, seems to have played an important part in the politics of this period. Cf. for instance Servilia pollicebatur, etc., 2, also Att. 13. 16. 2. — quaerere: sc. Brutus; hist. infin. — Favonius: cf. Ep. XV. 7 n. — suadere: hist. infin.; cf.

quaerere, above. — Asiatica . . . frumenti: cf. introd. note. — Martem spirare: cf. Q. fr. 3. 4. 6 Ἄρη πνέων. Cf. also Lucr. 5. 392 tantum spirantes aequo certamine bellum; Hor. Od. 4. 13. 19 quae spirabat amores. — in Siciliam: no province had been assigned to Cassius or Brutus by Caesar before his death (cf. Schelle, Beiträge zur Geschichte des Todeskampfes der römischen Republik), but the rumor was current that the senate on June 5 had allotted Sicily to Cassius, an appointment much below his expectations. Cf. Cicero's remarks (Att. 15. 9. 1) on June 2 in anticipation of this action: IV Non. vesperi a Balbo redditae mihi litterae fore Nonis senatum, ut Brutus in Asia, Cassius in Sicilia frumentum emendum et ad urbem mittendum curarent. O rem miseram! primum ullam ab istis, dein, si aliquam, hanc legatoriam (mercatoriam H.) provinciam. — egone, etc.: the question expresses his indignation at the proposed appointment; cf. Plaut. Amph. 818 tun mecum fueris? Cic. Q. fr. 1. 3. 1 ego tibi irascerer? — ut beneficium, as a favor. —

tibi videtur.' 'Mihi vero minime; tuto enim non eris.' 'Quid si possem esse, placeretne?' 'Atque ut omnino neque nunc neque ex praetura in provinciam ires; sed auctor non sum ut te urbi committas.' Dicebam ea quae tibi profecto in mentem veniunt cur non esset
 2 tuto futurus. Multo inde sermone querebantur — atque id quidem Cassius maxime — amissas occasiones, Decimumque graviter accusabant. Ego negabam oportere praeterita, adsentiebar tamen. Cumque ingressus essem dicere quid oportuisset — nec vero quicquam novi, sed ea quae cotidie omnes — nec tamen illum locum attingerem, quemquam praeterea oportuisse tangi, sed senatum vocari, populum ardentem studio vehementius incitari, totam suscipi rem publicam, exclamat tua familiaris: 'Hoc vero neminem umquam auidi.' Ego repressi. Sed et Cassius mihi videbatur si tibi videtur: cf. Ep. LXXV. 4 n. — tuto eris: cf. Intr. 85. a. — atque, yes, indeed, and; frequently used in conversation in affirmative answers; cf. Plaut. M. G. 337 PA. Nempe tu istic ais esse erilem concubinam? Sc. Atque arguo eam me vidisse osculantem hic intus cum alieno viro; ibid. 368 PH. Tun me vidisti? Sc. Atque his quidem hercle oculis. — ut . . . neque . . . neque: for ne . . . aut . . . aut. Hofmann compares Fam. 9. 2. 3 ut ea quae agebantur hic quaeque dicebantur nec viderem nec audirem; Att. 15. 13. 1 adsentior tibi ut nec duces simus nec agmen cogamus. — ex praetura: i.e. at the close of the year. — auctor ut . . . committas: for another construction, see Ep. XLV. 3.

2. Decimum: Decimus Brutus had shown himself without plans and without energy in the critical days following Caesar's assassination. Cf. especially Ep. LXXXVI. 3. The other conspirators were, however, equally helpless. In his province D. Brutus had likewise been inactive. — oportuisset: feri is omitted, as often with oportet, potest, solet, etc.; cf. Brix on Plaut. Trin. 705; Lorenz on M. G. 252. — quemquam . . . tangi: a covert reference to the mistake in not killing Antony. Cf. Fam. 12. 4. 1 vellem Idibus Martiis me ad cenam (i.e. to the murder of Caesar) invitasses: reliquiarum nihil fuisset. Nunc me reliquiae vestrae exercent. See also Fam. 10. 28. 1. tangi is euphemistic for occidi. — tua familiaris: i.e. Servilia. — neminem: sc. dicentem. — ego repressi: sc. me, or perhaps with Böckel quae dicturus eram. With such a phrase the reference would be iturus ; etenim Servilia pollicebatur se curaturam ut illa frumenti curatio de senatus consulto tolleretur, et noster cito deiectus est de illo inani sermone — velle Romae se dixerat. Constituit igitur ut ludi absente se fierent suo nomine ; proficisci autem mihi in Asiam videbatur ab Antio velle. Ne multa, nihil me in illo 3 itinere praeter conscientiam meam delectavit ; non enim fuit committendum ut ille ex Italia priusquam a me conventus esset discederet. Hoc dempto munere amoris atque officii sequebatur ut mecum ipse,

ἡ δεῦρ' ὀδός σοι τί δύναται [νῦν], θεοπρόπε ;

Prorsus dissolutum offendi navigium, vel potius dissipatum : nihil consilio, nihil ratione, nihil ordine. Itaque, etsi ne antea quidem dubitavi, tamen nunc eo minus evolare hinc, idque quam primum, ' ubi nec Pelopidarum facta neque famam audiam.' Sed heus tu, ne forte sis 4 nescius, Dolabella me sibi legavit a. d. iv Nonas. Id mihi heri vesperi nuntiatum est. Votiva ne tibi quito quemquam . . . tangi. — iturus : i.e. into the province which it was thought the senate had assigned to him. — illa frumenti curatio : Servilia hoped that she could induce the senate to reconsider its assignment of the grain commission to Cassius. — noster : sc. Brutus. — illo inani sermone : referring to Romam, si tibi videtur, 1. — ludi : it was the duty of M. Brutus as praetor urbanus to take charge of the ludi Apollinares.

3. ne multa : sc. dicam. — hoc dempto . . . officii, apart from this service which love and duty too required of me. — sequebatur : subject is ut mecum (sc. cogitarem). — ἡ δεῦρ' ὀδός, etc. : Cicero uses the same quotation from an unknown comic poet, of an unsatisfactory journey to Greece in Att. 16. 6. 2. — navigium : the state here, as often, is compared to a ship. Cf. contraxi vela, Ep. V. 2 n. — nihil consilio, etc. : sc. fit. Cf. Decimum, 2 n. — ubi . . . audiam : from an unknown poet (cf. Ribbeck, Trag. Rom. Frag. p. 252). Cicero uses the phrase in four other places. The full verse was probably Vbi nec Pelopidarum nomen nec facta aut famam audiam. The Pelopidae and their dreadful deeds typify, as in Fam. 7. 30. 1, the Caesarians and their course of action.

4. heus tu : cf. Ep. XXXV. 25 n. — Dolabella . . . legavit : sc. for his province Syria. — votiva : sc. legatio. The legatio votiva was a dem placebat; etenim erat absurdum, quae, si stetisset res publica, vovissem, ea me eversa illa vota dissolvere, et habent, opinor, liberae legationes definitum tempus lege Iulia nec facile addi potest. Aveo genus legationis ut, cum velis, introire exire liceat, quod nunc mihi additum est; bella est autem huius iuris quinquenni licentia. Quamquam quid de quinquennio cogitem? Contrahi mihi negotium videtur; sed βλάβσημα mittamus.

LXXXIX. (Fam. 7. 22.)

CICERO TREBATIO S.

Inluseras heri inter scyphos quod dixeram controversiam esse possetne heres, quod furtum antea factum esset, furti recte agere. Itaque, etsi domum bene potus seroque redieram, tamen id caput, ubi haec controversia est, notavi et descriptum tibi misi, ut scires id quod tu neminem sensisse dicebas, Sex. Aelium, legatio libera (cf. legati, Ep. I. 2 n.) undertaken on the pretext of performing a vow. — quae . . . vovissem, those vows which I had made for the preservation of the commonwealth. — dissolvere: for solvere. — lege Iulia: a law proposed by Cicero in his consulship and passed limited a legatio libera to one year. Caesar's lex Iulia was probably to the same effect; cf. Momm. St. R. II. 691. — introire exire liceat: as legate of Dolabella, Cicero's term of office would continue through Dolabella's proconsulship, i.e. five years, and Cicero would be at liberty to remain in Rome or away from the city as he pleased. On the asyndeton, cf. Intr. 94. — exire: sc. ex urbe as in Ep. I. 1. The ellipsis is colloquial. — βλάβσημα, ill-omened words.

LXXXIX. Tusculum (?), June, (?) 44 B.C.

possetne heres, etc., whether an heir could properly bring action for a theft committed before (he became the heir). — furti: the genitive to indicate the charge. — bene potus: cf. Intr. 90. — id caput, that chapter or section; so quoddam caput legis, Att. 3. 15. 6. — Sex Aelium (Paetum): consul in 198 B.C., an authority upon jurisprudence and civil law, often mentioned by Cicero, e.g. Brut. 78; Tusc. Disp. I. 18. His name is coupled with that of Manilius in de Or. I. 212 also. — M'. Manilius:

M'. Manilium, M. Brutum sensisse. Ego tamen Scaevolae et Testae adsentior.

XC. (Fam. 16. 21.)

CICERO F. TIRONI SVO DVLCISSIMO S.

Cum vehementer tabellarios expectarem cotidie, aliquando venerunt post diem quadragesimum et sextum quam a vobis discesserant. Quorum mihi fuit adventus exoptatissimus; nam cum maximam cepissem laetitiam ex humanissimi et carissimi patris epistula, tum vero iucundissimae tuae litterae cumulum mihi gaudi attulerunt. Itaque me iam non paenitebat inter-

cf. Ep. XXV. 2 n. — M. (Iunium) Brutum: an authority on civil law, upon which subject he composed three books. — Scaevolae: consul in 133 B.C., and frequently quoted by Cicero as a legal authority. — Testae: i.e. Trebatius.

XC. Athens, July–Oct., 44 B.C. On young Marcus, cf. Intr. 54. The young man had been pursuing his studies at Athens for about a year and a half, but he was fonder of the pleasures of life than of study, and the reports which came to the father from Leonides (cf. Att. 14. 16. 3; 15. 16 A.), under whose special care he had been put, were so unfavorable that Cicero had considered the advisability of going to Athens to investigate the matter. In view of this alarming possibility, the young man wrote this letter to Cicero's confidential secretary, Tiro. This and Fam. 16. 25 are the only letters extant from a rather large correspondence, known to the ancients, of the young Marcus with his father and with Tiro. Most of the stylistic peculiarities of the letter may be classified under the following categories: (1) extravagance of statement; (2) the use of Greek words; (3) a tendency to use certain expressions otherwise rarely found outside the writings of the elder Cicero; (4) colloquialisms.

On dulcissimo, cf. Intr. 88 a.

1. post . . . sextum: the distance from Rome to Athens could be covered in 21 days (cf. Intr. 64) under favorable circumstances. Possibly young Marcus had delayed in replying and wished to conceal that fact. The archaic form quadragesimum is sufficiently supported by tricensima (Fam. 10. 31. 5) and quadragesimo (Fam. 10. 33. 5). Cf. also C.I.L. I. 198. 21 and 199. 27. See also Crit. Append. — exoptatissimus: the generous use of superlatives in the first sentence illustrates well young Cicero's desire to please his correspondent.

capedinem scribendi fecisse, sed potius laetabar ; fructum enim magnum humanitatis tuae capiebam ex silentio mearum litterarum. Vehementer igitur gaudeo te meam sine dubitatione accepisse excusationem.

2 Gratos tibi optatosque esse qui de me rumores adferuntur non dubito, mi dulcissime Tiro, praestaboque et enitar ut in dies magis magisque haec nascens de me duplicetur opinio. Quare, quod polliceris te bucinatorem fore existimationis meae, firmo id constantique animo facias licet; tantum enim mihi dolorem cruciatumque attulerunt errata aetatis meae ut non solum animus a factis, sed aures quoque a commemoratione abhorreant. Cuius te sollicitudinis et doloris participem fuisse notum exploratumque est mihi, nec id mirum; nam cum omnia mea causa velles mihi successa, tum etiam tua; socium enim te meorum commo-

See also Intr. 96. — vehementer : cf. Intr. 90.

2. gratos optatosque : cf. firmo constantique, 2; dolorem cruciatumque, 2; sollicitudinis et doloris, 2; frugi severaque, 4; familiaribus et convictoribus, 5; and gratum acceptumque, 7; see also oro obsecro, Ep. L. 1 n. — rumores : more favorable reports mentioned in Tiro's letter, to which this epistle is an answer. — gratos . . . esse . . . non dubito : cf. Pollio, Fam. 10. 31. 5 illud me Cordubae pro contione dixisse nemo vocabit in dubium; Trebonius, Fam. 12. 16. 2 cui nos et caritate et amore tuum officium praestatueros non debes dubitare. Cf. also Ter. Hec. 326; Varr. Ling. Lat. 7. 107. The infin. after non dubito is not found in Cicero (cf., however, a scarcely parallel passage in Cic. de Fin. 3. 38). In all the cases cited the dependent verb precedes non dubito, and the writer in using the acc. and infin. has in mind a verb of thinking in general, and not the special phrase non dubito. When non dubito precedes, quin with the subj. is always used; cf. 7 of this letter. See also Schmalz, Ueber d. Sprachgebrauch d. Asinius Pollio, p. 88. — mi dulcissime Tiro : cf. mi Pomponi, Ep. X. n. and Intr. 88 a. — in dies magis magisque : for the strict classical expression in dies magis (cf. Cic. pro Mil. 25). — bucinatorem : apparently not used in the figurative sense elsewhere. — successa : Mendelssohn cites, as parallel to this unusual participle, custodibus discessis from Coelius Antipater and sole occaso from Q. Claudius. Schwabe conjectures successae (for successisse) with considerable probability. Cf. decesse, Ep. XIX. 2 n.

dorum sēper esse volui. Quoniam igitur tum ex me 3 doluisti, nunc ut duplicetur tuum ex me gaudium praestabo. Cratippo me scito non ut discipulum sed ut filium esse coniunctissimum; nam cum audio illum libenter, tum etiam propriam eius suavitatem vehementer amplector. Sum totos dies cum eo noctisque saepenumero partem; exoro enim ut mecum quam sae-pissime cenet. Hac introducta consuetudine saepe inscientibus nobis et cenantibus obrepit, sublataque severitate philosophiae humanissime nobiscum iocatur.
 Quare da operam ut hunc talem, tam iucundum, tam excellentem virum videas quam primum. Nam quid 4 ego de Bruttio dicam? Quem nullo tempore a me patior discedere, cuius cum frugi severaque est vita, tum etiam iucundissima convictio; non est enim seiunctus iocus a philologia et cotidiana συζητήσει. Huic ego locum in proximo conduxī et, ut possum, ex meis angustiis illius sustento tenuitatem. Praeterea decla- 5 mitare Graece apud Cassium institui; Latine autem apud Bruttium exerceri volo. Vtor familiaribus et cotidianis victoribus, quos secum Mytilenis Cratip-pus adduxit, hominibus et doctis et illi probatissimis.

3. ut duplicetur : for the classical acc. and infin. after praestare (cf. Cic. Tusc. Disp. 5. 29). The same construction is used by Marcellus, Fam. 4. 11. 2. Similarly the negative form of the dependent clause after praestare is expressed by ne with the subj. in the letters of Cicero's less careful correspondents; cf. Cael. Fam. 8. 10. 5; D.
 Brut. Ep. XCVII. 1; C. Cass. Fam.
 12. 13. 4. — Cratippo: a celebrated Peripatetic, and young Marcus's principal instructor in philosophy (cf. de Off. 1. 1).

4. Bruttio : see 5 n. — nullo tempore : for numquam; cf. hoc loco for hic, 7; hoc tempore for iam,
Att. 8. 12 c. 3. Such periphrastic expressions are common in Plautus and Terence. — in proximo : for the phrase cf. Ter. Heaut. 54;
Hec. 341. — ex meis angustiis :
 a pathetic hint at an increased allowance. The income of young Marcus was by no means a small one. Cf. Ep. LXXIV. 2 praestabo nec Bibulum, etc.

5. Cassium, Bruttium : teachers of elocution, not mentioned else-

Multum etiam mecum est Epicrates, princeps Atheniensium, et Leonides et horum ceteri similes. Τὰ μὲν 6 οὖν καθ' ἡμῶς τάδε. De Gorgia autem quod mihi scribis, erat quidem ille in cotidiana declamatione utilis, sed omnia postposui dummodo praeceptis patris parem; διαρρήδην enim scripserat ut eum dimitterem statim. Tergiversari nolui, ne mea nimia σπουδῇ 7 suspicionem ei aliquam importaret; deinde illud etiam mihi succurrebat, grave esse me de iudicio patris iudicare. Tuum tamen studium et consilium gratum acceptumque est mihi. Excusationem angustiarum tui temporis accipio; scio enim quam soleas esse occupatus. Emisse te praedium vehementer gaudeo, feliciterque tibi rem istam evenire cupio. Hoc loco me tibi gratulari noli mirari; eodem enim fere loco tu quoque emisse te fecisti me certiore. Habes: deponendae tibi sunt urbanitates; rusticus Romanus factus es. Quomodo ego mihi nunc ante oculos tuum iucundissimum conspectum propono? Videor enim videre ementem te rusticas res, cum vilico loquentem, in lacinia where. It is noticeable that both are Romans. — Epicrates: otherwise unknown. — Leonides: cf. introd. note. — τὰ μὲν οὖν, etc., that's the way things stand with me. The use of Greek words and phrases in this letter is noticeable, but not surprising in a letter from a student at Athens. Cf. Intr. 97.

6. Gorgia: an instructor whose influence had demoralized young Marcus, and whom the elder Cicero had evidently ordered his son to dismiss. — tergiversari: a common word in Cicero's writings, but rare in other authors. — σπουδῇ, esteem (for him). — importaret: a colloquial word borrowed from commercial language; cf. Naegelsbach, Stilistik,? p. 346. — succurrebat: for occurrebat; cf. succurret, Ep. LXXXVI. 4 n.

7. feliciterque . . . cupio: cf. Ep. LXXX. 2 n. — hoc loco, at this point (in my letter). Courtesy would have naturally called for an earlier reference to Tiro's purchase. — habes: used either absolutely or, as it was colloquially employed, of a telling blow in the arena, i.e. 'you are hit.' Cf. hoc igitur habebis, Ep. LXIX. 2 n. See also Verg. Aen. 12. 296; Plaut. Most. 715; Ter. And. 83, with note of Donatus. — mihi . . . ante servantem ex mensa secunda semina. Sed, quod ad rem pertinet, me tum tibi defuisse aequae ac tu doleo. Sed noli dubitare, mi Tiro, quin te sublevaturus sim, si modo fortuna me, praesertim cum sciam communem nobis emptum esse istum fundum. De mandatis, quod 8 tibi curae fuit, est mihi gratum; sed peto a te ut quam celerrime mihi librarius mittatur, maxime quidem Graecus; multum mihi enim eripitur operae in exscribendis hypomnematis. Tu velim in primis cures ut valeas, ut una συμφιλολογεῖν possimus. Anterum tibi commendo. Vale.

XCI. (Fam. 11. 27.)

M. CICERO MATIO S.

Nondum satis constitui molestiae plus an voluptatis attulerit mihi Trebatius noster, homo cum plenus oculos . . . propono: cf. mihi ante oculos, Ep. XIII. 3 n. — mensa secunda: when fruit was served.

8. de mandatis: cf. Intr. 91. The stereotyped character of the introductory phrase with de is shown here by its lack of influence upon the construction of the rest of the sentence. — hypomnematis: the dative and ablative plural of Greek nouns in -ma ends sometimes in -ibus, sometimes in -is, with a decided preference in classical Latin for the heteroclite ending -is, as though the noun were a feminine noun of the first declension or a neuter of the second. — Anterum: the tabellarius.

The good intentions of young Marcus stated so extravagantly here were serious; for a month or two before this letter was written

Trebonius, who was at Athens, wrote to Cicero (Fam. 12. 16. 1), vidi filium tuum deditum optimis studiis summaeque modestiae fama; . . . noli putare, mi Cicero, me hoc auribus tuis dare; nihil adulescente tuo atque adeo nostro . . . aut amabilius omnibus eis qui Athenis sunt est aut studiosius earum artium quas tu maxime amas, hoc est optimarum. It cannot be too keenly regretted that young Marcus makes no mention of Horace, who was of the same age and was pursuing his studies in Athens at this time.

XCI. Tusculum, Aug. 23–30, 44 B.C. C. Matius Calvena, to whom this is written, was probably a little younger than Cicero; cf. 2 n.; Ep. XCII. 5 n. In recognition of his accomplishments Cicero calls him doctissimus (Ep.

offici, tum utriusque nostrum amantissimus. Nam, cum in Tusculanum vesperi venissem, postridie ille ad me, nondum satis firmo corpore cum esset, mane venit. Quem cum obiurgarem quod parum valetudini parceret, tum ille nihil sibi longius fuisse quam ut me videret. 'Numquidnam,' inquam, 'novi?' Detulit ad me querelam tuam, de qua prius quam respondeo pauca
 2 proponam. Quantum memoria repetere praeterita possum, nemo est mihi te amicus antiquior; sed vetustas habet aliquid commune cum multis, amor non habet. Dilexi te quo die cognovi, meque a te diligi iudicavi. Tuus deinde discessus isque diuturnus, ambitio nostra et vitae dissimilitudo non est passa voluntates nostras consuetudine conglutinari; tuum tamen erga me animum agnovi multis annis ante bellum civile, cum Cae-

XXVIII. 2 and this letter, 8). Later in life Matius wrote a book upon gastronomy (Columella, 12. 4. 2). He belonged to that group of men who attached themselves closely to the fortunes of Caesar, but not, like many of his comrades, with the hope of personal gain. He followed Caesar out of pure friendship and admiration. When Caesar was killed, therefore, he found no common point of sympathy either with those who rejoiced in the death of a tyrant, as did Cicero, or with those who used Caesar's name to conjure with, as did Antony. His grief at Caesar's death and his superintendence of the public games in his name called forth unfriendly criticism from Cicero. The sorrow of Matius upon hearing this fact was disclosed to Cicero by their common friend Trebatius (cf. Ep. XXI. introd. note), who had made the acquaintance of Matius nine years before in Gaul (cf. Ep. XXVIII. 2), and led to the writing of this letter.

1. nihil sibi longius fuisse: i.e. 'nothing was more desired by him.' This is the meaning of the phrase when followed by quam ut or quam dum, but when followed by quam with the infin. it means 'nothing is more tiresome.' Cf. Antibarbarus s. v. longus. — querelam tuam: cf. introd. note.

2. vetustas: Cicero had apparently known Matius for twenty years or more; cf. next note. — tuus deinde discessus: on deinde cf. Intr. 85 b. The reference is to the absence of Matius from Rome at some time prior to Cicero's candidacy for the consulship; cf. ambitio nostra. — vitae dissimilitudo: Matius apparently never entered public life. — conglutinari: the metaphorical use of the word is frequent in Cicero.

sar esset in Gallia ; quod enim vehementer mihi utile esse putabas nec inutile ipsi Caesari, perfecisti ut ille me diligeret, coleret, haberet in suis. Multa praetereo quae temporibus illis inter nos familiarissime dicta, scripta, communicata sunt ; graviora enim consecuta sunt. Et initio belli civilis cum Brundisium versus 3 ires ad Caesarem, venisti ad me in Formianum. Primum hoc ipsum quanti, praesertim temporibus illis ! Deinde oblitum me putas consili sermonis humanitatis tuae ? Quibus rebus interesse memini Trebatium. Nec vero sum oblitus litterarum tuarum quas ad me misisti, cum Caesari obviam venisses in agro, ut arbitrator, Trebulano. Secutum illud tempus est cum 4 me ad Pompeium proficisci sive pudor meus coegit sive officium sive fortuna. Quod officium tuum, quod studium vel in absentem me vel in praesentis meos defuit ? Quem porro omnes mei et mihi et sibi te amiciosem iudicaverunt ? Veni Brundisium : oblitumne me putas qua celeritate, ut primum audieris, ad me Tarento advolaris, quae tua fuerit adsessio oratio confirmatio

3. Brundisium versus : cf. ad Alpis versus, Ep. XLVIII. 2 n. — venisti . . . in Formianum : sc. Mar. 19, 49 B.C. ; cf. Att. 9. 11. 2. Caesar himself entered Brundisium Mar. 18. — consili : Matius earnestly desired peace and without doubt encouraged Cicero in his efforts at mediation ; cf. Att. 9. 11. 2. — Trebulano : in Campania ; but Cicero's memory is very likely at fault, as he probably has in mind the messages which he received from Matius from Minturnae on Mar. 20 ; cf. Att. 9. 12. 1.

4. pudor meus . . . sive officium : cf. Intr. 30 (end) and Ep. LXV. 6. — praesentis meos : his family in Rome. — veni Brundisium : after the battle of Pharsalus. Cf. Intr. 32. The friendly offices of the Caesarian Matius in this moment of helplessness and loneliness would be especially prized. — adsessio, etc. : the rapidity of movement which substantives in -io lend to a narrative is nowhere better illustrated than in this passage (cf. Intr. 75). This rapidity of movement is further heightened by the asyndetical arrangement of many of the sentences and by the use of paratactical forms of expression ; for, as Andresen remarks, in three different instances in 4 and 5 temporal

5 animi mei fracti communium miseriarum metu? Tandem aliquando Romae esse coepimus. Quid defuit nostrae familiaritati? In maximis rebus quonam modo gererem me adversus Caesarem usus tuo consilio sum, in reliquis officio. Cui tu tribuisti, excepto Caesare, praeter me ut domum ventitares horasque multas saepe suavissimo sermone consumeres — tum cum etiam, si meministi, ut haec φιλοσοφούμενα scriberem tu me impulisti? Post Caesaris reditum quid tibi maiori curae fuit quam ut essem ego illi quam familiarissimus? Quod effeceras. Quorsum igitur haec oratio longior quam putaram? Quia sum admiratus te, qui haec nosse deberes, quicquam a me commissum quod esset alienum nostra amicitia credidisse; nam praeter haec quae commemoravi, quae testata sunt et illustria, habeo multa occultiora quae vix verbis exsequi possum. Omnia me tua delectant, sed maxime maxima cum fides in amicitia consilium gravitas constantia, tum lepos humanitas litterae.

7 Quapropter — redeo nunc ad querelam — ego te suffragium tulisse in illa lege primum non credidi; deinde, si credidissem, numquam id sine aliqua iusta causa existimarem te fecisse. Dignitas tua facit ut animadclauses stand as independent sentences. These three cases are: secutum illud tempus est; veni Brundisium, and tandem . . . coepimus. — communium miseriarum: sc. which would result from the overthrow of the state.

5. tandem aliquando: in Sept. 47 B.C.; cf. Intr. 33. — φιλοσοφούμενα: probably the Academica, the de Finibus, and the Tusculanae Disputationes, although there is no reference to Matius in any one of these works. — post Caesaris reditum: in Sept., 45 B.C., after the battle of Munda. Cf. Intr. 35. — maiori curae: cf. minori curae, Ep. XXV. 2 n. — quod effeceras: sc. before Caesar's return.

7. illa lege: probably the lex de permutatione provinciarum, whose passage Antony secured apparently in the summer of 44 B.C. (cf. Ruete, Die Correspondenz

vertatur quicquid facias; malevolentia autem hominum, ut nonnulla durius quam a te facta sint proferantur. Ea tu si non audis, quid dicam nescio. Equidem, si quando audio, tam defendo quam me scio a te contra iniquos meos solere defendi. Defensio autem est duplex: alia sunt quae liquido negare soleam, ut de isto ipso suffragio; alia quae defendam a te pie fieri et humane, ut de curatione ludorum. Sed te hominem 8 doctissimum non fugit, si Caesar rex fuerit — quod mihi quidem videtur, — in utramque partem de tuo officio disputari posse, vel in eam qua ego soleo uti, laudandam esse fidem et humanitatem tuam, qui amicum etiam mortuum diligas, vel in eam qua nonnulli utuntur, libertatem patriae vitae amici anteponendam. Ex his sermonibus utinam essent delatae ad te disputationes meae! Illa vero duo quae maxima sunt laudum tuarum, quis aut libentius quam ego commemorat aut saepius? te et non suscipiendi belli civilis gravissimum auctorem fuisse et moderandae victoriae, in quo qui mihi non adsentiretur inveni neminem. Quare habeo gratiam Trebatio familiari nostro qui mihi dedit causam harum litterarum, quibus nisi credideris, me omnis officii et humanitatis expertem iudicaris; quo nec mihi gravius quicquam potest esse nec te alienius.

Ciceros, 29–30; Schmidt, Kämpfe, 718). See Intr. 40. — malevolentia: sc. facit. — ea . . . audis: with reference to nonnulla. — liquido: a word used by Cicero only in his early orations and in his letters. See also Spengel to Ter. And. 729. — defendam: for defendendi causa dicam; cf. haec iocatus sum, Ep. LXXXVII. 4 n. — de curatione ludorum: games which Caesar had vowed at Pharsalus, and which were given in his name in July, 44 B.C. Cf. Ep. XCII. 6.

8. libertatem . . . anteponendam: this was probably Cicero's real view. Cf. Att. 15. 2. 3 ludorum . . . apparatus et Matus ac Postumius mihi procuratores non placent. Cf. also introd. note. — te . . . auctorem fuisse: cf. consili, 3 n.

XCII. (Fam. II. 28.)

MATIVS CICERONI S.

- 1 Magnam voluptatem ex tuis litteris cepi, quod quam speraram atque optaram habere te de me opinionem cognovi. De qua etsi non dubitabam, tamen, quia maximi aestimabam, ut incorrupta maneret laborabam. Conscius autem mihi eram nihil a me commissum esse quod boni cuiusquam offenderet animum. Eo minus credebam plurimis atque optimis artibus ornato tibi temere quicquam persuaderi potuisse, praesertim in quem mea propensa et perpetua fuisset atque esset benevolentia. Quod quoniam ut volui scio esse, respondebo criminibus quibus tu pro me, ut par erat tua singulari bonitate et amicitia nostra, saepe restitisti. Nota enim mihi sunt quae in me post Caesaris mortem contulerint: vitio mihi dant quod mortem hominis necessarii graviter fero atque eum quem dilexi perisse indignor; aiunt enim patriam amicitiae praeponendam esse, proinde ac si iam vicerint obitum eius

XCII. Rome, Aug. 23-30, 44 B.C. In the correspondence of Cicero perhaps there is no letter written more strongly, more skillfully constructed, and better calculated to accomplish its purpose than Cicero's letter to Matius. It is a work of art—but in that very fact lies its defect, and in that respect it is in contrast to the reply of Matius. The latter reveals that 'fides in amicitia,' which the name of Matius always suggests, while the sincerity of his statements and the simplicity of his style make this one of the most admirable of the non-Ciceronian letters. Upon Matius and this letter cf. Schmalz in Commentationes Wölflinianae (Lips. 1891), 269 ff.

1. speraram atque optaram: cf. Intr. 82. — quia aestimabam: quia for quod after laborabam is probably colloquial; cf. Ep. LXXVII. 2 n. — par . . . bonitate: par, like aequus, governs the abl. occasionally, especially in early Latin. Cf. Plaut. Pers. 834 et me haud par est. Böckel.

2. nota . . . sunt quae . . . contulerint: for the reference cf. Ep. XCI. 7 ea tu si, etc. — patriam . . . praeponendam esse: cf. Ep. XCI. 8. — proinde ac: cf. perinde ut, Ep. LXXVII. 1 n. — vicerint:

rei p. fuisse utilem. Sed non agam astute : fateor me ad istum gradum sapientiae non pervenisse; neque enim Caesarem in dissensione civili sum secutus, sed amicum. Quamquam re offendebar, tamen non deserui, neque bellum unquam civile aut etiam causam dissensionis probavi, quam etiam nascentem extinguere summe studui. Itaque in victoria hominis necessarii neque honoris neque pecuniae dulcedine sum captus, quibus praemiis reliqui, minus apud eum quam ego cum possent, immoderate sunt abusi. Atque etiam res familiaris mea lege Caesaris deminuta est, cuius beneficio plerique qui Caesaris morte laetantur remanserunt in civitate. Civibus victis ut parceretur aequae ac pro mea salute laboravi. Possum igitur, qui omnis ³ voluerim incolumis, eum a quo id impetratum est perisse non indignari, cum praesertim idem homines illi et invidiae et exitio fuerint? 'Plecteris ergo,' inquit, 'quoniam factum nostrum improbare audes.' O superbiam inauditam, alios in facinore gloriari, aliis ne dolere quidem impunito licere! At haec etiam

sc. dicendo; cf. 4, below. For the same use of vincere, cf. Plaut. Most. 95 profecto esse . . . vera vincam; Hor. Sat. 2. 3. 225 vincet enim stultos ratio insanire nepotes. — Caesarem: sc. the statesman or general. — summe: as an intensive adverb summe is found in Cicero's earlier writings (e.g. Div. in Caecil. 57), in the de Fin., and in his correspondence (e.g. Fam. 4. 7. 2). — in victoria: in with the abl. is used colloquially for a conditional or temporal clause. Here in victoria, etc., is equivalent to cum vicisset homo necessarius. — lege Caesaris: the lex Julia de modo credendi et possidendi intra Italiam, limiting the extent to which land could be mortgaged, etc. Cf. Lange, Röm. Alterth. III². 435. — remanserunt: their debts would otherwise have prevented them from doing this.

3. idem homines: M. Brutus and C. Cassius were among the former Pompeians, whose pardon and advancement by Caesar had probably excited the envy (invidiae) of those who had followed Caesar throughout the Civil War, and these two men joined the conspiracy to kill him (exitio). — illi: i.e. Caesari. — impunito: found only once elsewhere (Cic. de Finibus, 2. 59) in classical prose. — servis semper libera fuerunt, ut timerent gauderent dolerent suo potius quam alterius arbitrio; quae nunc, ut quidem isti dictitant 'libertatis auctores,' metu 4 nobis extorquere conantur. Sed nihil agunt. Nullius umquam periculi terroribus ab officio aut ab humanitate desciscam; numquam enim honestam mortem fugiendam, saepe etiam oppetendam putavi. Sed quid mihi suscensent si id opto, ut paeniteat eos sui facti? Cupio enim Caesaris mortem omnibus esse acerbam. 'At debeo pro civili parte rem p. velle salvam.' Id quidem me cupere, nisi et ante acta vita et reliqua mea spes tacente me probat, dicendo vincere non 5 postulo. Quare maiorem in modum te rogo ut rem potiolem oratione ducas mihique, si sentis expedire recte fieri, credas nullam communionem cum improbis esse posse. An quod adulescens praestiti, cum etiam errare cum excusatione possem, id nunc aetate praecipitata commutem ac me ipse retexam? Non faciam neque quod displiceat committam, praeterquam quod hominis mihi coniunctissimi ac viri amplissimi doleo gravem casum. Quod si aliter essem animatus, numquam quod facerem negarem, ne et in peccando improbus et in dissimulando timidus ac vanus existi-timerent: we should expect some verb like sperarent or cuperent before timerent. — libertatis auctores: Cicero repeatedly calls the conspirators liberatores, e.g. Att. 14. 12. 2; Phil. 1. 6.

4. pro civili parte, as a citizen. — reliqua mea spes, my hope for the future; corresponding to ante acta vita. — postulo, expect, as frequently in comedy. Cf. Lorenz on Plaut. Pseud. 829. Postulo with the simple infin. is very rare in Cicero; cf. Draeg. Hist. Syn. II³. 321 f.

5. maiorem in modum, the more earnestly. — si . . . fieri, if you think it well for the right to prevail. — aetate praecipitata: this would seem to indicate that Matus was at least fifty years old when this letter was written. See also Ep. XCI. 2 nn. — me ipse retexam, shall I undo the work of my life? (Watson). — quod displiceat: sc. cuiquam.

marer. 'At ludos quos Caesaris victoriae Caesar 6 adulescens fecit curavi.' At id ad privatum officium, non ad statum rei p. pertinet; quod tamen munus et hominis amicissimi memoriae atque honoribus praestare etiam mortui debui, et optimae spei adule-scienti ac dignissimo Caesare petenti negare non potui.
 Veni etiam consulis Antoni domum saepe salutandi 7 causa; ad quem qui me parum patriae amantem esse existimant rogandi quidem aliquid aut auferendi causa frequentis ventitare reperies. Sed quae haec est adrogantia, quod Caesar numquam interpellavit quin quibus vellem atque etiam quos ipse non diligebat tamen iis uterer, eos qui mihi amicum eriperunt carpendo me efficere conari ne quos velim diligam?
 Sed non vereor ne aut meae vitae modestia parum 8
 valitura sit in posterum contra falsos rumores, aut ne etiam ii qui me non amant propter meam in Caesarem constantiam non malint mei quam sui similis amicos habere. Mihi quidem si optata contingent, quod reli-quum est vitae in otio Rhodi degam; sin casus aliquis interpellarit, ita ero Romae ut recte fieri semper cupiam.
 Trebatio nostro magnas ago gratias, quod tuum erga me animum simplicem atque amicum aperuit, et quod eum quem semper libenter dilexi quo magis iure colere atque observare deberem fecit. Bene vale et me dilige.

6. ludos: cf. de curatione ludorum, Ep. XCI. 7 n.—Caesar adulescens: sc. Octavianus.

7. quae . . . adrogantia: explained by its appositive, the exclamatory infin. clause, eos . . . conari.—quod . . . interpellavit: a relative clause explained by quin . . . uterer. The entire expression quod . . . uterer is parenthetical, and sets Caesar's conduct in contrast to that of the libertatis auctores.

8. sui similis: for they had killed their friend Caesar.—bene vale: cf. Intr. 62. Bene vale is not used by Cicero. Cf., however, Plaut. As. 606; Curius, Fam. 7. 29.

XCIII. (Fam. 16. 26.)

QVINTVS TIRONI SVO P. S. D.

- 1 Verberavi te cogitationis tacito dumtaxat convicio, quod fasciculus alter ad me iam sine tuis litteris perlatum est. Non potes effugere huius culpae poenam te patrono: Marcus est adhibendus, isque diu et multis lucubrationibus commentata oratione vide ut
- 2 probare possit te non peccasse. Plane te rogo: sicut olim matrem nostram facere memini, quae lagonas etiam inanis obsignabat, ne dicerentur inanes aliquae fuisse quae furtim essent exsiccatae, sic tu, etiamsi quod scribas non habebis, scribito tamen ne furtum cessationis quaesivisse videaris; valde enim mi semper et vera et dulcia tuis epistulis nuntiantur. Ama nos et vale.

XCIV. (Fam. 9. 24.)

CICERO PAETO S. D.

- 1 Rufum istum amicum tuum, de quo iterum iam ad me scribis, adiuvarem quantum possem, etiamsi ab eo laesus

XCIII. In the country (?), autumn (?), 44 B.C. On Quintus, cf. Intr. 55; on Tiro, Intr. 57.

1. verberavi: in the figurative sense as in Plaut. M. G. 799. — fasciculus: a packet of letters. Cf. Att. 12. 53.

2. etiamsi . . . scribito tamen: cf. Att. 4. 8 B. 4 ubi nihil erit quod scribas, id ipsum scribito, and Plin. Ep. 1. 11. — mi: for mihī. This form (found also in Ep. I.XVII.

3) illustrates well the connection which often exists between archaism and colloquialism. In early Latin mi was in good use in all forms of literature; at the beginning of the classical period it had dropped out of use in formal literature, but had been retained in that literature which reproduced the doings and sayings of everyday life. This is the history of many forms and expressions; cf. Intr. 70.

XCIV. Rome, before the middle of Feb., 43 B.C. On Paetus, cf. Ep. LXI, introd. note.

1. Rufum: we know nothing else of him with certainty except essem, cum te tantopere viderem eius causa laborare; cum vero et ex tuis litteris et ex illius ad me missis intellegam et iudicem magnae curae ei salutem meam fuisse, non possum ei non amicus esse, neque solum tua commendatione, quae apud me, ut debet, valet plurimum, sed etiam voluntate ac iudicio meo. Volo enim te scire, mi Paete, initium mihi suspicionis et cautionis et diligentiae fuisse litteras tuas, quibus litteris congruentes fuerunt aliae postea multorum. Nam et Aquini et Fabrateriae consilia sunt inita de me quae te video inaudisse, et, quasi divinarent quam iis molestus essem futurus, nihil aliud egerunt nisi me ut opprimerent; quod ego non suspicans incautior fuisset, nisi a te admonitus essem. Quamobrem iste tuus amicus apud me commendatione non eget. Vtinam ea fortuna rei p. sit ut ille me virum gratissimum possit cognoscere! Sed haec hactenus. Te ad cenas itare desisse moleste fero; magna enim te delectatione et voluptate privasti; deinde etiam vereor — licet enim verum dicere — ne nescio quid illud quod solebas dediscas et obliviscare, cenulas facere. Nam, si tum cum habebas quos imitarere non multum proficiebas, quid nunc te facturum putem? Spurinna quidem, cum what is told us in this letter. — magnae curae . . . fuisse: his interest was shown in warning Cicero through Paetus of the plans forming against him. — aliae: sc. epistulae, or litterae in a plural sense; cf. litteris, Ep. XCIX. 1 n. — de me: Cicero is apparently referring here, as in several passages in his Philippics, to plans made against his life by Antony and Antony's friends. — molestus: he was attacking Antony vigorously in the senate, having already delivered eight or nine of his Philippics, while at the same time he was making every effort to mass the forces of the republic against him in the north.

2. quos imitarere: eg. Hirtius and Dolabella (cf. Ep. LXI. 7). Hirtius was in northern Italy, Dolabella in Syria. Cf. Intr. 42 f. — Spurinna: the celebrated haruspex who had warned Caesar to beware of the danger which threat-ei rem demonstrassem et vitam tuam superiorem exposuissem, magnum periculum summae rei p. demonstrabat, nisi ad superiorem consuetudinem tum cum Favonius flaret revertisses; hoc tempore ferri posse, 3 si forte tu frigus ferre non posses. Sed mehercule, mi Paete, extra iocum moneo te, quod pertinere ad beate vivendum arbitror, ut cum viris bonis iucundis amantibus tui vivas. Nihil est aptius vitae, nihil ad beate vivendum accommodatius. Nec id ad voluptatem refero, sed ad communitatem vitae atque victus remissionemque animorum quae maxime sermone efficitur familiari, qui est in conviviis dulcissimus, ut sapientius nostri quam Graeci: illi συμπόσια aut σύνδειπνα, id est computationes aut concenationes, nos 'convivia,' quod tum maxime simul vivitur. Vides ut te philosophando revocare coner ad cenas. Cura ut valeas. Id foris 4 cenitando facillime consequere. Sed cave, si me amas, existimes me quod iocosius scribam abiecissem curam rei p. Sic tibi, mi Paete, persuade, me dies et noctes nihil aliud agere, nihil curare, nisi ut mei cives salvi liberique sint. Nullum locum praetermitto monendi ened him until the Ides of March were past. — cum Favonius flaret: this wind began to blow during the second week in Feb. (cf. Plin. N. H. 2. 122; Colum. 11. 2. 15; Ovid, Fasti 2. 149). The reference helps to fix the date of the letter (cf. Ruete, 44).

3. mehercule: cf. mercule, Ep. XXV. 3 n. — mi Paete: the use of this, for Cicero, unusual form of address three times in this letter shows the earnestness of the writer, at least in the passages where the expression occurs. Cf. mi Pomponi, Ep. X. n. — extra iocum: elsewhere also remoto ioco. — illi, etc.: cf. de Sen. 45, hene enim maiores accubitionem epularum amicorum, quia vitae coniunctionem haberet, convivium nominaverunt, melius quam Graeci, qui hoc idem tum computationem, tum concenationem vocant.

4. si me amas: cf. Intr. 100. — sic . . . persuade: for hoc . . . persuade. Cf. sic, Ep. LXI. 5 n. — nullum locum: cf. nec vero ipse postea tempus ullum intermisi de re publica non cogitandi solum, sed etiam agendi, Fam. 10. 28. 2 (written about Feb. 2, 43 B.C.).

agendi providendi. Hoc denique animo sum ut, si in hac cura atque administratione vita mihi ponenda sit, praeclare actum mecum putem. Etiam atque etiam vale.

XCV. (Fam. 12. 5.)

CICERO CASSIO S.

Hiemem credo adhuc prohibuisse quo minus de te ¹ certum haberemus quid ageres maximeque ubi esses; loquebantur omnes tamen — credo, quod volebant — in Syria te esse, habere copias. Id autem eo facilius credebatur, quia simile veri videbatur. Brutus quidem noster egregiam laudem est consecutus; res enim tantas gessit tamque inopinatas ut eae cum per se gratae essent, tum ornatiores propter celeritatem. Quod si tu ea tenes quae putamus, magnis subsidiis fulta res p. est; a prima enim ora Graeciae usque ad Aegyptum optimorum civium imperiis muniti erimus et copiis. Quamquam, nisi me fallebat, res se sic ² habebat ut totius belli omne discrimen in D. Bruto

XCV. Rome, the latter half of Feb., 43 B.C.

1. prohibuisse quo minus . . . haberemus: the infin. is the regular classical construction with prohibere (cf. rem geri prohibuerat, 2), but ne and quo minus with the subj. sometimes follow, especially when prohibere is in the infinitive. — in Syria te esse: Cassius probably reached Syria at the close of the year 44 B.C. (cf. Fam. 12. 4. 2), and had ultimately at least eight legions at his disposal. — Brutus . . . noster: cf. Intr. 88 b (3). — a prima ora, from the hither shore (i.e. the shore beyond the Adriatic); cf. Philipp. 10. 10 externae nationes a prima ora Graeciae usque ad Aegyptum optimorum et fortissimorum civium imperiis et praesidiis tenentur. Cf. also ibid. 10. 14 tenet igitur res publica Macedoniam, tenet Illyricum, tuetur Graeciam. For a sketch of the successes of M. Brutus, cf. ibid. 10. 13–14. Cf. also Intr. 43.

2. fallebat: epistolary tense, as are the tenses of most of the verbs in this section. — discrimen: Cicero expresses the same opinion three months later in a letter to D. Brutus himself (Ep. XCIX. 2):

positum videretur, qui si, ut sperabamus, erupisset Mutina, nihil belli reliqui fore videbatur. Parvis omnino iam copiis obsidebatur, quod magno praesidio Bononiam tenebat Antonius; erat autem Claterna noster Hirtius, ad Forum Cornelium Caesar, uterque cum firmo exercitu, magnasque Romae Pansa copias ex dilectu Italiae compararat. Hiems adhuc rem geri prohibuerat. Hirtius nihil nisi considerate, ut mihi crebris litteris significat, acturus videbatur. Praeter Bononiam, Regium Lepidi, Parmam, totam Galliam tenebamus studiosissimam rei p. Tuos etiam clientis Transpadanos mirifice coniunctos cum causa habebamus. Erat firmissimus senatus exceptis consularibus, 3 ex quibus unus L. Caesar firmus est et rectus. Ser. Sulpici morte magnum praesidium amisimus. Reliqui partim inertes, partim improbi. Nonnulli invident eorum laudi quos in re p. probari vident. Populi vero Romani totiusque Italiae mira consensus est. Haec erant fere quae tibi nota esse vellem. Nunc res se sic habet: is bellum conferit qui Antonium oppresserit. — Claterna, etc.: all the places mentioned were on the via Aemilia, and, with the exception of Regium Lepidi and Parma, lay to the southeast of Mutina, in which town D. Brutus was besieged. — magno praesidio: Antony had somewhat more than six legions at his disposal. Cf. Philipp. 8. 25. — noster Hirtius: cf. Intr. 42. — Forum Cornelium: a rare form for Forum Corneli. — Caesar: i.e. Octavianus. — tuos clientis Transpadanos: this relationship does not seem to be mentioned elsewhere. — exceptis consularibus, etc.: cf. Fam. 10. 28.

3 (written about Feb. 2, 43 B.C.) habemus fortem senatum, consularis partim timidus, partim male sentientis; magnum damnum factum est in Servio; L. Caesar optime sentit, sed, quod avunculus (i.e. of Antony) est, non acerrimas dicit sententias. The leader of the moderate faction was Q. Fufius Calenus. Cf. Philipp. 8. 11; 10. 3; 12. 3 and 18.

3. Ser. Sulpici morte: cf. Ep. LXXV. introd. note. The senate, on Jan. 4, 43 B.C., had appointed a commission, composed of Ser. Sulpicius Rufus, L. Piso, and L. Philippus, to lay certain demands before Antony, but Sulpicius died before reaching Antony's headautem opto ut ab istis Orientis partibus virtutis tuae lumen eluceat. Vale.

XCVI. (Fam. 10. 12.)

CICERO PLANCO.

Etsi rei p. causa maxime gaudere debeo tantum ei r te praesidi, tantum opis attulisse extremis paene temporibus, tamen ita te victorem complectar re p. reciperata ut magnam partem mihi laetitiae tua dignitas adfert, quam et esse iam et futuram amplissimam intellego; cave enim putes ulla umquam litteras gratiores quam tuas in senatu esse recitatas, idque contigit cum meritorum tuorum in rem p. eximia quadam magnitudine, tum verborum sententiarumque gravitate. Quod mihi quidem minime novum, qui et quarters. — ab istis . . . eluceat : Cassius is compared to the sun in the east; cf. Philipp. 10. 12 ut quocumque venisset Brutus lux venisse quaedam . . . videretur; Hor. Sat. 1. 7. 24 solem Asiae Brutum appellat, stellasque salubris appellat comites.

XCVI. Rome, April 11, 43 B.C. L. Munatius Plancus was in 44 B.C. made governor of northern Gaul, with an army of four or five legions. Immediately after Antony's attack upon Cicero in Sept., 44 B.C., the long correspondence (Fam. 10. 1-24, excepting the 8th letter) between Cicero and Plancus begins, in which Cicero exhorts Plancus to remain true to the cause of the senate. His efforts seemed to have accomplished their purpose, as the senate had just received a letter from Plancus (Fam. 10. 8), avowing his fidelity.

The letter before us was written upon the arrival of this document, and in response to a letter from Plancus (Fam. 10. 7), requesting Cicero's assistance in securing a complimentary decree from the senate.

1. tantum . . . praesidi : in response to Fam. 10. 7. 2 quod spero, si me fortuna non sefellerit, me consecuturum, ut maximo praesidio rei publicae nos fuisse et nunc sentiant homines et in posterum memoria teneant. — ita te . . . complectar . . . ut . . . adfert : cf. ita te . . . videam ut . . . fecisti, Ep. XXVII. 1. In a similar way after moriar, peream, ne vivam the clause of condition stands in the indicative. Cf. Att. 16. 13 A. 1 ne sim salvus, si aliter scribo ac sentio (Böckel). — tuas . . . in senatu . . . recitatas : i.e. Fam. 10. 8; cf. introd. note. — quadam, te nossem et tuarum litterarum ad me missarum promissa meminissem et haberem a Furnio nostro tua penitus consilia cognita; sed senatui maiora visa sunt quam erant exspectata, non quo unquam de tua voluntate dubitasset, sed nec quantum facere posses nec quoad progredi velles exploratum satis habebat.

² Itaque, cum a. d. vii Idus Aprilis mane mihi tuas litteras M. Varisidius reddidisset easque legissem, incredibili gaudio sum elatus, cumque magna multitudo optimorum virorum et civium me de domo deduceret, feci continuo omnis participes meae voluptatis. In terim ad me venit Munatius noster, ut consuerat. At ego ei litteras tuas, nihildum enim sciebat; nam ad me primum Varisidius, idque sibi a te mandatum esse dicebat. Paulo post idem mihi Munatius eas litteras legendas dedit quas ipsi miserat, et eas quas publice.

³ Placuit nobis ut statim ad Cornutum pr. urb. litteras deferremus, qui, quod consules aberant, consulare munus sustinebat more maiorum. Senatus est continuo convocatus frequensque convenit propter famam atque expectationem tuarum litterarum. Recitatis litteris oblata religio Cornuto est pullariorum admonitu very; strengthening the force of the adj. — tuarum litterarum: i.e. Fam. 10. 4 and 7. — Furnio: the legate of Plancus. For the statement, cf. Fam. 10. 6. 1; 10. 10. 1. — exploratum satis habebat: cf. Intr. 84 d.

2. M. Varisidius: a Roman knight, who came from the camp of Plancus; cf. Fam. 10. 7. 1. — Munatius noster: T. Munatius Plancus, a relative of the person addressed. Cf. 5. — ego ei litteras tuas: sc. legendas dedi. — nihildum: the enclitic dum is appended in comedy frequently to imperatives and interjections, and occasionally to enumerative words like primum. Cf. Brix on Plaut. Trin. 98, and Lorenz on Most. 120. In prose it is found elsewhere only in the combinations nondum, vixdum, interdum, etiamdum, agedum, and agitedum. — eas quas publice: the letter to the senate, Fam. 10. 8.

3. quod consules aberant: cf. Intr. 42. — oblata . . . est, a religious difficulty presented itself. — pullariorum: in early times the non satis diligenter eum auspiciis operam dedisse, idque a nostro collegio comprobatum est; itaque res dilata est in posterum. Eo autem die magna mihi pro tua dignitate contentio cum Servilio, qui cum gratia effecisset ut sua sententia prima pronuntiaretur, frequens eum senatus reliquit et in alia omnia discessit, meaeque sententiae quae secunda pronuntiata erat cum frequenter adsentiretur senatus, rogatu Servili P. Titius intercessit. Res in posterum dilata. Venit 4 paratus Servilius, Iovi ipsi iniquus cuius in templo res agebatur. Hunc quemadmodum fregerim quantaque contentione Titium intercessorem abiecerim, ex aliorum te litteris malo cognoscere; unum hoc ex meis:

pullarii helped the magistrates in taking the auspicia ex tripudiis, but in Cicero's day this title was applied to those who assisted in taking other auspices also. Before a meeting of the senate, the presiding officer was required to sacrifice a victim and take the auspices (Willems, II. 173, n. 7). — eum . . . dedisse: depending on admonitu. — nostro collegio: sc. augurum. — Servilio: P. Servilius Vatia. Cf. Ep. LXXI. introd. note. — ut sua sententia prima pronuntiaretur: when a number of propositions had been made concerning a matter laid before the senate, the presiding officer decided upon the order in which they should be submitted to a vote, announced the first proposition to be voted on (sententiam primam pronuntiavit), and said to the senators, Qui hoc censetis, illuc transite; qui alia omnia, in hanc partem (Festus). In the division those favoring a proposition went to the side of the senate chamber on which the author of the motion sat, the opponents went to the other side. Cf. also Fam. 1. 2. 1 itaque, cum sententia prima Bibuli pronuntiata esset, ut tres legati regem reducerent, secunda Hortensi, ut tu sine exercitu reduceres, tertia Volcaci, ut Pompeius reduceret, postulatum est ut Bibuli sententia divideretur: . . . de tribus legatis frequentes ierunt in alia omnia (i.e. voted against the proposition, as in the case before us). Cf. also Fam. 8. 13. 2; Plin. Ep. 8. 14. 19. — P. Titius: tribune of the people. — res . . . dilata: a veto in the senate affected the validity of a particular vote only. At any time after a veto a subject could be considered and submitted to a vote again, and the motion, if supported by a majority of the senators, and not again vetoed, became a senatus consultum. A tribune sometimes used his power therefore merely to postpone action upon a subject. Cf. pro Sest. 74; Willems, II. 203.

4. Iovi ipsi iniquus: a popular expression; cf. the similar phrase, senatus gravior, constantior, amicioꝛ tuis laudibus esse non potuit quam tum fuit, nec vero tibi senatus amicioꝛ quam cuncta civitas. Mirabiliter enim populus R. universus et omnium generum ordinumque consensus ad liberandam rem p. conspiravit.

5 Perge igitur, ut agis, nomenque tuum commenda immortalitati, atque haec omnia quae habent speciem gloriae conlecta inanissimis splendoris insignibus contemne, brevia fucata caduca existima. Verum decus in virtute positum est quae maxime inlustratur magnis in rem p. meritis. Eam facultatem habes maximam, quam quoniam complexus es, tene. Perfice ut ne minus res p. tibi quam tu rei p. debeas. Me tuae dignitatis non modo fautorem sed etiam amplificatorem cognosces. Id cum rei p., quae mihi vitast mea carior, tum nostrae necessitudini debere me iudico. Atque in his curis quas contuli ad dignitatem tuam cepi magnam voluptatem, quod bene cognitam mihi T. Munati prudentiam et fidem magis etiam perspexi in eius incredibili erga te benevolentia et diligentia. III Idus Apr.

XCVII. (Fam. II. 9.)

D. BRVTVS S. D. M. CICERONI.

1 Pansa amisso quantum detrimenti res. p. acceperit non te praeterit. Nunc auctoritate et prudentia tua prospicias oportet ne inimici nostri consulibus sublatis dis hominibusque infestus. See also Otto, Sprichwörter, 179.

XCVII. From the camp at Regium, Apr. 29, 43 B.C. On Brutus, cf. Ep. I.LXXXVI. introd. note.

1. consulibus sublatis: Hirtius was killed on the field of battle, while Pansa was mortally wounded, and died two days later. Cf. Intr. 42. Had this catastrophe not occurred, Antony would probably have been crushed, and the course of events greatly changed, as the sperent se convalescere posse. Ego ne consistere possit in Italia Antonius dabo operam. Sequar eum confestim. Vtrumque me praestaturum spero ne aut Ventidius elabatur aut Antonius in Italia moretur. In primis rogo te ad hominem ventosissimum Lepidum mittas, ne bellum nobis redintegrare possit Antonio sibi coniuncto; nam de Pollione Asinio puto te perspicere quid facturus sit. Multae et bonae et firmae sunt legiones Lepidi et Asini. Neque haec idcirco tibi scribo, quod te non eadem animadvertere sciam, sed quod mihi persuasissimumst Lepidum recte facturum numquam, si forte vobis id de hoc dubium est. Plancum quoque confirmetis oro, quem spero pulso Antonio rei p. non defuturum. Si se Alpes Antonius jealousy which the senate excited in Octavius by conferring the chief command upon D. Brutus, led to his withdrawal from the campaign. — praestaturum . . . ne: a construction not found in Cicero (cf., however, praestare ut, de Or. 1. 44), but used by Caelius (Fam. 8. 10. 5), and Cassius (Fam. 12. 13. 4). — Ventidius: P. Ventidius Bassus with three legions joined Antony May 3 at Vada Sabatia. — ventosissimum: used metaphorically as in Cic. Philipp. 11. 17; Hor. Ep. 1. 8. 12. — Lepidum: M. Aemilius Lepidus, who had been consul in 46 B.C., was now governor of Gallia Narbonensis and Hispania Citerior. He became a member of the Second Triumvirate a few months later. — mittas: apparently Cicero complied with this request, as about three weeks later Lepidus wrote to him (Fam. 10. 34 and 34 A), describing the state of affairs in the North, adding quod ad bellum hoc attinet, nec senatus nec rei publicae deerimus

(Fam. 10. 34. 2). — de Pollione Asinio: C. Asinius Pollio was governor of Hispania Ulterior. True to that tendency which in after life kept him from an active participation in politics, he was at present holding aloof from the struggle about Mutina. Later he joined Antony. In after life he is known to us as the friend of Vergil and Horace, and the liberal patron of art and literature. Three of his letters to Cicero are extant (Fam. 10. 31–33). His poems and historical writings are lost. On the order of the nomen and cognomen, cf. Galli Canini, Ep. XIX. 4 n. On de, see Intr. 91. — quid facturus sit: a suspicion of the loyalty of Pollio to the senate is suggested. — multae . . . legiones: Lepidus had seven, Pollio three, legions.

2. persuasissimumst: cf. Intr. 82 (end). — id de hoc dubium est: a harsh expression, but the style of D. Brutus lacks polish. — si . . . traiecerit: cf. Plancus in Cic. Fam. 10. 9. 3 exercitum . . .

traiecerit, constitui praesidium in Alpibus conlocare et te de omni re facere certiolem. III K. Mai. ex castris, Regi.

XCVIII. (Fam. 10. 15.)

PLANCVS CICERONI.

- 1 His litteris scriptis, quae postea accidissent scire te ad rem p. putavi pertinere. Sedulitas mea, ut spero, et mihi et rei p. tulit fructum. Namque assiduis internuntiis cum Lepido egi ut ommissa omni contentione reconciliataque voluntate nostra communi consilio rei p. succurreret, se liberos urbemque pluris quam unum perditum abiectumque latronem putaret, obsequioque
2 meo, si ita faceret, ad omnis res abuteretur. Profeci. Itaque per Laterensem internuntium fidem mihi dedit

Rhodanum traieci; so in Caesar and frequently in Livy. Occasionally the preposition is repeated, e.g. Liv. 21. 26. 6 omnibus ferme suis trans Rhodanum traiectis. More frequently traicere is followed simply by the acc. of the thing crossed.—Regi: i.e. Regium Lepidi; cf. Ep. XCV. 2.

XCVIII. Gallia Narbonensis, about May 12, 43 B.C. The course of events immediately after the defeat of Antony near Mutina was as follows (cf. Mendelssohn, 458, n. 3): on April 22 Antony retired from the vicinity of Mutina, and May 3 he and Ventidius Bassus (Ep. XCVII. 1) formed a junction at Vada Sabatia; on May 8 L. Antonius, with the cavalry and a few cohorts, reached Forum Iuli in Gallia Narbonensis, and on the 15th M. Antonius came to the same place. As for D. Brutus, April 24 he left Mutina, and came April 25 to Regium, where he remained up to April 29. He reached Dertona May 5. Plancus was at Cularo, about 350 Roman miles from Mutina. After hearing of Antony's defeat, and getting a favorable reply to certain proposals which he had made to Lepidus, he crossed the Isara May 12, and sent his brother forward to intercept L. Antonius.

1. his litteris scriptis: i.e. Fam. 10. 11, which was sent by the same messenger as this letter.—cum Lepido egi: cf. cum hoc Pompeius egit, Ep. VIII. 2.—abuteretur, make full use of; as in Verr. ii. 1. 25 nisi omni tempore, quod mihi lege concessum est, abusus ero.

2. Laterensem: M. Juventius Laterensis, a firm adherent of the constitutional party, who a few weeks later committed suicide in consequence of his failure to keep Lepidus loyal to the senatorial cause (Vell. Paterc. 2. 63. 2;

se Antonium, si prohibere provincia sua non potuisset, bello persecuturum, me ut venire[m] copiasque coniungerem rogavit, eoque magis, quod et Antonius ab equitatu firmus esse dicebatur et Lepidus ne mediocre[m] quidem equitatum habebat; nam etiam ex paucitate eius non multis ante diebus decem qui optimi fuerant ad me transierunt. Quibus rebus ego cognitis cunctatus non sum. In cursu bonorum consiliorum Lepidum adiuvandum putavi. Adventus meus quid 3 profecturus esset vidi, vel quod equitatu meo persequi atque opprimere equitatum eius possem, vel quod exercitus Lepidi eam partem quae corrupta est et ab re p. alienata et corrigere et coercere praesentia mei exercitus possem. Itaque in Isara flumine maximo quod in finibus est Allobrogum ponte uno die facto exercitum a. d. iv Idus Mai. traduxi. Cum vero mihi nuntiatum esset L. Antonium praemissum cum equitibus et cohortibus ad Forum Iuli venisse, fratrem cum equitum quattuor milibus ut occurreret ei misi a. d. v Idus Mai. Ipse maximis itineribus cum iv legionibus expeditis et reliquo equitatu subsequar. Si nos medio- 4 cris modo fortuna rei p. adiuverit, et audaciae perditorum et nostrae sollicitudinis hic finem reperiemus; quod si latro praecognito nostro adventu rursus in Italiam se recipere coeperit, Bruti erit officium Planc. Fam. 10. 23. 4). — provincia sua: Antony did enter Gallia Narbonensis. Cf. introd. note. — ab equitatu firmus: cf. ab amicis, Ep. I. 2 n. — decem: Schelle conjectures sescenti with probability.

3. eius: i.e. of Antony. — eam partem: probably the celebrated tenth legion. Cf. Fam. 10. 11. 2.

— a. d. iv. Idus Mai.: the bridge was built a. d. v. Idus Mai.; the cavalry under the brother of Plancus was sent across on the evening of that day, and the main army crossed the next day (a. d. iv. Idus Mai). Cf. Ruete, 51.

4. in Italiam . . . coeperit: for the forecast which D. Brutus made of the movements of Antony, cf.

occurrere ei, cui scio nec consilium nec animum defuturum. Ego tamen, si id acciderit, fratrem cum equitatu mittam qui sequatur, Italiam a vastatione defendat. Fac valeas meque mutuo diligas.

XCIX. (Fam. II. 12.)

M. CICERO S. D. D. BRVTO IMP. COS. DES.

1 Tres uno die a te accepi epistulas : unam brevem, quam Flacco Volumnio dederas, duas pleniores, quarum alteram tabellarius T. Vibi attulit, alteram ad me misit Lupus. Ex tuis litteris et ex Graecei oratione non modo non restinctum bellum sed etiam inflammatum videtur. Non dubito autem pro tua singulari prudentia quin perspicias, si aliquid firmitatis nactus sit Antonius, omnia tua illa praeclara in rem p. merita ad

Fam. II. 10. 4 (written May 5). The general plan outlined in this letter was never carried out (cf. Fam. 10. 18).

XCIX. Rome, about May 13, 43 B.C. For the movements of D. Brutus after Antony's defeat near Mutina, cf. Ep. XCVIII. introd. note.

1. tres . . . epistulas: sc. Fam. II. 9. 10. and II, written April 29, May 5, and May 6 respectively. — Flacco Volumnio, T. Vibi, Graecei: little more is known of these men than we gather from this letter. — Lupus: probably P. Rutilius Lupus, who was praetor in 49 B.C., and was probably at this time the legate of D. Brutus, in whose letters he is frequently mentioned. — litteris: apparently in a plural sense here, as several times in Cicero, e.g. accipio excusationem tuam, qua usus es, cur saepius ad me litteras uno exemplo (of the same tenor) dedisses, Fam. 4. 4. 1; raras tuas quidem — fortasse enim non perferuntur, — sed suaves accipio litteras, Fam. 2. 13. 1. Cf. also Ep. XI. 1. In strict usage litterae has always the singular meaning, unless the distributive adjective is added to it, as binas a te accepi litteras, Fam. 4. 14. 1. Cicero himself called attention to this fact; cf. Servius ad Verg. Aen. 8. 168: Cicero per epistulam culpât filium, dicens male eum dixisse 'direxi litteras duas,' cum litterae, quotiens epistulam significant, numeri tantum pluralis sint. — oratione, words; cf. Epp. XXXII. 4; XCII. 5. — inflammatum: cf. Fam. II. 10. 3 revertor nunc ad Antonium, qui ex fuga cum parvulam manum pediditum haberet inermium, ergastula solvendo

nihilum esse ventura; ita enim Romam erat nuntiatum, ita persuasum omnibus, cum paucis inermis, perterritis metu, fracto animo fugisse Antonium. Qui si ita se ² habet ut, quemadmodum audiebam de Graecio, configi cum eo sine periculo non possit, non ille mihi fugisse a Mutina videtur, sed locum belli gerendi mutasse. Itaque homines alii facti sunt: nonnulli etiam queruntur quod persecuti non sitis; opprimi potuisse si celeritas adhibita esset existimant. Omnino est hoc populi maximeque nostri, in eo potissimum abuti libertate per quem eam consecutus sit. Sed tamen providendumst ne quae iusta querela esse possit. Res se sic habet: is bellum confecerit qui Antonium oppresserit. Hoc quam vim habeat te existimare malo quam me apertius scribere.

omneque genus hominum abripiedo satis magnum numerum videtur effecisse; hoc accessit manus Ventidi; and Fam. 11. 11. 1 contains the news that Antony is advancing to meet Lepidus, and has sent proposals of alliance to Pollio and to Plancus. — inermis: from an archaic nominative inermus. Cicero uses both forms; cf. e.g. inermem, Fam. 12. 10. 3.

2. audiebam de: audio ex or ab is much more usual; cf. Att. 16. 7. 8. — alii facti sunt: this meaning of alius, which comes near that of diversus, belongs to colloquial Latin; cf. Plaut. Trin. 160 pro di immortales, verbis paucis quam cito | alium fecisti me: alius ad te veneram (Böckel). — in eo, in his case or in their treatment of him. — abuti: explanatory of hoc. — libertate, freedom of speech; as repeated in eam, however, it means freedom in its widest sense. — providendumst: cf. persuasissimumst, Ep. XCVII. 2 n. — res se sic habet: a stereotyped introductory phrase, and therefore without influence upon the construction of the following sentence. — is bellum confecerit: the same opinion is expressed in nearly the same words in Fam. 10. 13. 2; 19. 2. — hoc quam vim habeat: Cicero is probably hinting at the possible disloyalty of Lepidus, Pollio, and Plancus. It is necessary to crush Antony before any one of these men goes over to Antony's side. It is noticeable that although Brutus had written to Cicero pretty plainly of his suspicions of Lepidus in particular (cf. Ep. XCVII. 1), Cicero makes no reply upon this point, although he evidently shares the distrust which was felt by Brutus.

C. (Fam. 10. 24.)

PLANCVS IMP. COS. DES. S. D. CICERONI.

1 Facere non possum quin in singulas res meritaque tua tibi gratias agam, sed mehercules facio cum pudore; neque enim tanta necessitudo, quantam tu mihi tecum esse voluisti, desiderare videtur gratiarum actionem, neque ego libenter pro maximis tuis beneficiis tam vili munere defungor orationis, et malo praesens observantia indulgentia adsiduitate memorem me tibi probare. Quod si mihi vita contigerit, omnis gratas amicitias atque etiam pias propinquitates in tua observantia indulgentia adsiduitate vincam; amor enim tuus ac iudicium de me utrum mihi plus dignitatis in perpetuum an voluptatis cotidie sit adlaturus, non facile dixerim.

C. In camp, July 28, 43 B.C. On May 29, Lepidus, forced by his soldiers, as he claimed in his letter to the senate (Fam. 10. 35; cf. also 10. 21. 4), joined his forces with those of Antony at Pons Argenteus, and June 30 was declared an hostis by the senate (Fam. 12. 10. 1). Plancus had not carried out the plan of campaign against Antony, which he had outlined in a previous letter (Ep. XCVIII.), but, after the union of the forces of Antony and Lepidus, recrossed the Isara to wait for D. Brutus, who probably joined him June 12 at Cularo. Octavius, who was slighted by the transfer of Pansa's troops to D. Brutus, pursued a policy of inaction. This is the last extant letter in Cicero's correspondence. Cf. Intr. 65.

1. in singulas res: for ob singulas res or pro singulis rebus. — mehercules: the form preferred by Plancus. Cf. Fam. 10. 11. 3; 18. 3; 23. 1; 23. 7. For Cicero's usage, cf. mercule, Ep. XXV. 3 n. — gratiarum actionem: cf. quamquam gratiarum actionem a te non desiderabam, cum te re ipsa atque animo scirem esse gratissimum, tamen (fatendum est enim) fuit ea mihi periucunda (Cicero to Plancus, Fam. 10. 19. 1). — amicitias . . . propinquitates: for amicos . . . propinquos. The use of an abstract for a concrete noun seems to be especially common in the case of words expressing an emotion or a state of the mind. Cf. Draeg. Hist. Syn. I². 22-24. — tua observantia: the objective genitive tui would be more regular. — adlaturus: agreeing in gender with amor, as iudicium de me merely expresses one of the means through which the amor found expression.

De militum commodis fuit tibi curae; quos ego non ² potentiae meae causa — nihil enim me non salutariter cogitare scio — ornari volui a senatu, sed primum quod ita meritos iudicabam, deinde quod ad omnis casus coniunctiores rei p. esse volebam, novissime ut ab omni omnium sollicitatione aversos eos talis vobis praestare possem quales adhuc fuerunt. Nos adhuc hic ³ omnia integra sustinuimus; quod consilium nostrum, etsi quanta sit aviditas hominum non sine causa capitalis victoriae scio, tamen vobis probari spero. Non enim, si quid in his exercitibus sit offensum, magna subsidia res p. habet expedita quibus subito impetu ac latrocinio parricidarum resistat. Copias vero nostras notas tibi esse arbitror. In castris meis legiones sunt veteranae tres, tironum, vel luculentissima ex omnibus, una; in castris Bruti una veterana legio, altera bima, octo tironum. Ita universus exercitus numero am-

2. de . . . commodis : a commission of ten was appointed by the senate to divide lands among the veterans of D. Brutus and Octavius (cf. Fam. 11. 21. 2, 5), and probably the troops of Plancus were similarly favored. Cicero apparently proposed the measure and was a member of the commission. On de, cf. Intr. 91 and Ep. XC. 8 n. — novissime : cf. novissima, Ep. LXXXVI. 3 n. — omni omnium : the so-called figura etymologica, of which one of the most striking cases is optumo optume optumam operam das, Plaut. Amph. 278; cf. also occidione occisum, Ep. XXXIV. 7 n. Combinations of various forms of omnis are special favorites.

3. quanta sit . . . scio, I know how great an eagerness people feel for a decisive victory. See Crit.

Append. — hominum . . . victoriae : a subjective and an objective genitive depending upon aviditas. — impetu : commonly regarded as a dative. For such contract forms, cf. Neue, Formenlehre d. lat. Sprache I². pp. 356–358. — parricidarum : used by Plancus here, as it is used in Fam. 10. 23. 5 of the followers of Antony. It is the epithet which Antony applied with special fondness to Caesar's assassins. Cf. Cicero's words to Cassius (Fam. 12. 3. 1) : primum in statua quam posuit in rostris inscripsit PARENTI OPTIME MERITO ut non modo sicarii sed iam etiam parricidae iudicemini. Cf. also Val. Max. 6. 4. 5 M. Brutus suarum prius virtutum quam patriae parentis parricida. The same epithet is applied by Sallust to Catiline's associates:

plissimus est, firmitate exiguus; quantum autem in acie tironi sit committendum nimium saepe expertum
 4 habemus. Ad hoc robur nostrorum exercituum sive Africanus exercitus, qui est veteranus, sive Caesaris accessisset, aequo animo summam rem p. in discrimen deduceremus. Aliquanto autem propius esse, quod ad Caesarem attinet, videbamus. Nihil destititum litteris hortari, neque ille intermisit adfirmare se sine mora venire, cum interim aversum illum ab hac cogitatione ad alia consilia video se contulisse. Ego tamen ad eum Furnium nostrum cum mandatis litterisque misi, si quid forte proficere posset.
 5 Scis tu, mi Cicero, quod ad Caesaris amorem attinet, societatem mihi esse tecum, vel quod in familiaritate Caesaris vivo illo iam tueri eum et diligere fuit mihi necesse, vel quod ipse, quoad ego nosse potui, moderatissimi atque humanissimi fuit sensus, vel quod ex tam insigni amicitia mea atque Caesaris hunc fili loco et cf. Sall. Cat. 14. 3; 51. 25.—nimium saepe: in the war between Caesar and Pompey, the Pompeian forces were made up to a great extent of recruits, while the Caesarian troops had been seasoned by campaigns in Gaul. Cf. Ep. XLIV. 2; Att. 7. 13 A. 2, also Caes. B. C. 3. 4.—expertum habemus: for expertus sumus; cf. Intr. 84 d.

4. Africanus exercitus: two legions under the command of Q. Cornificius, governor of Africa.—propius, etc.: i.e. 'that success was easier of accomplishment (lit., nearer) with Caesar's support than with that of the African army.' The phrase quod . . . attinet seems very awkward, but is perhaps not objectionable enough to warrant a textual change in a letter from Plancus. See Crit. Append.—venire: the present to indicate that he will arrive in the immediate future. This usage is found mainly with the first person, and with the infin. in the orat. obl. representing the first person (Andresen).—ad alia consilia: i.e. his candidacy for the consulship. Cf. Intr. 42 (end).—Furnium nostrum: cf. Ep. XLVII. n.

5. mi Cicero: cf. mi Pomponi, Ep. X. n.—in familiaritate Caesaris: cf. in victoria, Ep. XCII. 2 n. The reference is to Julius Caesar here, to Octavius above (ad Caesaris amorem).—quoad . . . potui: Plancus can scarcely have known the nineteen-year-old illius et vestro iudicio substitutum non proinde habere turpe mihi videtur. Sed — quicquid tibi scribo dolenter mehercules magis quam inimice facio — quod vivit Antonius hodie, quod Lepidus una est, quod exercitus non contemnendos habent, quod sperant, quod audent, omne Caesari acceptum referre possunt. Neque ego superiora repetam; sed ex eo tempore quo ipse mihi professus est se venire, si venire voluisset, aut oppressum iam bellum esset aut in aversissimam illis Hispaniam cum detrimento eorum maximo extrusum. Quae mens eum aut quorum consilia a tanta gloria, sibi vero etiam necessaria ac salutari, avocarit et ad cogitationem consulatus bimestris summo cum terrore hominum et insulsa cum efflagitatione transtulerit expectare non possum. Multum in hac re mihi videntur 7 necessarii eius et rei p. et ipsius causa proficere posse, Octavius personally.—illius et vestro iudicio: Julius Caesar had in his will made Octavius his adopted son. vestro refers by anticipation to the action of the comitia curiata in confirming the adoption. The confirmation had not yet taken place.

6. acceptum referre, to set down to the credit of. Cf. Ep. XXXVII. 2 n. — professus est . . . venire: cf. venire, 4 n. — aversissimam illis Hispaniam: Spain, as the former stronghold of the Pompeians, would naturally be unfriendly to the followers of Antony. For the reason why Octavius hesitated, cf. Intr. 42. See also Crit. Append. — quorum consilia: cf. Ep. ad Brut. 1. 10. 3. — necessaria: Octavius and Antony were rival representatives of the Caesarian tradition and interests. Both had felt the truth of that fact the year before at Rome, so that the destruction of Antony seemed necessary to the full success of Octavius. — bimestris: Octavius was actually elected consul Aug. 19, but Plancus could scarcely expect that he would be elected so soon, and, in general, is speaking sarcastically of the short-lived honor. Manutius and O. E. Schmidt would, however, read quinquemestris. — efflagitatione: the centurion Cornelius, at the head of a deputation of the troops of Octavius, went to Rome to demand the consulship for their leader; cf. Suet. Aug. 26. — expectare: stronger than putare. Cf. demirror, Ep. XXVI. 4 n., and see Thielmann, de Sermonis Proprietatibus, etc., 39.

7. necessarii eius: especially his stepfather L. Philippus and his brother-in-law C. Claudius plurimum, ut puto, tu quoque, cuius ille tanta merita habet quanta nemo praeter me; numquam enim obliviscar maxima ac plurima me tibi debere. De his rebus ut exigeret cum eo Furnio mandavi. Quod si quantam debeo habuero apud eum auctoritatem, pluri-8 mum ipsum iuvero. Nos interea duriore condicione bellum sustinemus, quod neque expeditissimam dimica-tionem putamus neque tamen refugiendo commissuri sumus ut maius detrimentum res p. accipere possit.

Quod si aut Caesar se respexerit aut Africanæ legi-ones celeriter venerint, securos vos ab hac parte red-demus. Tu, ut instituisti, me diligas rogo proprieque tuum esse tibi persuadeas. v K. Sext. ex castris.

Marcellus. — tu quoque : when Octavius came to Rome after Julius Caesar's death, he showed great deference for Cicero ; cf. Att. 14. 11. 2 modo venit Octavius, et quidem in proximam villam Philippi, mihi totus deditus ; 14. 12. 2 nobiscum hic perhonorifice et amice Octavius, and Ep. ad Brut. 1. 18. 3 (written in 43 B.C.) cum me pro adulescentulo ac paene puero res publica accepisset vadem. — tanta merita : by his many complimentary references to Octavius in the senate, and notably by his action in securing a senatus consultum authorizing a thanksgiving of fifty days in honor of the victory gained by Octavius, Hirtius, and Pansa near Forum Gallorum. Cf. Philipp. 5. 45 ; 14. 29.

8. bellum sustinemus : an unusual expression. Cf. sustinere, Antibarbarus, and see the similar phrase in 3, nos adhuc, etc. — se respexerit, shall be mindful of his real interests. For this phrase, cf. Plaut. Pseud. 612 ; Ter. Heaut. 70 ; 919. — ex castris : at Cularo probably.

CRITICAL APPENDIX.

IN this Appendix many of the most important variations in the text of this edition from that of the Medicean codices (M. 49, 9 and 49, 18) are indicated, and the most probable conjectures for some of the doubtful passages are presented. The source of many of these conjectures has not been indicated on account of the difficulty of tracing them to their authors. Mere orthographical variations have not been noted. For the benefit of those who may wish to make a more careful study of a portion of the text, the critical notes have been made somewhat fuller for the first forty-three letters than for the rest. A complete apparatus criticus of the Epistulae ad familiares may be found in Mendelssohn's edition. The adnotatio critica of C. F. W. Müller contains critical notes on the Epistulae ad Quintum fratrem. For the Epistulae ad Atticum the student may be referred to the editions of Orelli, Baier and Kayser, Wesenberg, and Tyrrell. These editions contain critical notes on the other letters of Cicero also. The other principal sources of information are C. A. Lehmann, Quaestiones Tullianae, and De Ciceronis ad Atticum epistulis recensendis et emendandis, Th. Schiche, Zu Ciceros Briefen an Atticus, P. Starker, Symbolae Criticae ad M. Tullii Ciceronis epistulas, O. Streicher, De Ciceronis epistolis ad familiares emendandis, and O. E. Schmidt's edition of Bks. XII and XIII of the Epistulae ad Atticum.

ABBREVIATIONS¹

FOR THE Epist. ad Fam.

Bks. I-VIII.

M = Mediceus 49, 9 of the 9th century	} Ω
G = Harleianus 2773 of the 12th century
R = Parisinus 17812 of the 12th century

¹ For a brief statement concerning these mss. cf. Intr. 68.

- Mc = Corrections in M of the 10th to the 12th century
 Mr = " " after 1389
 P = Mediceus 49, 7 copied from M in 1389
 I = Fragmentum Hamburgense
 S = " Freierianum
 T = " Taurinense

Bks. IX-XVI.

- M = Mediceus 49, 9 of the 9th century
 D = Palatinus 598 of the 15th or 16th century } Ψ
 H = Harleianus 2682 of the 11th century }
 F = Erfurtensis now Berolinensis of the 12th or 13th century
 Mc = Corrections in M of the 10th to the 12th century
 Mr = " " after 1389
 P = Mediceus 49, 7 copied from M in 1389
 Cratander = Editio Cratandrina (1528)
 Σ = late mss. and old editions

FOR THE Epist. ad Att. AND ad Q. fr.

- M = Mediceus 49, 18 of the 14th century
 W = Viceburgiensis of the 11th century
 Cratander = Editio Cratandrina (1528)
 Ien. = Editio Iensoniana (Venice, 1470)
 lib. = libri i.e. the consensus of the best mss.
 M¹ = Mediceus 49, 18 corrected by first hand M² = " " " second hand
 marg. = Mediceus 49, 18 corrected on the margin

EP. I (Att. I. 1)

- 1 opinio est opinio se M
 praepropera propra M¹ putent. Aquilium potentia qui illum M
 iuravit curavit M Aufidio M Auli filio commonly printed.
 2 qui sic inopes et ab amicis omitted by M¹, added by M² ἀδύνατον ἄτνατον M
 quae tum . . . accuderim Ma-

- nutius modified by Boot quae cum erit absoluta sane facile eum libenter nunc ceteri con-suli acciderim M
 3 nunc cognosce rem Madvig
nunc cognoscere M
 4 amici animum M
 5 eius ἀνάθημα Schütz elii ana- tha M (as read by Orelli) eint anathma M (as read by Baiter) ἡλίου ἀνάθημα
 Cratander

EP. II (Att. 1. 2)

- 1 te tam te etiam M
te iam Boot
meis ad te rationibus meis detractionibus M a te rationibus marg.

EPIST. III (Fam. 5. 7)

- 1 quantam Σ quam Ω
 2 conciliatura conciliatur MR
 3 verebare GR verere M ea quae nos eaque nos M maiori maiore M maiori Σ maiori Mendelssohn
iam me Klotz ame M

EPIST. IV (Fam. 7. 23)

Fadio Fabio Ω

- 1 postulare postulant Ω
 2 sumpsisti sumpsisse Ω erat GR erant M
 3 habebo habeo Ω
exhedria exhadria M exadria
 GR
 4 mandaram Ernesti mandabam
 M sorore eam sororem eam M sorore mea G sororem meam R
faciam ut scias. Tu faciamus scias tu MG faciamus si es tu R

EPIST. V (Att. 1. 16)

- 2 pugnavitque pugnavique M¹
notum novum M¹
 3 a me tamen M a me iam
 Madvig
homines nequissimos marg.
homines quis summos M non . . . aerati Muretus and Tyrrell as modified by editor non tam aerati quam ut ap-pellantur aerarii M. See Commentary.
fugare effugare M maerentes merentis M. See Commentary.

- 4 impetrabat Lambinus impe- trarat M
advocatorum advocatorem M
iurare iurarent M¹
 5 praesidio prescio M
 ἔσπερε ΕΣΙΤΕ M ὑὸν ΠΤΝ M
 πρῶτον . . . ἔμπερε ΠΡΑΤΟΝ
 ΠΕΠΤΗΣΕ M Calvum . . . illum M Calvum
ἐξαπινάτων illum laudato-rem meum Boot (doubt-fully)
 6 delere et, quod M² deleret
quod M¹
 7 plane plena M¹
 8 in ea mea M
aliis legi M ab aliis legi Madvig, but see Commentary.
 9 aut metuendo ignavissimi
 inserted by Lambinus.
 10 quid huic M quid hoc Wesenberg and others.
putes, inquam putes quam M mihī . . . crediderunt omitted
 M¹
 11 hirudo trudo M
iuvenes tuens M
 12 expectatio expectatio in M deterioris M Doterionis (a nickname of one of the two actors employed as agents by Philip) Bosius δευτερεῦοντος Seyffert
cuius domi Manutius cuius modi M
 13 insimulatum lege Aelia H.
 A. J. Munro insimul cum
lege alia M¹. See Commentary.
fabam mimum M Famam
mimum Orelli fabae hulum
 Hofmann mimum Wesenberg fabae μνοῦν Madvig fabae midam Tyrrell. See Commentary.
non flocci facteon Cratander
none loci facteon M 15 Lucullis Bosius Lucullus M
poëma poetam M¹
 17 in loco inlo M

EP. VI (Att. 1. 17)

- 1 iam ante tam ante M cum cuperem concuperem M¹ declararunt Wesenberg de- clarant M
- 4 ecquid Manutius et quid M
- 5 provincialium provinciarum
M amore more M¹
discessi discessu M¹
- 6 quin qui M in (before ipsis) omitted M non publicae omitted M
- 8 ob iudicandum accepissent
M ob iudicandum pecuniam
acc. Wesenberg ob rem iudi- candam pec. acc. Cobet
- 9 summum M sed summum
Kayser unusque erat Lehmann qui erat M
- 10 tam infirma tamen firma M
- 11 tempus. Si expectare Tyrrell tempus expectare M

EP. VII (Att. 2. 19)

- 1 cetera . . . Minae M ceterum in mag. reb. minae Kayser
- 2 peraeque Cratander de reque
M¹ denique M²
putaram putarem M amores Cratander amore M
ne metu Schütz an metu M
- 3 tragoedus tragoediis M nostra . . . magnus. In Val.
Max. 2. 9 miseria nostra
magnus est, and below eandem omitted transiri Manutius transire M
- 5 vult volet M
non repudio M non refugio
Wesenberg
certi sumus certissimus M
hic hoc M

EP. VIII (Att. 2. 22)

- 1 Romae! Mansisses M Romae
mansisses! mansisses Bosius multis denuntiat multa denun-

- tiat* or vim multis denuntiat Boot
- opes eorum et exercitus
Orelli opes et vim exercitus
M opes eorum et vim exer-
citus Cratander
tum vim Ien. cum vim M
- 2 fidem Lambinus sed fidem M
- 3 opera nostra Wesenberg opera
M
- 5 totum tantum M
Pompeium Crasso urgente
Pompeio Crassum urgente Schütz Pompeium a Crasso
urgeri, at si Tyrrell quid tempus omitted M¹
- 6 sentias sentencias M Pompeium vehementerque paenitet Pompeiumque vehe- menter paenitet M

EP. IX (Att. 2. 23)

- 2 inveniri Lambinus invenire M
- 3 nostrae Cratander noster M si ingrederis si non ingrederis
M¹ si vero ingrederis M²

EP. X (Att. 3. 4)

- correctum Cratander confec-
tum M
- illo pervenire non liceret.
Statim Boot illoc perveni- rem non licere statim M¹ Illo cum pervenire non liceret, statim commonly et quod omitted M¹

EP. XI (Fam. 14. 4)

- 1 fuissemus fuisse M
- 3 profecti sumus FHD profec- tissimus M
a. d. II Rutilius a. d. V Ψ F deest FHD est M
- 4 abisset Lambinus abesset Ψ F
- 5 ferenda non sunt FHD fe- renda sunt M
- 6 vincit omnes Pescennius Σ vincet omnespes cennius M

EP. XII (Att. 3. 12)

- 1 proponi scribis proponis. Scribis M 3 licet . . . intellego Koch lic. tibi ut scrib. sig. ut ad me ven. si donatam ut intellego M scilicet tibi, ut scribis, significaram ut ad me venires; id omitamus; intellego te Madvig. See Commentary.

EP. XIII (Fam. 14. 2)

- 2 sublevantur sublevantur M mea FHD me M
 3 partem te FHD parte M miseram proicias miseram proicias M attinet sine attinet et sine M
 4 quoniam D quam M quando FH

EP. XIV (Att. 3. 22)

- 2 adfert marg. asserit M
sperasset Wesenberg speraret M
 3 omnium meorum Stuerenburg omnium rerum M fuere M
 4 et quod mei et quod et mei M

EP. XV (Att. 4. 1)

- 1 fuitque cui fuit qui M¹ fuit
cui M²
pro . . . observantia Bosius propter meam in te observantiam M potius H Stephanus totius M
timoris Pius rumoris M
 2 numquam M² tumquam M¹
si umquam Meutzner and commonly adopted 4 ipse scribam Lehmann inscribam M gratulatione . . . est Cratander omitted M
 5 infimo Lehmann infima M

- 6 continuo, cum more Baiter continuo more M¹ cum more M² dedissent Baiter dedisset M

EP. XVI (Q. fr. 2. 3)

- 1 producta Drakenborch producta M in VIII Idus Manutius in VII Idus M
Lentulo Manutius Lentuli M
 2 a. d. VIII Id. Manutius a. d.
VII Id. M
peregerat M perfrigerat Madvig
 3 a. d. VII Id. Manutius a. d.
VI Id. M²
a. d. VIII Id. Manutius a. d.
VI Id. M
 4 et magna Malaspina sed magna M
 5 de omitted M
adligatos Turnebus adligatos M
Bestiam Wesenberg ista ei M
 7 huiusmodi ut tu huiusmodi tu
 M
Lamiae Manutius Camiae M
Olbiensem vibiensem M

EP. XVII (Att. 4. 4 B)

- 1 meorum Kayser meorum bibliotheca M
velim vellem M
 2 ολλύβους Graevius sillabos M
 2 ludum Ernesti locum M λόχον Bosius liberasses M liber esses Pius

EP. XVIII (Fam. 5. 12)

- 1 ad spem quandam M ac spes quaedam F. Hofmann
 2 cogitares cogitare M Phocicum Westermann troicum Ω seiungeres. Equidem seiungere se quidem M se iungeres equidem GR

- ad nostram GR ut nostram
M
- 3 flecti Victorius effecti M de- flecti G
- demonstras demonstrans M
- 4 quoddam quodim M
- in legendo, te scriptore (-rem G), tenere GR in legem
dote scripto retinere M
- 5 evelli Kayser avelli Ω
- Themistocli fuga exituque Kayser Them. fuga redi-
tuque M Them. exsilio aut
Alcibiadis fuga redituque Schütz Them. fuga, Corio- lani fuga redituque Tyrrell.
See Commentary.
- notabili G votabili MR
- 6 hac R haec M
- cum (or quom) quam Ω
- qui quid Σ quid M quicquid
GR
- 7 superstes Mendelssohn spa- tiates Ω spartiates Σ specta- bilis Schmalz
- Sigeum Sigetum Ω
- 8 quicquam quicum Ω
- si quid si quod Ω
- 9 mirere R merere M meres G

EP. XIX (Fam. 7. 1)

- 1 in illo Schütz ex illo Ω
- sinum Boot and Kiessling se- num M Misenum others
- 2 scaenam R cenam MG
- qui ne G quid ne MR
- 4 cum et M cum GR
- ambitio abitio M habitatio GR
- 5 te ipsum et ipsum Ω
- qui multos quid multos M
quod multos GR

EP. XX (Q. fr. 2. 9 [11])

- 3 a Magnetibus Victorius a mag. M
- 4 cum veneris . . . Virum F.
Marx. For the most important conjectures on this passage, see Tyrrell.

EP. XXI (Fam. 7. 5)

- 1 sperasset R speras sed MG
- 2 M. Iteium Mendelssohn (comparing Wilmann's Exempla
no. 2017) M. itfuium M id- finium R id funum G M.
Rufum Schütz
- quid Σ quod Ω
- 3 scripsissem scripsisse M
- singulari GR singularis M
- putidiusculi M impudentius- culi commonly printed
- quamquam Ernesti quam M

EP. XXII (Q. fr. 2. 15 [16])

- 1 paulum quidem Orelli pau- lum M
- propensis Wesenberg a pro- pensis M
- et colamur Manutius ex cola- mur M
- 3 eram Lambinus aderam M
- factam Bücheler actam M
- 5 utimur M utilitur commonly printed. See Commentary.

EP. XXIII (Q. fr. 3. 5, 6)

- 1 factis facilis M¹ feci M²
- est a me est tamen M
- P. Rutili omitted M
- ea . . . esse marg. ea visum
mirifica esse M¹ ea visu mi- rica esse M²
- qui essent Wesenberg quod
esset M defended by Lehmann, Quaest. Tull. p. 35.
- 2 commovit me commovi me M
- relictos marg. redditos M
- 3 perscripti Buecheler per- scripsit M
- tamquam Baiter quam M
- 4 Διὰ τῶν ὀρέων Buecheler AM-
ΠΘΕΙΣ M ἀμύωταις
Cratander
- debebat Manutius debet M
- 5 ut puto ut me puto M
- viderunt Wesenberg viderent
M

6 exscribuntur Boot et scribuntur M

C. Rebilus Orelli Crebrius M et . . . adiurat M et qui omnia tibi debere dixerat valde te nunc iactat ('abuses') Boot

de aerario Boot ab aerario M

7 ἄλλοι Usener Π Α Ε Ο Σ M

χρῆσι Cratander

Aëropam Buecheler trodam M verum etiam marg. vetat iam
(and written above vult etiam) M

istas istam M

ad duas Orsini duas M

EP. XXIV (Fam. 7. 16)

1 τῶν Βερτανῶν minus Mendelssohn in Britannia non minus M in Britannia non nimis commonly printed iniectus M intectus A. Schottus nive tectus C. F. Hermann intectus Teuffel

3 ecquid in haec quid in MG videbo G video M videro Σ

EP. XXV (Fam. 7. 10)

1 sapere G aspere M sperare R

2 andabata A. Schottus andabata Ω

3 statu tuo GR statuo M

4 possim possem Ω

EP. XXVI (Fam. 7. 18)

1 cautiones causationes Ω

2 quam . . . scribere Birt quam haec scribere M quam haec (non) scribere Σ quam assem perdere Mendelssohn

3 villam villa M

M. Aemili Manutius metrilii Ω

se sed MG

4 innocentem innocentem GR
innocenter M^r

EP. XXVII (Fam. 16. 16)

1 iudicasti ac Bücheler ac Ψ F retained by Mendelssohn ac
conditione Wesenberg ac
nomine Lehmann

2 sermonibus et sermonibus Ψ F

EP. XXVIII (Fam. 7. 15)

2 quod Σ quam Ω

EP. XXIX (Fam. 3. 2)

2 consili consuli M¹ consilii
McGR

magnam te M magnam me
C. F. W. Müller

EP. XXX (Att. 5. 1)

2 quod quo M
nominum Cratander omnium
M

3 sumptus Cratander sumpta
M

ego accivero pueros M¹ ego vero accivero pueros M² ego viros accivero Malaspina ego viros accivero porro Tyrrell

4 quaeso Manutius quasi M

EP. XXXI (Fam. 8. 1)

1 discedens I. F. Gronovius decedens M discedenti commonly printed et ad ut ad Ω

edicta dictae MG

exhibeam ex ea hibe M ex hibe R¹ ex ea habeat G

2 sit est Ω
tenuissimam GR tenuissem
M

3 sit GR sis M
quid GR ut quid M

4 eo rumores GR eorum mores
M
equitem equidem Ω

- factum M factum commonly printed at R ad G aut M manus M manum Boot sit sint Ω
 urbe Wesenberg ur deurbe M de urbe GR
 te a Q. atque M atque a GR Baulis embaenetacam M baulisem beneticam R baulis
seni beneticam G Baulis
ἐμετικὴν I. F. Gronovius
Baulis iam peneticam Klotz
Baulis rem peneticam O.
 Hirschfeld. Mendelssohn believes that reference is made to some menial occupation which Pompeius was obliged to take up, but the text has not yet been satisfactorily restored.
 ut defungeremur vide funge- remur MR vident GR vigens M
- EP. XXXII (Fam. 13. 1)
- 1 an potius HD andotius M
 dolore HD dolere M
 2 nunc a te HD nunc ac te M
 4 potest M potest facere nolle quod potes Lehmann
 vitam M viam Wesenberg
- EP. XXXIII (Fam. 2. 8)
- 1 dilata ut GR dilata et M
- EP. XXXIV (Fam. 15. 4)
- 5 praesentia M praestanti
 Cratander and commonly printed. The asyndeton is unusual, but the expression is intelligible.
 6 in maxima F. Hofmann max- ima M et totus Hofmann et toto M discederet FHD disceret M
 7 et Arabum Arabum M
- ab equitum ab equitatu M ab
eo qui tum HDF
 8 fuga. Eranam fugae ranam
 M fugeranam D fugerunt aman F tenenti I. F. Gronovius te- nenite MH'D tenentem FH²
 10 iisque Σ hiis quae M ne regibus D negeribus MH generibus F
 Quintum que M omitted FHD
 pacatis factis FHD patis M
 11 mihi tibi ΨF
 12 cum facile FHD facile M ut facile Mr non ego FHD ego M pono FHD non pono M enim FHD enim te M
 non modo modo M
- EP. XXXV (Att. 6. 1. 17-26)
- 17 ad Opis Klotz ab Opis M
 20 πολλοῦ γε καὶ δεῖ ΠΟΑΑΕΤΤΕ
 M
 22 quem numquam Manutius
quem iam pridem numquam
 M dies pr. Kal. Wesenberg pr.
Kal. M
 23 proposuit Bentivoglio potuit
 M nisi forte dolet ei quod suo tibicine egebit. Velim Boot nisi forte solet enim cum suo tibicine, et velim M in quibus Wesenberg quibus
 M
 25 iamne vos Bosius genuarios
 M Cratander
 Vindullum; ibi sua Victorius vidi illum ibi. Sua M uxoris illius Schütz illius M
 26 inepti Cratander in epiro M
- EP. XXXVI (Fam. 2. 11)
- 1 incredibile meorum GR in- credibile eorum M tam R iam MG
 2 mandatu meo Lambinus

mandatum eo M mandato meo GR

EP. XXXVII (Fam. 15. 5)

- 1 hortatur F hortatus Ψ
2 casum casu MDFH

EP. XXXVIII (Fam. 15. 6)

- 2 de honore Σ honore ΨF

EP. XXXIX (Fam. 16. 4)

- 1 quoad D quod MFHD¹
4 corpori servi corpori servire
corpori servi M

EP. XLI (Fam. 16. 9)

- 1 D (of greeting) nos dic. nos H dignos M Cassiopen cassiodem FHD cassodem M retenti . . . a. d. retenti vens sum usque ad a. d. M retentis ventis sumus usque a. d.
D
3 vellem Schütz velim ΨF
4 vale salve MD vale et salve
Wesenberg

EP. XLII (Fam. 16. 11)

- 1 iam C. F. W. Müller etiam
ΨF
3 Capuam FHD capiam M

EP. XLIII (Fam. 14. 14)

- 1 si enim FHD sit enim M
2 forti sitis FHD fortis sitis M

EP. XLIV (Att. 8. 12 D)

- 1 praemonui fit praemonui fore fit marg.
conductis te conductis per te
M

- 2 ad adversarium Baiter ad-
versarium M. See Commentary.

EP. XLV (Att. 8. 3)

- 1 perturbatus cum Victorious
perturbatus sum M¹
Italia cedat Victorious Italiam
accedat M¹ Italia excedat M²
2 mea . . . fortuna omitted M added by Klotz non futurus . . . fuerit Lehmann non futurus M. See Commentary.
3 adoptando Cratander optan- do M propagator prorogator M 4 visa quæri desperatione vis
aquari desperationem M¹ paciæ O. E. Schmidt sine M sed ut O. E. Schmidt et ut M sensi quam esset O. E.
Schmidt sensissem M
quam multi O. E. Schmidt multi M
5 habui Cratander habuit M an sine eo cum Hofmann an si nec cum M¹ an sine et cum M²
putabit putavit M
sciemus scimus M
6 etiam etiam Philippi M accipere invidiosum invidio- suni M. See Commentary.
qui autem Orelli qui enim M
7 deseri Orelli deserit M¹

EP. XLVII (Att. 9. 6 A)

meo me M

EP. XLVIII (Fam. 8. 15)

- 1 quid iam? inquis. Glorioso omnia. Si scias M with Mendelssohn's punctuation
'quid? tam,' inquis, 'glorioso omnia'? Immo si scias Wesenberg 'quid? tam,' inquis,
'glorioso'? Somnia! Si scias

- C. F. Hermann. See Commentary.
sollicitus sum M sollicitus sim commonly printed. See Commentary.
derideas M non derideas Wesenberg
 2 tamen quod Wesenberg tum quam M qui que M
nunc cum VIII Mendelssohn num M
Venere prognatus Victorius venerem propugnatus M Psacade natus Mendelssohn ipsa cadenatus M Pscade natus Pantagathus and commonly printed. See Commentary.

EP. XLIX (Att. 9. 11 A)

- 3 me, et pacis et utriusque M me e paucis et ad utriusque Bosius and commonly printed amicum, ad vestram inserted by Lehmann.

EP. L (Fam. 8. 16)

- 1 perscripsi, neque Becher perscripsi M
cogitares cognita res M praedixit Mendelssohn praedixi M Caesarem Caesare M
futura . . . victoria fuerat esset partha victa victoria M Caesaris Caesar M
exiit exiit M
mehercules omitted M
 2 valemus valet M Caesarem omitted M quem quam M quos quod M
optimatem ad optatim M
 4 ac hac M
negavi negavit M
vi te retinuissem vitae retinuissem M

- 5 demittas unde demittasum de M potes, eligas potest elegas M
quae . . . feceris quae tam erunt confeceris M

EP. LI (Fam. 2. 16)

- 1 habent Klotz haberet Ω
 2 cui iam Martyni-Laguna cui tam M
 3 existimari existimare M
 4 domesticis R modesticis MG
 5 cum quin Ω qui M^r
 6 et haec ut haec M de re Dolabellae O. Hirschfeld Dolabella (-ae M^r) M dolo bellam GR

EP. LII (Fam. 9. 9)

- 1 qua Wesenberg in qua M
scilicet tibi H scilicet te tibi M

EP. LV (Fam. 14. 17)

- sint sunt ΨF
adfectus adfectus M

EP. LX (Fam. 9. 1)

- 1 ut nullam nullam M
 2 nimirum Mendelssohn enim mihi cum M transiturum turum M with transi written above at later date.

EP. LXI (Fam. 9. 16)

- 1 amavi M animadverti Kleyn agnovi Boot (doubtfully) quomodo M quoquomodo commonly 2 potuerit Σ poterit Ψ conciliandam et conligendam conciliandum et conligendum M

- a Caesare H Caesare MD nam etsi M tam etsi commonly printed
- 3 effugere effungere M
opinionem HD omitted M
- 4 praeterea de me pratereadem M
Oenomao denomao MD de oenomao H
- 5 aut faciam HD ut faciam M
- 7 popellum Bücheler popillium MH popilium D pompilium Rutilius polypum Corradus cantharum Mendelssohn (cf. Ovid, Hal. 103), thynnarium Rutilius thynnium Schütz naritam Schöll
- apud me . . . apud illos HD omitted M
- non est quod non eo sis consilio Lehmann non eo sis consilio M non est quod eo sis consilio Wesenberg non eo possis consilio uti Madvig
- 8 miniani M. Mendelssohn defends the form as colloquial, comparing Levana, Tutanus, etc. miniati Lambinus and most editors
- 10 sannionum D sannonum M sanniorum H sanorum F. Hofmann saniorum Tyrrell
- Ep. LXII (Fam. 9. 18)
- 1 propterea praeterea MD
quibus D qui M
- 2 consilium consilio MD
- 3 delectas D delectat M me hic mihi hic MD
disce a me Bengel disceam M πρωλογιμένας M προηγμένα Boot. Mendelssohn does not consider πρωλογιμένας good Greek here.
- 4 si, quomodo video, aestimationes Schmalz sed quomodo video si aestimationes M and D (without si) sed quomodo, video. Si aestimat ones Bengel
- idem istuc M idem istic Orelli
- Ep. LXIII (Fam. 9. 20)
- 1 quae quam V
abierunt D habierunt M abierunt (the first letter erased) H nam D non M omitted H nunc or nos others castra HD cassatra M
- 2 ex arte ista Krauss ex artis M ex artibus Orelli exercitationis Busch exquisite artis Wesenberg ὄψαρτυτικῆς Mendelssohn ἐξοχῆς Tyrrell non added by Orelli
- Ep. LXIV (Fam. 9. 17)
- 1 non ne (affirmative particle) I. F. Gronovius
- Ep. LXV (Fam. 6. 6)
- 1 vereor, ne desideres M non vereor ne desideres Martyni-Laguna and commonly printed parium Victorius partum Ω et saepe misissem et se demisissem M etsi di misissem G et se di misissem R
- 2 putarent putarunt M celeri ceteri M
- 3 quam cum Σ nam cum Ω
- 4 seiungeret Σ se iungeret Ω se diungeret Kleyn and commonly printed
- 7 ut in G aut in MR
- 9 intelleget intellegest M intellexi G intellexisti R
- 11 mutata Σ muta Ω
- Ep. LXVI (Fam. 6. 14)
- 2 omnem R ad omnem MG hac opinione Σ hanc opinionem Ω

EP. LXVII (Fam. 9. 15)

- 1 curam . . . tibi HD Cratander omitted M
2 facetiis DM^r facetus H fac et his M
Latio M Lati Madvig luto
O. Hirschfeld
3 moderationis, urbane Madvig moderationis urbanae Ψ
5 parebo D probo MH cum Σ quam Ψ

EP. LXIX (Att. 12. 1)

- 1 sin rusticatur Victorius in rusticatu M sin rusticetur
Cratander
2 ὑπορικόν inserted by Lam-binus quo die quotidie M
prid. Kal. Orelli ✓ Kal. M

EP. LXX (Fam. 15. 17)

- 2 ut tamen FHD tamen M macellarius Weiske and Madvig Marcellus M gaudebant FD gaudebat M gaudebunt H
3 coepisti cepisti Ψ

EP. LXXI (Fam. 13. 72)

- 2 commodandi commendandi Ψ

EP. LXXIII (Fam. 9. 11)

- 1 eo HD ego M
2 satis sum satis M

EP. LXXIV (Att. 12. 32)

- 1 ut cum Publilio loquerer O.
E. Schmidt cum Publilio
loqueretur M cum Publilio
videretur Klotz
mihi etiam Orelli me etiam
M alio Wesenberg ego M

- 2 nihil opus erit Wesenberg
nihil opus sit M
quam opus erit Wesenberg quam opus erat M

EP. LXXV (Fam. 4. 5)

- 1 miserum Σ mirum Ω
3 pareret pararet M a parente G apparente MR¹
usuri uti M
4 me Megara Orelli me me- gare GR menegare M clarissimi R carissimi MG
5 imitari M^c imitare Ω

EP. LXXVI (Fam. 4. 6)

- Ser. Servilio Ω
1 ipse ipsi M
fuerunt Σ fuertint Ω Galus M (Mendelssohn cites Mommsen, Römische Forsch- ungen, I, p. 119) Gallus
GR
luctum GR lum M
2 me a mea MR a G
de re publica GR ad re pu- blica M¹
3 maius . . . nulla GR maior
mihivatio mihiadferre nulla M maior mihilevatio (or maior enim levatio mih) ad- ferri commonly printed.
Mendelssohn thinks that the reading adopted results from interpolation.

EP. LXXVII (Fam. 5. 14)

- 1 discesseram GR discesserat
M discesseramus Streicher
decesserat (Tullia) Orelli
2 hinc discesseras Σ hinc di- cas seras M indicas GR in- clinatus eras Streicher 3 redeas atque ad redeas . . .
ad (space for 5 or 6 letters between redeas and ad) M redeas ad G redeas ac R
nunc Martyni-Laguna cum M

EP. LXXVIII (Fam. 4. 12)

- 1 nobis R bonis MG
M. Marcellum Orelli Marcellum M digressus sum Streicher digressus essem M supra Maleas supra maias M supra kal. maias GR sub Kalendas Streicher. See Commentary.
 2 a P. Magio Cilone apud magio cilone M ei mitterem. Itaque medicos omitted M 3 aiebant R agebant MG delatus dilatus M
 quae quo MG quod R

EP. LXXIX (Fam. 5. 15)

- 2 quae, deest Rost quas id est M quasi est GR quid (before dicam) GR quod M 4 tu me GR tuae M
 delectare delectari Ω

EP. LXXX (Fam. 9. 8)

- 1 ostenderit ostenderet Ψ
 illius HD eius M
 2 at saltem HD ad altem M vel tum vel M

EP. LXXXI (Fam. 7. 24)

- 1 Cipius citius M cicius G
tilius R
 2 Sestio sentio MR sextio G unctorem M cantorem Manutius

EP. LXXXII (Fam. 7. 25)

- 1 ne . . . habuerimus Streicher nisi istum habuerimus M ne si ist. hab. GR ne, nisi istum caverimus Victorius ne, nisi istum placatum habuerimus or ne, si istum iratum (or inimicum) habuerimus Wesenberg γλωττα σαρδάνιον γελωια σαρδανιον M γελωτα σαρδόνιον Ernesti. See Commentary.

Catonium Salmasius Catonium Ω. See Commentary.

Catoninos M Catonimos G
Catonianos Boot

- 2 audi Σ audii M audi id GR
audin? Mendelssohn (doubtfully)

EP. LXXXIII (Att. 13. 52)

- 1 tam gravem ἀμεταμέλητρον M gravem, tamen ἀμεταμέλητρον Boot non mutavit M non mutavit Boot vultum non mutavit commonly printed
 2 eodem ad me M ehodum ad me Peerlkamp. Cf. Ter. And. 184

EP. LXXXIV (Fam. 13. 50)

Acilio Schütz and Lallemand
 (cf. Fam. 7. 30 and 31)
Aucto Ψ

- 1 quodque HD quoque M

EP. LXXXVI (Fam. 11. 1)

- 3 cedendum caedendum M
 4 Caecilium Caesium Ψ

EP. LXXXVII (Fam. 9. 14)

- 1 in haec loca veniant (convenient H) Ψ in haec loca veniant, convenient Lehmann
 quin HD qui M
 3 et gratulor D ei gratulor MH tua Wesenberg tum MH cum D
 3-4 est. A te aestate Ψ
 4 iocatus D locatus H locutus M amore amorem Ψ

6 proponam proponas Ψ

8 quo facto facto M

EP. LXXXVIII (Att. 15. 11)

1 placeretne? Atque M placereretne? Placeret, atque Wesen-
berg See Commentary.

2 suscipi Orelli suscipere M susciperem Gronovius velle Romae se dixerat Wesenberg velle esse dixerat
M velle se dixerat Boot vel solum or vel cum mortis periculo se Romae velle esse dixerat Lehmann

3 δύναται [vōv] Cobet. vōv bracketed for metrical reasons.

EP. XC (Fam. 16. 21)

1 quadragesimum et sextum
M quadragesimum sextum
Baiter, but cf. Neue, Formenlehre II² p. 163. Upon quadragesimum see Commentary.

ex et ΨF

2 mihī successa M mihī successe Schwabe omitted Lam-binus. See Commentary.

3 duplicetur FHD dupliciter M nam cum audio Lambinus nam cum et audio MD nam cum et gaudio F nam et cum gaudio H nam et audio Σ

4 iocus locus ΨF

5 Mytilenis Σ mitylenis M
mutilenis D mitilenes FH

7 Romanus M germanus Rib-beck

8 de mandatis D demandastis
MFH

EP. XCI (Fam. 11. 27)

2 communicata sunt H communicata sint MD

5 sum, in reliquis officio. Cui Madvig sum in (tuis added by D) reliquis officiis cui Ψ

6 multa HD multo M

7 liquido aliquido M aliquando
H

8 expertem exper M expers HD

EP. XCII (Fam. 11. 28)

3 fuereunt, ut timerent Baiter fuereunt timerent M fuereunt ut sperarent (or ut cuperent) timerent Lehmann. See Commentary.

6 at ludos H ad ludos M ac
ludos D

at id ad id M ac id D at omitted H

Caesare petenti H Caesare
repetenti M Cesari repente D

EP. XCIII (Fam. 16. 26)

1 poenam FHD ponam M commentata M commendata
FHD

EP. XCIV (Fam. 9. 24)

1 me virum Wesenberg meum
MH me meum D me unum
Baiter me quam Σ me ami-cum Starker meum animum Klotz

3 iocum D locum MH

EP. XCV (Fam. 12. 5)

1 ageres ages M

2 reliqui M reliquum commonly printed

ad Forum Cornelium M ad
forum Cornelii HD

compararat D comparat MH comparabat Ernesti

EP. XCVI (Fam. 10. 12)

1 gratiores graviore Ψ exspectata spectata Ψ
quoad quod M quo HD

- 2 at ego ei M at ego et HD ego ei Wesenberg lego ei Boot
 4 quam tum D quantum MH
 5 conlecta M confectam Baiter conlecta Gitlbauer fucata HD fugatia M fugacia Z existima. Verum existimaverim M

EP. XCVII (Fam. 11. 9)

- 1 elabatur H² elaboratur MH¹
 elaboretur D 2 persuasissimumst persuasissimum et M per. est D per.
 sit H

EP. XCVIII (Fam. 10. 15)

- 2 decem sescenti E. Schelle optimi optime M adiuvandam H adluandum MD
 3 quid HD qui M
 meo M meo Antonium Orelli meo perditum hominem (or latronem) Lehmann, but, as illustrating the omission of the proper name, Mendelssohn compares Cael. Fam.
 8. 8. 4 plane perspecta Cn.
 Pompei voluntate in eam par-tem, ut eum (i.e. Caesarem) decedere post K. Martias placeret.

EP. XCIX (Fam. 11. 12)

- D. Bruto D and index to bk.
 XI in M Bruto MH

- 1 et ex Graecae oratione et ex
 grecei oratione D ut ex grecei oratione H ut ex grae-ceio ratione M
 2 maximeque D¹ maximique
 MH
 providendumst providendum sit M providendum est HD

EP. C (Fam. 10. 24)

- 1 meritaque HD meraque M indulgentia diligentia Lam-binus industria Boot
 in tua observantia ind. ads.
 omitted Gräter and Wesenberg mea in te obs. diligentia ads. Lambinus mutua obs.
 ind. ads. Klotz in tui obser-vantia Orelli
 3 capitalis Koch and Mendelssohn talis M fatalis Koch consularis Lehmann ut ais Andresen, omitted Wesen-
 berg. See Commentary.
 luculentissima M locuple-tissima Lehmann
 4 quod ad Caesarem attinet M quod Caesarem Stroth and commonly printed, but see Commentary.
 6 aversissimam M adversissi-mam commonly printed illis illi Ψ
 a tanta HD tanta M
 bimestris M quinquemestris
 Manutius, approved by O.
 E. Schmidt and Mendelsohn
 semestris Lange. See Commentary.

GLOSSARY OF GREEK WORDS AND PHRASES.¹

- | | |
|--|--|
| P. li. κανὼν standardizer, critic of form. EP. I. 2. ἀδύνατον impossible. EP. I. 4. ἐπει, etc. since it is no small prize I fight for. EP. I. 5. εἰς ἀνάθημα an offering to it. EP. V. 1. ὑστερον, etc. Homerically, the last point first. EP. V. 2. πρὸς τὸ πρότερον to the first point. EP. V. 4 n. φιλόπατρις patriotic. EP. V. 5. Ἔσπετε, etc. Muses, declare to me now how the catastrophe came. EP. V. 8. omnem παρρησίαν eripui I took all the brag out of. EP. V. 8. ἀγῶνα the struggle. EP. V. 11. ἐπισημασίας marks of popularity. EP. V. 12 n. δευτεραγωνιστής one who plays the second rôle. EP. V. 13. ἀποθέωσιν deification. EP. V. 13 n. Ἀποκολοκύντωσις Pumpkinification (title of a satire) EP. V. 13. φιλοσοφητέον one must play the philosopher. | EP. V. 18. Ἀμαλθειον = Amaltheum (name of a villa). EP. V. 18. qua τοποθεσίᾳ in what kind of a situation. EP. V. 18. Ἀμαλθεία = Amalthea. EP. VII. 1. ἄλις enough. EP. VII. 1. δρυός of the oak. EP. VII. 1. τυφλώττω am blind. EP. VII. 1. τῷ καλῷ προσπέπονθα am passionately attached to that which is noble. EP. VII. 4. ἀσφάλειαν safety. EP. VII. 5. ἀκκιζόμεθα I pretend indifference. EP. VII. 5. ἐν αἰνιγμοῖς in riddles. EP. VIII. 5. Βοῶπιη the ox-eyed one. EP. IX. 3. Βοώπιδος nostrae of our ox-eyed one. EP. XVI. 6. προφκονομησάμην I brought out in advance. EP. XVI. 6. εὐκαίρως aptly. EP. XVII. 1. σιλλύβους = indices. EP. XX. 3 n. νεώτεροι the younger set, the innovators. EP. XXII. 3. Συνδείπνους Σοφοκλέους the Σύνδειπνοι (Fellow Banqueters) of Sophocles. |
|--|--|

¹ Many of Cicero's Greek phrases are used in a figurative or suggestive way. To such expressions an English rendering has been given which suggests the sense in which Cicero employed the phrase rather than one which represents the literal meaning of the Greek words.

- EP. XXII. 4. ὑπόθεσιν subject.
- EP. XXII. 4 n. γλαυκ' εἰς Ἀθήνας an owl to Athens.
- EP. XXII. 5. βραθυμότερα a bit careless.
- EP. XXII. 5. χαρακτήρ style.
- EP. XXII. 5. φιλαληθῆς as a friend of truth.
- EP. XXIII. 4 n. ἔπος a piece of heroic verse.
- EP. XXIII. 4. Διατυπώσεις word-paintings.
- EP. XXIII. 4. πολλὸν, etc. to be far the best and to be distinguished above others.
- EP. XXIII. 7. πάθος passion, emotion.
- EP. XXIII. 7. γινῶμι σεαυτὸν know thyself.
- EP. XXIV. 1. τῶν Βρεττανῶν minus φιλοθέρων not very fond of seeing the sights in Britain.
- EP. XXXII. 5. ὑπομηματισμὸν the title of a decree of the Areopagus.
- EP. XXXIII. 1. πολιτικώτερον better informed on politics.
- EP. XXXV. 17. ὠπραγμάτων ἀσυγκλώστων confusion worse confounded.
- EP. XXXV. 17. Πολυκλέους of Polycles.
- EP. XXXV. 18. ἀνιστορησίαν ignorance of history.
- EP. XXXV. 18. tu belle ἠπόρησας you made a good point.
- EP. XXXV. 18. Εὐπολίην, τὸν τῆς ἄρχαίας (κωμῆδίας) Eupolis, he of the Old (Comedy)
- EP. XXXV. 18 n. περὶ Κωμωδίας concerning comedy.
- EP. XXXV. 20. τί λοιπόν what else?
- EP. XXXV. 20. πολλοῦ γε καὶ δεῖ far from it.
- EP. XXXV. 22. χρύσεια χαλκίωον gold for copper.
- EP. XXXV. 23. ἀναντιφώνητον without an answer.
- EP. XXXV. 23. Αἰδισθῆναι, etc. although they were ashamed to refuse, yet they feared to accept.
- EP. XXXV. 25. παριστορησάμενοι to ask by the way.
- EP. XXXV. 26. πρόπυλον porch.
- EP. XXXIX. 1. κακοστόμαχος suffering from a weak stomach.
- EP. XXXIX. 1 n. πέψιν, etc. time for digestion, avoidance of over-fatigue, moderate walking, rubbing, easy movement of the bowels.
- EP. XLVIII. 2 n. Ψακάς = Psacas, a crumb.
- EP. LXI. 4. ἀποφθεγμάτων of terse sayings.
- EP. LXII. 3. προλεγόμενας formulas.
- EP. LXIII. 2. ὀψιμαθεῖς late in learning.
- EP. LXVIII. συμπάσχω I am sorry to hear of.
- EP. LXIX. 2. γεροντικόν old-mannish.
- EP. LXIX. 2. γεροντικώτερον more old-mannish.
- EP. LXIX. 2. λέσχη mere talk.
- EP. LXX. 1. πάντα περὶ πάντων all about all, i.e. all the news about everything.
- EP. LXX. 2. πρόσωπον πόλεως a character in the city.
- EP. LXX. 3. ἀδίστοτοι anonymous.

- EP. LXX. 3. τὸ καλὸν δι' αὐτὸ αἰρετὸν esse that the honorable course may be chosen on its own account, i. e. regardless of any advantage expected from it.
- EP. LXX. 3 n. ἡδονὴν pleasure (as the highest ideal of man).
- EP. LXX. 4. ἀκενόσπουδος fueris shall have shunned vain pursuits.
- EP. LXXVIII. 3 n. Λύκειον, Κυνόσαργες, Ἀκαδημία the Lyceum, the Cynosarges, the Academy. (Each had become the headquarters of a school of philosophy.)
- EP. LXXX. 1 n. προσφώνησιν lit. addressing, i. e. dedicatory work.
- EP. LXXX. 1 n. Καλλιππίδης (perhaps the name of a man in a story, satirically applied here to Varro).
- EP. LXXXI. 1 n. νεώτεροι the younger set, the innovators.
- EP. LXXXII. 1. γέλωτα σαρδάνιον the sneer of triumphant malice, or σαρδόνιον the sneer of death.
- EP. LXXXII. 1 n. κάτω below.
- EP. LXXXIII. 1. ἀμεταμέλητον not causing regret.
- EP. LXXXIII. 1 and n. Ἐμετικήν (more fully ἐμετικήν τέχνην) a course of emetics.
- EP. LXXXIII. 1. ἀδέως as he pleased.
- EP. LXXXIII. 2. οἱ περὶ αὐτὸν his suite.
- EP. LXXXIII. 2. Σπουδαῖον οὐδέν nothing serious.
- EP. LXXXIII. 2. φιλόλογα literary talk.
- EP. LXXXIII. 2. ἐπισταθμίαν billeting.
- EP. LXXXVIII. 1 n. Ἄρη πνέων breathing war (lit. Mars).
- EP. LXXXVIII. 3. ἡ θεῶν, etc. seer, what avails thy coming hither?
- EP. LXXXVIII. 4. βλάσφημα ill-omened words.
- EP. XC. 4. a philologia et cotidiana συζητήσῃ from our literary studies and daily discussions.
- EP. XC. 5. Τὰ μὲν, etc. that's the way things stand with me.
- EP. XC. 6. διαρρήδην expressly.
- EP. XC. 6. σπουδῆ esteem.
- EP. XC. 8. hypomnematism notes.
- EP. XC. 8. συμφιλολογεῖν to discuss literature together.
- EP. XCI. 5. φιλοσοφούμενα philosophical works.
- EP. XCIV. 3. συμπόσια = computations.
- EP. XCIV. 3. σύνδειπνα = concenations.

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES.¹

(The numbers refer to pages.)

- L. Accius: 189.
(M'.) Acilius (Glabrio): 246.
Sex. Aelius Paetus: 258.
M. Aemilius Lepidus: 281, 285, 286.
L. Aemilius Paulus: 229.
M. Aemilius Scaurus: 93.
Aesopus: 83.
L. Afranius: 27, 63, 163, 194.
Alexander (of Macedon): 79.
Alexander (the geographer): 46.
Amatius: 251.
Amphiaraus: 202.
T. Ampius Balbus: 175.
M. Anneius: 123.
T. Annius Milo: 56, 66.
Annius Saturninus: 109.
Antiochus of Ascalon: 238.
C. Antonius: 2, 30, 130.
L. Antonius: 282.
M. Antonius: 152, 256, 273, 276, 282.
Apelles: 79.
Appius: see Claudius.
C. Aquilius Gallus: 2.
Archias: see Licinius.
Ariobarzanes: 125, 143.
Artavasdes: 124.
- C. Asinius Pollio: 281.
Athenaeus: 125.
Athenais: 125.
Attica (or Caecilia): 72, 213.
Atticus: see Pomponius.
T. Aufidius: 2.
Avianius: 11.
- Balbus: see Ampius and Cornelius.
Basilus: see Minucius.
Bassus: see Caecilius and Ventidius.
Bellienus: 168.
Bibulus: see Calpurnius.
Britain: 99, 101.
Brutus: see Iunius.
- Q. Caecilius: 5.
Q. Caecilius Bassus: 250.
Q. Caecilius Metellus Celer: 36.
Q. Caecilius Metellus Nepos: 54, 58.
Q. Caecilius Metellus Numidicus: 20.
Q. Caecilius Metellus Scipio: 133.
C. Caecilius Statius: 30.

¹ The Index does not include all the less important allusions, nor the names of all insignificant or unknown persons.

- A. Caecina: 199, 203.
M. Caelius Rufus: 112, 168, 174.
Caerellia: 217.
Caesar: see Iulius.
M. Caesonius: 2, 212.
Callisthenes: 75.
M. Calpurnius Bibulus: 39, 42, 68, 87, 126.
C. Calpurnius Piso: 4, 37.
L. Calpurnius Piso Bestia: 71.
L. Calpurnius Piso Caesoninus: 155.
C. Calpurnius Piso Frugi: 55, 58.
Calvus: see Licinius.
L. Caninius Gallus: 85.
Cappadocia: 131.
Cassius Barba: 244.
C. Cassius Longinus: 191, 204, 217, 248, 254, 255, 269, 275.
Q. Cassius Longinus: 152.
Catilina: see Sergius.
Cato: see Porcius.
Catulus: see Lutatius.
Chrestus: 113, 120.
Chrysippus: 98.
L. Cincius: 2, 30.
Cipius: 240.
Ser. Claudius: 188.
App. Claudius Pulcher: 44, 107.
M. Claudius Marcellus: 159, 204, 233.
Clodia: 45, 47, 48, 68.
Clodius Philhetaerus: 53.
P. Clodius Pulcher: 14, 16, 17, 35, 41, 89, 140.
Commagenus: 124.
L. Cornelius Balbus: 89, 197, 244.
L. Cornelius Cinna: 161.
P. Cornelius Dolabella: 154, 177, 178, 180, 183, 191, 219, 224, 251, 257, 273.
L. Cornelius Lentulus Crus: 137, 194.
P. Cornelius Lentulus Spinther (consul 57 B.C.): 58, 129, 170.
P. Cornelius Lentulus Sura: 23.
P. Cornelius Scipio Africanus (Minor): 69.
P. Cornelius Scipio Nasica (later Q. Caecilius Metellus Pius Scipio): 5, 163, 194.
P. Cornelius Sulla: 215, 216.
L. Cornelius Sulla Faustus: 163.
Q. Cornificius (pater): 2.
C. Cosconius: 41.
Crassus: see Licinius.
Cratippus: 261.
Curio: see Scribonius.
M'. Curius: 146, 151, 246.
M. Curtius Postumus: 178.
Q. Curius: 3.
Cyprus: 131.
Damasippus: see Licinius.
Deiotarus: 124.
Dionysius: 193.
Dolabella: see Cornelius.
Cn. Domitius Calvinus: 71.
L. Domitius Ahenobarbus: 6, 155.
Epaminondas: 78.
Eratosthenes: 134.
Eupolis: 134.
M. Fadius Gallus: 11, 240.
Q. Fabius Maximus: 39, 229.
M. Favonius: 65, 68, 87, 255.
Flaccus: see Volumnius.
Cn. Flavius: 134.
C. Furius Camillus: 135, 154, 196.

- C. Furnius : 165, 278, 288.
- A. Gabinius : 97.
Galba : see Sulpicius.
Gallia Cispadana : 4.
Gallia Transpadana : 114.
Gallus : see Aquilius and Cani-nius.
Gorgias : 262.
Q. Granius : 209.
- Herodes : 138.
Herodotus : 79.
Herophilus : see Amatius.
A. Hirtius : 190, 248, 273, 276, 280.
Q. Hortensius : 16, 176.
- C. Iulius Caesar : 38, 152, 155, 159, 164, 188, 207, 245, 246, 248.
C. Iulius Caesar Octavianus :
276, 286, 288, 289, 290.
L. Iulius Caesar : 3, 252.
D. Iunius Brutus Albinus : 248, 256, 276, 282.
M. Iunius Brutus : 123, 125, 204,
248, 254, 257, 269, 275.
M. Iunius Brutus (jurist) : 259.
D. Iunius Silanus : 3.
M. Iuventius Laterensis : 282.
- C. Laelius Sapiens : 210.
T. Labienus : 154, 163.
Lentulus : see Cornelius.
Lepidus : see Aemilius.
Q. Lepta : 90, 136, 163, 182.
A. Licinius Archias : 30.
L. Licinius Crassus : 210.
M. Licinius Crassus : 20, 38, 56, 69.
Licinius Damasippus : 13.
- L. Licinius Lucullus (Ponticus) :
5.
C. Licinius Macer Calvus : 240.
Q. Ligarius : 206.
Livius Drusus Claudianus : 92.
M. Lollius Palicanus : 2.
L. Lucceius : 74, 231.
L. Lucceius (not the historian) : 137.
C. Lucilius : 209.
T. Lucretius Carus : 88.
Lucullus : see Licinius.
Q. Lutatius Catulus : 21, 210.
Lyso : 146.
Lysippus : 79.
- Sp. Maecius Tarpa : 83.
P. Magius Cilo : 234.
T. Mallius (or Manlius) : 30.
Mamurra : 244.
M'. Manilius : 101, 258.
Marcellus : see Claudius.
L. Marcius Philippus (stepfather of Augustus) : 219, 244.
L. Marcius Philippus (consul 91
B.C.) : 161.
Q. Marcius Rex : 25.
M. Marius : 81.
C. Matius Calvena : 107, 263, 265, 266, 270.
C. Memmius : 116, 138.
Mercury (god of good luck) : 12.
L. Mescinius Rufus : 147, 155.
Messalla : see Valerius.
Metellus : see Caecilius.
Milo : see Annius.
L. Minucius Basilus : 247.
Q. Minucius Thermus : 3.
P. Mucius Scaevola : 259.
Q. Mucius Scaevola : 101, 161.
L. Munatius Plancus : 277, 282, 286.

- T. Munatius Plancus: 278.
T. Munatius Plancus Bursa:
 116.

Naevius: 80.
Cn. Nerius: 70.
Nerva: see Silius.
Nicias: 246.
N. Numestius: 46.

Octavianus: see Iulius.
Cn. Octavius: 99.
M. Octavius: 135.
C. Oppius: 110, 177.

Pansa: see Vibius.
L. Papirius Paetus: 186, 272.
Paticus: 142.
Patro: 117.
Pescennius: 53.
Phaedrus: 119.
Phamea: 191, 241.
Philippus: see Marcus.
Philo: 118, 239.
Philotimus: 135.
Pilia: 72, 74.
Pindenissus: 128.
Piso: see Calpurnius, Pupius.
Cn. Plancius: 58.
Plancus: see Munatius.
Pollio: see Asinius and Vedius.
Cn. Pompeius Magnus: 9, 27,
 38, 40, 43, 47, 63, 65, 155, 156,
 158, 159, 194, 212.
Sex. Pompeius Magnus: 250.
Q. Pompeius Rufus: 115.
Pompeius Vindullus: 139.
Pomponia: 31, 111.
T. Pomponius Atticus (later Q.
Caecilius Pomponianus Atticus): 20, 31, 33, 72, 74, 133.

C. Pomptinus: 112.
L. Pontius Aquila: 6.
Porcia: 255.
C. Porcius Cato: 67.
M. Porcius Cato: 35, 36, 125, 129, 142, 145.
M. Porcius Cato (the censor): 229.
Postumia: 212.
Protogenes: 84.
Pseudodamasippus: 13.
Ptolemy Auletes: 66.
Publilia: 220.
M. Pupius Piso: 16.

C. Rebilus: 98.
P. Rutilius Lupus: 284.

Cn. Sallustius: 88 (?), 95.
Sallustius (freedman): 53.
Scipio: see Cornelius.
C. Scribonius Curio (pater): 16, 54.
C. Scribonius Curio (filius): 40, 138, 152.
M. Seius: 212.
L. Sergius Catilina: 2, 8, 23.
Servilia: 255, 257.
P. Servilius Vatia Isauricus: 68, 217.
Ser. Sulpicius Rufus: 204, 222,
 228, 276.
P. Sestius: 70, 71, 137.
Sica: 49, 184.
P. Silius Nerva: 187.
Spurinna: 273.
Statius: 38.
Sulla: see Cornelius.
C. Sulpicius Galus: 229.
P. Sulpicius Galba: 1.

Tarpa: see Maecius.
Terentia: 51, 57, 149.

- M. Terentius Varro: 45, 185, 237, 238.
Tertulla: 255.
Themistocles: 78.
Theophrastus: 134, 186.
Thermus: see Minucius.
Thrasylbulus: 162.
Tigellius: 240, 241.
Timaeus: 79, 134.
P. Titius: 279.
C. Trebatius Testa: 88, 102, 107, 182, 258, 264.
C. Trebonius: 163.
Tullia: 52, 61, 224.
M. Tullius Cicero: consular candidate, 4, 8; defense of Catiline, 8; oath at close of consulship, 20; relations with Pompey, 27, 48, 202; political policy, 35, 37, 63; contemplates suicide, 50; popularity, 62, 161; declines provinces, 107; itinerary to Cilicia, 109, 117, 122; military achievements, 122, 126, 128; provincial army, 123; policy in 49 B.C., 151, 152, 157, 169, 176, 201; governor of Campania, 153; favors to Caesar, 157; relations with Caesar, 165, 168, 169, 244; no part in Caesar's murder, 247; course in 44 B.C., 274; orations for C. Antonius, Thermus, Flaccus, 44; against P. Clodius, 24; post Red., 62; for Gabinus, Vatinius, Messius, Scaurus, 92; accounts of consulship, 80; de Re Pub., 94, 95, 116; de Or., 95; Brut., 186; Cons., Hort., de Fin., Acad., Tusc. Disp., de Nat. Deor., 236; Acad., 238; poetry, 94, 96; relations with Terentia, 65, 181, 184, 212; second marriage, 212; villas, 11, 13, 25, 61, 210; fondness for the country, 73; attitude toward gladiatorial exhibitions, 82, 84; philosophy, 132; wit, 188, 220.
M. Tullius Cicero (filius): 7, 52, 183, 184, 221, 259.
Q. Tullius Cicero (pater): 29, 31, 32, 33, 72, 87, 93, 94, 98, 161.
Q. Tullius Cicero (filius): 220.
M. Tullius Tiro: 149, 151.
Tyrannio: 73, 98.
P. Valerius: 56.
M. Valerius Messalla Niger: 63.
M. Varisidius: 278.
P. Vatinius: 93.
Varro: see Terentius.
P. Vedius Pollio: 138.
P. Ventidius Bassus: 281.
Verrius: 196.
T. Vibius: 284.
C. Vibius Pansa: 97, 191, 216, 280.
Volumnius Flaccus: 284.
Xenocrates: 20.
Xenophon: 79.
Zaleucus: 134.
Zethus: 208.

INDEX TO THE NOTES.

(The numbers refer to pages.)

- ab: introducing limitations, 3.
abs te: 6, 120, 144.
acta diurna: 113.
adj.: with proper names, 180, 259, 260. See also colloquial words.
adv.: in -im, 224; in -iter, 86; intensive, 67, 111, 167, 208, 258, 269; for predicate adj., 17, 104, 175, 179, 244, 246, 256; for attributive adj., 225, 264; with certain verbs, 89, 177, 199. See also colloquial words, phrases and syntax.
aliquis with numerals: 73.
alliteration: 1, 85, 227, 232.
an in interrogative answers: 177.
aposiopesis: 177.
apud: see colloquial phrases.
archaisms: ab and ex with names of islands, 225, 233; abs te, 6, 120, 144; adj. in -ensimus, 128, 259; comedim, 197; cuicumodi, 59; gen. plur., short form, 226; inermus, 285; isto, 167, 192; navi, 233; par with abl., 268; perinde ut, 208; pro eo ac, 222; proinde ac, 269; qui (abl.), 175, 223; 2d sing. in -re, 231, 232; reapse, 208; rusus, 180; sat, 241; si forte with subjunctive, 225; omission of ut, 180.
asseverations: 14, 74, 102, 172, 173, 210, 274, 286.
asyndeton: 115, 129, 147, 232, 246, 258.
athletic contests: 84.
atque adeo: 36.
boni (technical political term): 68, 197. See improbi.
bookmaking: 73.
calendar changes in 46 B.C.: 207, 208.
cena: 192.
certum scio: 179.
codicilli: 87.
colloquial forms: animus advertere, 180; conferi, 223; compounds of facere, 171, 223; licitum est, etc., 52, 224, 249; meme, 118; mi, 210, 272. See also crasis, syncopation, adv. in -im and -iter.
colloquial fut. perf.: 60.
colloquial Latin and Romance languages: 171, 180, 214, 272.
colloquial phrases: ad summam, 154, 168; age iam, 161; ain, 133; apud with acc., 123, 124; belle habere, 178; bene et naviter, 76; bene nummatum, 100; colloquial speech recognized by Cicero, 141; concrete expressions, 91; crede

- mihi, 37, 106, 121, 192, 208; de, introductory, 33, 46, 57, 216, 263, 281, 287; de lucro, 198; eadem (sc. opera), 193; esse capiti alicuius, 115; esse curae, 101; exclamatory questions, 19, 193, 211, 245; feliciter evenire, 239, 262; existimare, etc., 223; fidem recipere, 44; invidiam alicui facere, etc., 250; hoc habebis, 214; immo vero, 198; in with abl. expressing condition, 269, 288; substitutes for ire, 103, 168, 181; male de aliquo, 212; moriar si, 210; ne vivam si, 14; peream si, 167; πρὸσωπον πῶλεως, 216; Psacade natus, 168; quia after verbs of emotion, 232, 268; quicquid in buccam venerit, 214; quod, introductory, 242; quod ad aliquid attinet, 115, 228, 288; referre acceptum, 143, 289; res se sic habet, 285; τὰ μὲν οὖν καθ' ἡμᾶς τὰδε, 262; sic agam, 51; si tibi videtur, 226; si non est molestum, 81; tamen at end of sentence, 197; transactum est, 51; alicuius causa velle, 232. See also asseverations, popular expressions, play on words, salutatory and valedictory formulae, polite phrases, terms of endearment, questions.
- colloquial pleonasm: after dicere, etc., 46; double expressions, 171, 222, 223, 227, 260; hoc tempore, 226; nullo tempore, 261; quodam tempore, 226; mecum cogitare, 226; magis magisque, 260; mihi ante oculos versari, 57, 226; nisi si, 55; potius malle, 143; pronouns, 180.
- colloquial syntax: two acc. after verbs of seeking, etc., 142, 145, 180; attrib. acc., 171, 210; prolepsis, 171; assimilation, 231; adv. with verbs of hoping, etc., 89, 177, 199; acc. and inf. after postulo, 232; inf. after facere, 233; opinor (parenthetical), 115; praestare ut and ne, 261. See also adj. with proper names.
- colloquial words: adj. in -arius, 224; in -ax, 166; in -bundus, 214; ad in -im, 224; alius (= diversus), 285; animus (personified), 179, 231; apparate, 245; atque (in agreement), 256; bellus, 100, 115; belle, 140, 178; bellissime, 147; bucca, 215; civitas (= urbs), 180; concidere, 20; defraudare, 102; dum (enclitic), 278; ecce, 36, 137, 162; garrere, 214; gaudeo (in greetings), 178; homo, 71, 102; iugulare, 17; narrare (= dicere), 190, 210; negotium (= res), 57; nimium, 60; nisi (= sed), 118; novissimus (= extremus), 249, 250; novissime, 287; obtundere, 232; obturbare, 219; opipare, 245; oppido, 52; quam (intensive), 167; quisquilliae, 22; recipio, 44, 218; sane, 67; sane quam, 114, 222; satis (= valde), 208; scito, 8, 211; secundum, 234; sedulo, 53; sic (intensive), 111; subrostrani, 115; substantives in -a, 172; in -o, 139; in -tio, 114, 190, 197, 265; in -tor, 159, 199; susurrator, 115; vapulare, 115; verbs, compound for simple, 105, 167, 289. See also intensive adverbs, interjections, Greek words, hybrids.

